HOOVER WANTS ANOTHER TERM IN WHITE HOUSE

Spokesman Says of Course He'll Run.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—President Hoover's hat went into the ring today for another four years in the White House.

WALTER F. BROWN. [Harris & Ewing.]

It was hardly necessary to make the announcement, but Postmaster General Walter F. Brown did make it, somewhat unexpectedly, perhaps, as he left the White House after a consultation with Mr. Hoover, presumably on political matters, Mr. Brown being the President's chief political mentor.

"Of course he will run," said Mr. Brown. "The friends of the President feel that he ought to be renominated and they will take the proper steps to look after his candidacy in the various states."

Answer to Critics.

The postmaster general's statement was generally accepted by the politicians as Mr. Hoover's answer to the suggestions emanating from various groups of regular Republicans that the President, because of his unpopularity in the party, should renounce renomination and thereby open the way for the selection of former President Coolidge, Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, Senator Hiram Johnson, or some other leader more likely to inspire the enthusiastic support of the G. O. P.

The Hoover partisans are now supremely confident that nothing can possibly interfere with the virtually unanimous renomination of the President by the Chicago convention. Mr. Coolidge announced in a magazine article that he would support Mr. Hoover for the nomination and would not countenance any effort to draft himself in place of the President. Gen. Dawes no less emphatically has taken the same position with reference to suggestions that his resignation from the diplomatic corps makes him available for the nomination in place of Mr. Hoover.

Johnson Is Undecided.

Senator Johnson has not decided whether to enter the fight for the nomination against his pet aversion, Mr. Hoover. The Republican radicals of the senate, who yield naught to the Californian in dislike of the President, are daily urging Mr. Johnson to fling his hat into the ring and have been joined by a good many regular Republicans who visualize only defeat with Mr. Hoover but a chance of victory with Johnson. The senator, however, has returned to all appeals the answer that he is too much occupied at present with the investigation of the international bankers to think of politics. When the investigation is concluded he promises to give a definite answer.

The friends of the President are confident he will go into the convention with an overwhelming majority of the delegates. He will have in his vest pocket to begin with approximately one-third of the votes in the convention which will be supplied by the paper delegations from the rotten boroughs of the south where the Republican party exists in theory only.

Brown Rounds Up Delegates.

Postmaster General Brown, chief dispenser of patronage for the administration, has been rounding up the southern delegates for several months. It is the southern votes in the convention, invariably controlled by the administration, which make it a futile undertaking to deprive a President of a renomination, as was convincingly demonstrated in 1912.

What is worrying the Hooverites above all else is California, which Senator Johnson might conceivably wrest from the President in the primary. The loss of his own state by Mr. Hoover would be a serious embarrassment. Hence Mark Requa, the new national committeeman for California, is devoting no end of time and money to the construction of an organization that will assure the President the California delegation.

Illinois Worries Leaders.

Illinois and the thirteen other states with presidential primaries also are worrying the Hoover leaders, who realize that the President would be considerably embarrassed if he were

THREE ARE HELD IN MURDER OF RACKET FIGHTER

Find New Clew in Cleaning Death.

Three men were being held last night in connection with the murder of Benjamin Rosenberg, manager of an indspendent cleaning plant and outspoken critic of alleged racketeering among the organized cleaners and dyers.

The prisoners are Patsy Clementi, 19 years old, 909 Sholto street; Joseph Price, 22 years old, 227 South Lavergne avenue, and Harry Robbins, 26 years old, 4622 North Monticello avenue. All were taken to the Maywood police station to be confronted by persons who saw three men shoot Rosenberg to death last Monday night at 3d avenue and Green street in that suburb.

Seized Stealing Auto.

Clementi and Price were seized by Patrolman Thomas J. Torpy as Clementi was stealing a sedan owned by Roy C. Follett, 6529 Kenwood avenue. The same car which, incidentally, is an exact duplicate of one owned by Clementi's brother, Louis, had been previously stolen last Monday at 5 p. m., a few hours before Rosenberg's murder. It was found abandoned the following morning and restored to the owner.

In view of the double theft of the car and its resemblance to one owned by Louis Clementi, police took the machine to Maywood to be viewed by persons who saw the killers flee. They were unable to identify the car, nor did they recognize Patsy Clementi or Price as the killers.

Clementi and Price were to be booked for automobile theft. Search was continued for Louis Clementi, Capone lieutenant, against whom Rosenberg had signed a complaint of acid throwing last August and against whom he was to have appeared at a hearing Jan. 29.

Find License Number.

The third prisoner, Robbins, was arrested as the result of the finding in the slain Rosenberg's pocket of a slip containing a license number. Three hours before his death, Rosenberg had called on Lieut. Frank Johnson at the detective bureau to report the number of car he had seen circling his International Cleaners and Dyers' plant, 2810 South State street.

Upon being admitted to Johnson's office, Rosenberg discovered he had left the slip in another suit and promised to return with it next day. Sergt. Charles Reynolds of the coroner's staff found it after the inquest and the number was traced to Robbins.

The suspect admitted ownership of the car but denied any connection with the cleaners' strife. He declared he was at home the night of Rosenberg's murder, adding that he spent the two following nights in a west side hotel with his uncle, Al Robbins, who, he said, had a considerable interest in the dye industry.

Former Rosenberg Employé.

His uncle, Robbins revealed, was once employed by Rosenberg, and, being discharged by him, had gone to work for a rival concern, the Drexel Cleaners and Dyers.

Murray Humphries, Capone lieutenant and reported power in the Cleaners and Dyers' institute as well as the Dye House Chauffeurs and Dye House Workers' unions, is a partner in the Drexel concern. Humphries is already being sought and an order was sent out for the arrest of Robbins also.

Search was also started for Phil Mangano, brother of "Dago Lawrence" Mangano, west side hoodlum.

The Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday pledged its support to State's Attorney Swanson in suppressing gangster influence in the cleaning industry. It was announced that the services of the secret six would be available.

Epidemic of Flu Sweeps Britain; 412 Die in Week

LONDON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A sharp increase in the number of deaths from influenza in England was reported tonight. The disease caused 412 deaths in London and the larger towns of England and Wales last week, as compared with 240 in the previous week and 140 during the week ending Dec. 26.

TORNADO KILLS 8 IN ONE FAMILY; FIVE ARE INJURED

Trenton, Tenn., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Eight members of a family were killed and five injured, one critically, when a tornado ripped their farm home to pieces eleven miles from here tonight.

The dead:
MRS. P. W. RICE.
OPAL RICE, 17.
HAZEL RICE, 14.
EDITH RICE, 9.
P. W. RICE JR., 9.
HORACE RICE, 10.
A six months old baby.
ELSIE McDANIEL, 3, granddaughter of Mrs. Rice.

The injured:
ESSIE MAE McDANIEL, 2, another granddaughter who is not expected to live.
P. W. RICE, 45, broken back.
ILA RICE, 23, head injuries.
LUCILLE RICE, internal injuries.
MARY ANN RICE, 16, crushed leg.

Rice told nurses at a Dyersburg hospital that he and his family tried to hold their doors shut against the terrific wind.

"I had started to the barn," he said, "when I saw the dark cloud approaching. I ran back into the house and we decided that we would try to hold the doors against the wind.

"The real force hit suddenly, however, and the next thing I remembered I was trying to pull myself from beneath a beam."

RAIN FORECAST TODAY; SNOW AND COLD TO FOLLOW

Chicago's temperature clung close to the 40 degree mark yesterday while many eastern cities were recording the highest readings ever experienced in January and many western cities were shivering in extreme cold.

For the second day in succession the Chicago weather bureau missed fire in its prediction of "much colder."

Today's forecast was for heavy rains, to be followed by snow and cold. The heralded cold snap, it was said, had been delayed in its journey from the west by temperate winds slipping in from the south. Rains in Chicago last night were accompanied by thunder and lightning. Heavy hailstorms were reported at Libertyville and Mundelein.

Philadelphia yesterday had a maximum temperature of 72, Boston and New York, 68. These were all-time records for January. Washington's 76 was barely under the January record.

At Williston, N. D., the mercury fell to 14 below zero. Temperatures in other northwest cities ranged from 2 to 10 below zero.

A Very Heavy Fog Keeps Pastor Out All Night

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Rev. Charles Kelser, pastor of the Emmanuel Methodist Protestant church, returned home tonight after being missing for 24 hours. He said he had been lost in the fog and had walked almost to Wilmington, Del., and back.

Call Another Session to Cut State Salaries

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Gov. Emmerson today issued a call for a special session of the Illinois legislature to meet concurrently with the present special session. It will be convened at 5 p. m. next Tuesday.

Reduction of salaries of state and municipal officers appointed or elected for a definite term, and advisability of calling a constitutional convention, are outstanding subjects in the call.

By convening the second special session while the first still is deliberating, expenses of the second session will be kept at a minimum, Gov. Emmerson said. A second special session to consider the question of reducing salaries was suggested in a resolution passed by the house of representatives some weeks ago.

Speedy Action Is Urged.

Gov. Emmerson pointed out that the question of decreasing the salaries of these two groups of state and municipal officers must be decided now, if reductions are to apply to those officers who will be elected or appointed during this year or the early part of 1933. Under the constitution, the salaries of these officials cannot be changed during their terms.

Also, the advisability of calling a constitutional convention, for which there has been a demand because of the archaic provisions of the present state constitution, must be acted upon at this time, the governor said, if the people are to vote upon the question "within the near future."

Should the second special session pass a resolution submitting the question of calling a constitutional convention to the electorate, it would be voted on next November. Enabling legislation, setting up the machinery for the convention, and providing for payment of its expenses, would have to be acted upon at the regular session of the general assembly in 1933.

A Process of Deflation.

In the portion of the call dealing with the reduction of salaries, Gov. Emmerson declared that "during the last two years this country has been experiencing an economic change—a process of deflation following a period of inflation.

"This necessary readjustment embraces the falling of prices of all commodities, the lowering of values of invested capital, the decrease in returns from capital and the reduction of salaries and expenses in industry," Gov. Emmerson continued.

"It is of the greatest importance that careful consideration be given to reducing the cost of government and thus lightening the tax burden which, particularly at this time, rests so heavily upon the owners of homes and farms and other property.

Lists Archaic Provisions.

"Many salaried officers in the state and municipal government will be elected or appointed during this year and the early part of 1933 for a term of years during which term their salaries may not constitutionally be changed."

Regarding the calling of a constitutional convention, Gov. Emmerson said, "It is becoming increasingly obvious that the revenue and other sections of the constitution of Illinois are archaic and poorly adapted to the present day needs and conditions, and many of these changes could be considered with advantage together.

"If the necessary legislative action is taken within the near future," he continued, "the question of calling a constitutional convention could be submitted to the people of the state in conformity with the constitution at the November election in this year."

Asks 'Outside' Prosecutor in Honolulu Case

BY CLIFFORD GESSLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HONOLULU, Jan. 14.—James F. Gilliland, city and county attorney, today requested that "outside counsel" be engaged to prosecute Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and two sailors who are being held aboard the U. S. S. Alton on the charge of murdering Joseph Kahahawai, a young Hawaiian. Kahahawai had been accused of raping the naval officer's wife.

The prosecuting attorneys tonight announced that they will not have their case ready for presentation to the grand jury upon its organization tomorrow.

"We will not be ready until early next week," Mr. Gilliland said.

Judd Answers Charges.

Mr. Gilliland, in his statement indicated that the same "outside counsel" will be engaged to prosecute the four surviving suspects in the rape case, the first having resulted in a mistrial.

Gov. Lawrence M. Judd today answered to Secretary of Interior Wilbur charges of a house naval subcommittee that his lenience with accused rapists has encouraged sexual crimes. The governor announced that he will sponsor a bill providing the death penalty for convicted rapists in addition to a bill for reorganizing Honolulu's police department and divorcing it from politics when the Hawaiian legislature meets in special session on Monday.

"Whoever gave that report to the subcommittee was grossly misinformed," Gov. Judd said.

Admits Granting Clemency.

He admitted he had granted executive clemency to Ben Ahakeulo, native amateur boxer, accused of assaulting a Chinese girl and later held as one of the attackers of Mrs. Massie.

Monday's legislative program will probably include a proposal empowering the governor to remove the sheriff in charge of the prison without the consent of the senate. The prison board reports show that 77 convicts have escaped in the last five years, two of whom are still at large.

Ten convicts are being brought here in irons from a prison camp near Hilo on the isle of Hawaii. They escaped on Christmas eve after they had been left in charge of a trusty. The guards had taken a holiday vacation.

Circuit Judge Charles S. Davis today drew the panel from which the grand jurors will be named to act on the abduction and killing of Kahahawai. The drawing of 26 names from a list of 1,000 citizens included 10 Caucasians, six Chinese, five Hawaiians and part Hawaiians, three Japanese, and two Portuguese.

Receives Messages of Sympathy.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

HONOLULU, Jan. 14.—Mrs. Granville R. Fortescue continued to receive messages of sympathy from friends in the United States today. Some of them were:

Mrs. Eva Stotesbury of Philadelphia—"Dear Gracie: This brings you my heartiest love and sympathy, also my admiration and respect for your magnificent courage in this overwhelming misfortune. I would have done the same in your place and so would any good mother. If there is anything I can do for you and yours, count upon me."

Turner Johnson Mackenzie of Chevy Chase, Md.—"I read of your trouble this morning. My father, Representative Johnson, is doing all he can at the navy department. Is there anything else I can do? If so, I will be glad to hear in any way from you."

Grant Smith of the diplomatic corps at Washington—"Your friends stand with you."

Mrs. Cornelius Bliss of New York—"Love. Thinking of you constantly."

CHEER TRAYLOR IN DRIVE FOR 1932 VICTORY

Rip Bureaucracy and Hoover Regime.

One of the 50 Democratic "Victory fund" banquets held throughout the country last night was in Boston. Ex-Gov. Al Smith spoke. When he concluded, with no announcement that he was a candidate again, a listener arose and shouted: "Don't throw away that brown derby! You'll need it again, and it won't look so bad when you hang it up down in Washington."

Smith didn't reply.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

More than 1,500 Democrats from seven states were told by Melvin A. Traylor, head of the First National bank, last night that the Democratic party must not straddle on any issue, but must devote itself to getting the government out of business, to wiping out bureaucracy at Washington and its attendant tax burden, to restoring local control of local affairs and to trimming down national outgo to national income.

"Above all," he said, "the party must awaken in the American people a confidence in themselves which is now terrifically absent."

The occasion of the address was the victory fund dinner at the Stevens hotel, one of fifty simultaneous banquets held in 33 states. Democratic leaders, large and small, swarmed in to the Chicago dinner from all parts of Illinois, and groups were present from Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and Maryland.

Leaders Sound Keynotes.

News from other large cities indicated that Victory fund dinners brought out equally representative crowds.

In New York Gov. Franklin Roosevelt made a vigorous plea against abuse of the President. "I deplore," he said, "the tendency to blame all our present troubles on the President." Henry T. Rainey of Illinois and John W. Davis were speakers.

In Boston Alfred E. Smith in an address urged an outspoken plank for a frank showdown on prohibition.

In Washington Breckenridge Long was the principal speaker.

In Columbus Senator J. Hamilton Lewis was the keynoter.

In Miami Mayor Cermak told a thousand banqueters that a Democrat must be sent to the White House.

Abundance of Pep Here.

The Chicago dinner was given at the Stevens hotel. It was arranged by a committee of business and professional men, including some Republicans. There was an abundance of enthusiasm throughout the proceedings for the approaching campaign as the doctrines of present day Democracy were set forth.

Candidates were out in full force, and a long speakers' table was lined with men and women widely known. It was one of the largest political dinners ever held in Chicago.

Like a Nominating Speech.

As toastmaster, Mr. Traylor ripped off a terse speech which brought forth wild applause. It became almost a demonstration a little later when Jouett Shouse, Democratic national executive chairman and chief orator of the night, gave Mr. Traylor credit for originating the idea of the Hoover two billion dollar federal reconstruction corporation. Mr. Shouse's utterance sounded almost like a nominating speech, and the 1,500 banqueters responded with a roar.

"At a time," said Mr. Shouse, "when the American people were demanding some sort of leadership in financial affairs, Mel Traylor appeared before the national chamber of commerce and proved himself one man in his profession who had courage enough to tell the people of the real financial conditions.

"Later, before a senate committee, where muddled brains were too much in evidence, it was Mel Traylor who blazed the way to make possible the reconstruction corporation which Mr. Hoover recommended in vague terms. Leadership such as he offers is fit to fill any office in the land."

Honesty, Brevity, Clarity.

In setting forth his idea of what American men and women are expecting the Democratic party to offer them in this campaign, Mr. Traylor said:

"I believe the people want from Democrats in their platform, honesty, brevity, clarity. From the party leadership they want courage and human understanding.

"I believe the country is sick of meaningless statements and double language. It's time Democratic leadership told the people there is no magic remedy for the ills and evils of human folly.

"We trod the primrose path of extravagance and of almost criminal neglect of every sound principle of human conduct, from the individual to the government, and the individual was aided and abetted by the government and those responsible for its administration.

"We want the Democratic party to impress that fact on the individual to the end he may apply it in the conduct of his individual affairs and demand it of those in control of government."

Give Control Back to People.

Extravagance and waste coming from too much government in business and in private affairs, were touched on by Mr. Traylor in these characteristic phrases:

"We want the Democratic party to give back to the people control and management of their own affairs as was intended. Political units should manage their own affairs so long as they do not interfere with the rights of neighbors.

"We believe the greatest menace is centralization and bureaucracy of the federal government. It not only infringes on the rights of the individual but breaks his back with taxes to carry on its bureaucracy. The people want that stopped.

"We want no straddling in the Democratic party on any question. If it is bad politics to be honest, then the Democratic party does not deserve to win.

"We want the Democratic party to be frugal of promises and prodigal of performance. The people have lost not only faith in government but courage for their own affairs. If we do not awaken faith in country and faith in God, the Democratic party will not succeed."

Shouse Rips Hoover Régime.

Mr. Shouse, in an arraignment of the Hoover administration, said that for three years the Hoover cabinet has been a "pollyana chorus, singing 'just around the corner.'"

He quoted from attacks made upon Hoover back in 1920 and in 1928 by "the eminent Dr. Fess," Republican national chairman, "the sanctified Will Woods" of Indiana and "genial Jim Watson" of Indiana.

"These men who excoriated Hoover then," Mr. Shouse said, "now accuse the Democrats of 'smearing' him. The smear is from the Republicans."

Confidence that 1932 is a Democratic year was the main note of the night. The "Grundyized" tariff came in for a terrific lambasting.

"The Grundy-Hoover tariff was conceived in cupidity," said Mr. Shouse. "It has been more responsible for the continuation of the Hoover panic than any other instrumentality.

"Then there is farm relief. The Hoover administration took half a billion dollars of your money for farm relief and the farmers are infinitely worse off than ever, except a small group of California grape growers, represented by Mabel Willebrandt.

"Three Years of Failure."

"The Hoover administration has had three years with which to deal with the depression. Whether because of innate ineptness or because the strings of privilege have pulled them in the wrong direction makes little difference in the fate of the ordinary citizen.

"That administration had its chance for greatness and dismally failed. Where it should have been strong it has fumbled and compromised.

"Our party has the greatest opportunity of a generation. The victory is ours if we hold together.

"The only way in which we can obtain and retain harmony in our party is by realizing that neither all the wit nor all the sincerity resides with the particular group that represents our state of mind. This I believe to be true as to prohibition, as to the power issue, as to the tariff, and, most important of all, as to the identity of the candidate we shall present for the presidency."

Names of Leaders Cheered.

Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, and Wilson were acclaimed as types of leadership the Democrats have given in years past. Prof. William E. Dodd of the department of history at the University of Chicago outlined "The Historic Appeal of the Democratic Party."

But for the most part, the speech making was devoted to the present situation. Among the names mentioned which started the cheers and handclapping were those of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Al Smith, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Edward N. Hurley, Mayor Cermak, Mr. Traylor, and Michael L. Igoe.

Mr. Shouse declared that rumors of a Raskob-Smith-Shouse combine against Roosevelt, without mentioning the latter by name, are mainly Republican moonshine.

"It's mainly Republican dream stuff," he said. "Candidacies is a subject with which the national committee will not deal. We have no sentiment at headquarters beyond a desire to have nominated not only the best man but the man most certain to carry our banner to victory."

Prof. Dodd Speaks of Tariff.

Prof. Dodd dwelt on the tariff.

"At every critical turn of American history for 65 years," he said, "the country has turned to the Democratic party for leadership; and that ill organized party has put aside its smaller and self-seeking chiefs to advance men of great abilities: Samuel J. Tilden, Grover Cleveland, and Woodrow Wilson. Never in all these long years have the Democrats been able to command a majority for a second class leader. Only once in that period have the Republicans been able to put a first class leader in the President's chair.

"With the exception of eight years the unwise, corrupt, and corrupting policy of extreme protective tariffs has prevailed since 1864. No tariff policy is right or wise unless it is honestly aimed at the benefit of the majority of working men, in the fields as well as in the shops.

"That has not been the object of American tariffs. Today the farmers have been exploited to the point where they are so poor that they feed themselves, begin to make their own clothes, and kill their own meat.

"Half the people under a discriminatory system cannot buy industrial goods, and that puts millions of city workers out of employment."

Hear Davis via Radio.

A radio hookup brought to the banquet the address of John W. Davis, presidential nominee in 1924, delivered in New York. Mayor Cermak sent a message from Florida. Robert F. Carr, chairman of the local victory fund drive, was absent on account of an operation and his place was filled by Robert J. Dunham, a recent convert from the Republican party.

As a curtain raiser for the dinner Mr. Carr's committee gave a luncheon at the Palmer house, at which Mr. Shouse praised Chicago as a convention site.

The drive for the $1,500,000 victory fund is to wipe out the old deficit, pay the organization expenses of the last three years and give a fund of $500,000 to the next national committee for a "flying start" on the campaign. The Illinois quota is $106,000.

Al Smith Told Party Will Draft Him; He Maps Plans for Democratic Campaign

Boston, Mass., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Alfred E. Smith in a speech here tonight exhorted Massachusetts Democrats to support a constructive campaign to restore their party to power in November. He refrained from any mention of candidates, but at the end of his address heard a banquet guest declare the party was going to draft him as a presidential candidate.

Immediately after Smith ceased speaking, Daniel A. Gallagher, former United States district attorney, asked for permission to speak. He mounted a chair directly in front of the party's 1928 standard bearer and said:

"It has been said here that we should not ask you what your plans are. I say to you, go slow with your plans, because the party is going to draft you. Don't throw away that brown derby. You'll need it again and it won't look bad at all when you hang it up down in Washington."

Fails to Commit Self.

There was loud applause. Smith stood up for a moment as if about to speak, then bowed and took his seat.

In spite of his silence in relation to his future plans, it was learned that the former governor will not make any objection to the use of his name in state presidential primaries throughout the country. It was freely predicted tonight that his name will be used in the Massachusetts presidential primary next spring.

Speaking before a friendly assembly, Smith mapped out a campaign, including an open declaration for resubmission of the prohibition issue to the several states in the party platform, advocacy of a gigantic federal bond issue for the expansion and improvement of public works, and a consolidation of the forces of the party throughout the nation on an all-the-year-working basis.

Makes Plea for Funds.

In opening his speech, the former governor pleaded for campaign funds.

"The Democratic party," he said, "belongs to the rank and file of the people of this country and if they want it to accomplish something in their behalf they must finance it.

"Now, let me leave the finances for a little while," he continued. "The next subject that I want to speak about is the next Democratic platform.

"If there ever was a time in the history of the country and in the history of the party when we should give to the American people a cleancut, straightforward, honest declaration, not only of principle, but of what we intend to do if entrusted with the government of this country, it is this coming year.

Advises Against Faultfinding.

"Ninety per cent of our platforms in the past have been faultfinding. You read over the Democratic platform, and we condemn the Republicans for this, we condemn the administration for that, we spend 90 per cent of our time at finding fault with the other fellow. We don't have to do that this year.

"Let us change our attitude with respect to our platform and let us this year frankly tell the people what we intend to do and get away from this evasive language.

Urges Firm Liquor Stand.

"Let us be sure that we make a frank, an open and an honest declaration about what we intend to do with this prohibition law. We owe it to our people, we owe it to the country. The country is looking to the Democratic party for relief. There is no use of looking to the Republican party. The President is not in accord with his own commision. They do not propose to do anything about it, and they are hoping that we do not; so that they can carry on this double dealing, and this ducking and this dodging, which has been going on."

As for his solution, Mr. Smith approved the plan of National Chairman Raskob to "allow any state to get out from underneath the 18th amendment after a plan has been presented in that state and approved by it in a popular referendum."

U. S. Bond Issue Defended.

Mr. Smith defended his proposal for a federal bond issue to relieve unemployment.

"What is the federal government's remedy for unemployment?" he asked. "Every single proposal so far to help business requires the credit of the United States.

"The people of this country are entirely tired of inaction, of timidity and of vacillation. They are crying out loud for leadership. The Democratic party has the opportunity to supply that leadership the Republican party is unable to supply after their long tenure of office.

"Self-confidence is the greatest foe of depression. Let the American people pep up. Let them support this party of ours. Put us in position to give them the leadership they need, and we will come out of this trouble."

G. O. P. Rule Assailed.

Columbus, O., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Two middle western Democratic senators tonight blamed the Republican administration for the nation's economic troubles.

The Democratic party will ask the voters for victory in the forthcoming presidential election so it "can rout from power the syndicate of special interests that have taken possession of the government," Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois declared at a "victory dinner" here of Ohio Democrats.

American prosperity, he claimed, was destroyed by the raising of "a tax barrier against the nations of the earth under the guidance of a senator from Pennsylvania."

Senator Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio held the Republican administration at fault for failing to recognize the business depression until only a few months ago and expressed belief that it may be necessary for the federal government to go to the aid of local communities in solving unemployment relief problems.

DEMOCRATS' VICTORY BALL LED BY CERMAK AS MIAMIANS CHEER

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Mayor Cermak of Chicago went to the Democratic victory ball tonight and was applauded by hundreds of Dade county Democrats after. He spoke briefly urging all Democrats to band together to put their candidate in the White House. Later he led the grand procession with Mrs. Jimmy Walker. He appeared ill and weak from strain of the evening and left early.

LOS ANGELES HAS COLDEST DAY IN A YEAR; IT'S 36

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Los Angeles today experienced its coldest day of the year, the temperature falling to 36 degrees here during the day's minimum, while suburbs recorded thermometer readings as low as 25 at Pasadena, Santa Paula, and Anaheim.

The weather set the orchard heaters of 10,000 orange groves to firing and the city of Los Angeles and the ocean lanes 40 miles to sea were overhung by a low, black pall of smoke from the smudgers. The smudge clouds retarded navigation by lowered visibility.

ROOSEVELT ASKS CAMPAIGN WITH NO MUD SLINGING

Silent on Own Candidacy at "Victory Dinner."

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt sounded a Democratic "call to arms" for the presidential campaign here tonight at the "Victory dinner" in the Astor hotel. More than 2,000 persons were present to cheer the governor as he made a plea for a fighting Democracy. The governor carefully refrained from any direct reference to his candidacy for the presidential nomination, but spoke briefly of his attitude on several national questions.

The New York governor decried the tendency to blame all of the country's present troubles on the President with the statement that "he is perhaps the victim of a theory which holds that control of the Republican party reins entitles the holder to use that historic party for the purpose of personal gain."

Davis Calls for War Chest.

John W. Davis, general chairman of the campaign to raise a fund of $1,500,000, presided and the other principal speakers were Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, majority leader of the house, and Charles H. Sabin, chairman of the local fund committee.

In the opening minute of his address, Gov. Roosevelt said he desired a campaign without mudslinging. He said:

"Campaigns in the United States have at times been won by an appeal to prejudice, by an appeal to ignorance, by the picturing of principles in false color.

"Hand in hand with the campaign to spread knowledge and thereby in the long run to eliminate prejudice, we have a further task as a party—so to conduct ourselves that we shall never be made the object of the accusation that we have dealt our opponents a blow below the belt. I refer especially and specifically to many men and women in the United States, members of both great parties; men and women using the vehicles of conversation, of books, of magazines, and of the daily press who have forgotten their sense of fair play and at the same time the fact that their victim of the moment is the President of the United States. That they do this in jest or without thought is but poor excuse.

"I deplore the tendency to blame all our present troubles on the President. He and his associates have perhaps shown incapacity to contribute leadership in the solving of a national crisis, but the battle of the Democracy can never tolerate abuse heaped against the person of the President of the United States."

Warns Against Tax Boost.

Regarding the growing tendency to increase taxes, Gov. Roosevelt said:

"We see, for example, recommendations by the federal administration and by state administrations for the increase of taxes or the levying of new taxes on the same source.

"We have heard much in recent years about business in government, and yet I note that those who have been loudest in proclaiming that government should be conducted by business men have had neither the courage nor the intelligence to suggest that the whole taxing system of America be put on a business basis. The time has come when, driven by necessity, if for no other reason, America must face this task."

Explaining that "we are out to fill the war chest—not to choose a commander, direct strategy or map the battlefield," Mr. Davis devoted his time to the drive for $1,500,000. He said the organization already had received in advance "gifts including cash and pledges totaling $225,000."

The Illinois congressman, Mr. Rainey, discussed such varied subjects as "the budget deficit," "the unemployment problem" and "retaliatory tariff." Mr. Rainey said it would take three years to balance the budget "as the deficit will amount to two billion dollars next year," but that "it must be balanced."

"The taxes we are going to be impelled to impose are the most burdensome we have ever been compelled to impose in time of peace, but we must balance the budget," Mr. Rainey said, "in order to preserve the financial integrity of this, the richest country in the world."

Mr. Rainey charged the Republican chiefs with all of our present evils and said Republican policies and Presidents were responsible for the "distressing conditions under which we labor now."

ROOSEVELT INDORSED IN NORTH DAKOTA FOR RACE FOR PRESIDENCY

Valley City, N. D., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York was asked by North Dakota Democrats at their convention today to be a presidential candidate in the state primary election March 15.

As cheers rang through the meeting hall in response to declarations of leaders that the party would campaign militantly to elect him, the New Yorker was endorsed unanimously by a rising vote.

As a result of the action, Roosevelt will be asked to allow use of his name in the primary election. Such a request was prepared for immediate transmission to him.

Roosevelt Smiles.

New York, Jan. 14. — (AP) — Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt smiled but refused to comment when informed tonight that he had been indorsed as the Democratic presidential candidate by the resolutions committee at the party's North Dakota convention today.

Roosevelt's permission is required before his name may be entered in the state primary election, March 15. His friends predicted he would give that permission.

Indorsement for Byrd.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Harry F. Byrd, former governor of Virginia and vice chairman of the Democratic national committee, was indorsed for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States today in a joint resolution unanimously adopted by the general assembly of Virginia.

The senate passed the measure by a rising vote and the house of delegates, after unanimous action, stood and cheered.

STATE MUST PAY DEATH CLAIM.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The state Court of Claims today awarded $2,500 compensation to Lillie Miller, administratrix of the estate of Adam Miller, for fifteen years a stationary fireman at the state school for the deaf in Jacksonville. Miller was killed while helping to install a boiler at the institution's isolation hospital on Dec. 4, 1930.

CONTEMPTIBLE LIAR! ROOSEVELT DECLARES OF A STORY TELLER

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—"Contemptible liar!"

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt so characterized any person circulating a story that he had described former Gov. Alfred E. Smith as a "rotten governor."

"Any person who circulates a story of that kind is not only a liar, but a contemptible liar," Gov. Roosevelt declared.

The outburst occurred when he was asked about a story given circulation that in a conversation with former Gov. Cox of Ohio, Gov. Roosevelt sharply criticized the administration of former Gov. Smith.

HELD ON EXTORTION CHARGE.

John James Denin, 4327 Kenmore avenue, was held to the grand jury by United States Commissioner Walker yesterday in bonds of $5,000 on a charge of taking $600 from three speakeasy proprietors on the pretext that he was a federal officer.

A BUSINESS MAN SPEAKS HIS MIND ON INCOME TAX

Warns House Committee Against Overdoing It.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Business sent its first representative before the house ways and means committee today to tell what he thought of the treasury's plan for boosting taxes.

REPRESENTATIVE TREADWAY.

The witness was C. B. Clark of Detroit, representing the National Retail Drygoods association and seven other associations whose members employ a million and a quarter workers.

And the gist of what he had to tell the committee members was this—that the treasury plan, with its goal of a balanced federal budget by June 30, 1933, was attempting too sharp and swift a climb. He feared that business might not be able to make the grade.

Urges Fewer U. S. Jobs.

The running expenses of the government, he asserted, should be curtailed at least ten per cent. The number of government employés should be gradually curtailed, he declared, less money "frittered away" in useless reports and investigations, and a system of accounting installed that would treat capital items as capital items, and not current expenses.

"The taxpayers will not be satisfied unless government expenses are cut at least ten per cent," said Mr. Clark.

Taking the treasury estimates and deducting from them the sinking fund requirements and the interest on the national debt, he arrived at a figure of $2,976,000,000, which, he said, represented the operating expenses of the government for the fiscal year 1933. He advised a cut, therefore, of 300 million dollars.

Attacks U. S. Bookkeeping.

Asked later by Representative Treadway [Rep., Mass.] to explain how he would bring about such a curtailment, Mr. Clark came out with his criticism of the treasury's system of accounting.

"The chief fault lies in the fact that the government treats capital items as current expenditures," he explained. "For example, the new department of commerce building cost something more than 17 millions. That cost was charged to the taxpayers in the year the building was constructed.

"This is a continuation of a form of government accounting which is obsolete, antiquated, and unfair.

"The cost should have been amortized over a period of years, according to the agreed upon life of the building. Private business, in making its tax returns, is not allowed to charge off for the amortization of a new building more than two per cent in any one year."

Money Frittered Away.

"Instead of reducing wages you might better bring about a reduction in personnel. The money of the government is being frittered away in useless reports and investigations. I believe that a beneficial result would follow a policy of not replacing federal employés who died except in cases of real necessity."

He was emphatic in opposing the treasury plan to make the increased taxes on incomes retroactive on incomes of 1931. Nor did he agree with the treasury that the budget must be balanced by the close of the fiscal year 1933. He believed that the budget need not be balanced even by the end of 1934. The entire deficit existing next June 30 should be funded, he declared, and no attempt made to go back to 1931 for taxes to help meet it.

"The one thing business wants from this committee is quick action so it can know in advance what the burden is going to be," said Mr. Clark as a preliminary to a more detailed discussion of what he thought the tax program should be.

Not Fighting Increase.

"With the new rates not to go into effect until Jan. 1, 1932, the attitude of those I represent would be not to quarrel even if you raised the rate on corporation incomes to 13 per cent," he said. "We have no criticism to make against raising the surtax to a maximum of 40 per cent. In fact, I doubt whether we would have sound economic grounds for objection if the surtax rate went to 5 or 10 per cent above that."

Mr. Clark thought the maximum inheritance tax might be raised to as high as 40 or 45 per cent. He thought the present estate tax unfair and argued for allowing a year's leeway in fixing the time at which the tax was to be applied; he wanted the gift tax restored with rates analogous to the inheritance tax rates. He did not believe in lowering the present exemptions.

"Little Fellow" Hit.

The new taxpayers, he agreed with Representative Bacharach [Rep., N. J.], would be citizens who already were doing their "damnedest" to get along.

Mr. Clark opposed a sales tax and opposed the treasury plan to tax automobiles, trucks, and accessories, and to tax radio equipment.

"It is unfair," he maintained, "to pick out the products of these industries. They have suffered extremely and they need a push upward, not a retarding influence."

"Then where are we to get the money?" inquired Representative Watson [Rep., Pa.]. "I have been getting scores of letters, all of them saying, 'Don't tax me.'"

Witness Has Answer.

"But I believe that we do not have to balance the budget by the end of 1933," Mr. Clark answered. "The credit of the United States is sound enough so that we can spread our deficit over a longer period of years. There is no need to use pressure."

A discussion of the Canadian sales tax occupied considerable time.

"It would be absolutely impossible to transplant the manufacturers' tax of Canada to the United States, even with modifications," said Mr. Clark. "You gentlemen could make no greater mistake than to adopt it."

PROTESTS TAX INCREASES.

A country-wide citizens' campaign to forestall proposed increases in taxes and to force governments to reduce expenditures was advocated yesterday by M. H. Karker, president of the Jewel Tea company, in a letter to stockholders. He reviews the vast increases in public spending between 1913 and 1928, the mounting public debts, the successive increases in taxes and the prospective deficits.

"The news of the day is filled with forecasts of increased taxation," he warns. "This news is one of the most unfavorable of the factors in the business outlook. Your company pays numerous taxes to municipal, county and state governments and to the federal government. Its tax bills for 1930 totaled $358,832, which was over $1.25 for each share of stock issued. In spite of this situation, present indications point not to tax decreases, but to an increase of the tax burden now carried.

"It is important that every citizen express to members of congress and to members of legislatures his opinion of these tax proposals and of the present governmental situation. The imperative duty of every citizen to tell his legislative representatives what he believes and what he wants done was never more urgent than right now."

Daniels, Hurt in Georgia Auto Crash, Is Recovering

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Josephus Daniels of Raleigh, N. C., reached the bedside of her husband here today to find him comfortable, with injuries suffered yesterday in an automobile accident near Bolton, Ga. The former secretary of the navy and publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer suffered a fractured wrist, a cut on the forehead, and bruises.

CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

Walter Brown Says of Course He'll Run.

to make a poor showing in these expressions of the preference of the electorate. It came out during the day that Mr. Hoover's inclination is to stay out of the direct primaries, the explanation made in his behalf being that he regards such contests a wasteful expenditure of money, which should be avoided in these hard times.

The decision reached by the President and Mr. Brown is to leave the matter of Mr. Hoover's entry in the primary in any state entirely to the Hoover committee in that state. For example, he will not enter the first primary, which is to be held in North Dakota, March 15, unless the Hoover committee in that state should decide to file his name. And the North Dakota committee will not file the name of Mr. Hoover unless Senator Johnson or Senator William E. Borah, who is also being urged to run, should file in that state.

Hoover Invited to Chicago.

William D. Saltiel and Allen T. Gilbert of Chicago called at the White House today and urged Mr. Hoover to accept the invitation of the Hamilton club to speak at the Lincoln day dinner of that organization. They reminded him that he has not been in Chicago since his election and opined that a visit would help not only him politically but the Republican party in the central west. The President said it is doubtful that he can accept but that in any event he would send a cabinet officer.

YOUTHS HELD TO GRAND JURY.

Municipal Judge J. William Brooks yesterday held three 17 year old youths, arrested Jan. 8 while they were riding in a stolen car with a sawed-off shotgun, to the grand jury on charges of burglary. They are John Wegrzyn, 1651 West Huron street; Frank Kuffel, 1928 West Ohio street, and Clarence Murray, 1803 West Grand avenue.

BATTLE UNION'S BAN ON PRIVATE FUNERAL AUTOS

Order Arrest of Drivers Who Refuse to Move.

United opposition developed yesterday to the edict of the funeral car chauffeurs' union that privately owned automobiles may not be driven in funeral processions. Following the success of the union in limiting the cortége at the funeral of James J. McComb, veteran west side Republican leader, to two livery cars on Wednesday, State's Attorney Swanson, Police Commissioner Allman, and officials of the Chicago Funeral Directors' association, decided to give battle to the union.

JUDGE GENTZEL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Swanson and Allman were reported in accord on the policy of arresting any union driver who refuses to move his car in accordance with orders, no matter how many private machines are in the procession, and Swanson asked that police be assigned to funerals where trouble is expected.

Plan Report on Injunction.

The morticians—many of whose members are also in the livery business—were reported ready to make a report on Monday to Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel showing that the spirit of an injunction issued by him ha been violated.

Judge Gentzel's injunction restrained the union officials and drivers from "directly or indirectly molesting or in any wise interfering with any one in a funeral procession or in charge thereof." Such methods of enforcing the rule as suggesting to the clergyman that the mourners in private cars be advised to go to the cemetery apart from the other cars, or having the funeral director make the suggestion, are to be presented to Judge Gentzel for an opinion as to whether he considers them "indirect interference," the funeral directors announced.

Avoid Services at Homes.

Many funeral directors were said to have adopted the policy of advising the families of the deceased to have religious services in chapels in the various cemeteries, giving notice of the time, and having the friends congregate at the cemetery instead of at the house.

Edward Reilly, president of the Automobile Chauffeurs' Livery union, said his men were in no way violating the injunction or causing any disturbance at funerals. The injunction cannot compel the drivers to work, he said, and if they refuse to drive in processions with private cars there is no violation, he contended.

"We want to go along and do what is right," he declared. "We are law-abiding and decent and we are only trying to help ourselves and our brothers who are out of work. None of our men has done anything to cause any one embarrassment at any funeral, but at one funeral from the northwest side this week the people in attendance threw mud on the hearse at the cemetery."

Hoover's Baby Grandson Recovering from Illness

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Physicians tonight predicted that Herbert Hoover III., grandson of President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, would be back among his toys within a week after a serious illness from sinus infection. Four year old Herbert, called "Peter" by members of his family, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover Jr. He was reported recovering rapidly from an operation performed last Saturday.

TWO SLAYERS DIE IN CHAIR; ELEVENTH HOUR PLEAS FUTILE

Unaided by eleventh hour attempts to save their lives, Ben Norsingle, 19 years old, and John Reed, 26, Negro murderers, were electrocuted in the county jail early this morning. Both went to their deaths calmly, having given up hope of reprieves.

The Negroes were escorted into the death chamber shortly after midnight. Reed was placed in the chair at 12:01 o'clock, and Norsingle at 12:08.

Reed and Norsingle were executed for the killing of John Martin, manager of a meat market at 213 East 47th street. Martin, known as a friend of the colored people in his district, was shot to death last Aug. 3 when he resisted robbery. The Negroes were suspected of the crime immediately, but were not caught until several months later. They were tried before Judge Fred Rush and condemned to death.

Last minute efforts to save Reed and Norsingle were made yesterday before Justice Frederic R. DeYoung of the Illinois Supreme court, and last night before Judge Walter Stanton of the Criminal court. The former denied a petition for a writ of supersedeas. Judge Stanton refused to receive a petition demanding an insanity hearing.

SOCIETY ATTENDS MITCHELL GEM BANDITS' TRIAL

Jury Is Being Picked; Victims to Testify.

Residents of Lake county crowded Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady's court in Waukegan yesterday at the opening of the trial of four youthful members of the "42" gang, charged with staging a $150,000 gem robbery in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mitchell of Lake Forest last November.

Among the interested onlookers were the Mitchells, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, and Mrs. E. A. Cudahy Jr., who will testify as complaining witnesses. Mrs. Austin H. Niblack, whose husband just missed being robbed during the holdup, also appeared in court. She attended part of the morning session. The others remained for two hours during the afternoon. A larger representation of Lake Forest residents is expected today, among them Mr. and Mrs. William McCormick Blair, Mrs. De Koven Phelps, and Ralph Hines, additional victims of the holdup. It is understood that the testimony of all these state's witnesses will include full identification of the defendants as the robbers.

Jury Nearly Completed.

Selection of a jury to try the defendants—Frank Tufano, Nick Maentanis, Paul Ross, and Joseph Perrello—was the order of the day yesterday, and continued to 6 o'clock last evening. At adjournment eight jurors had been sworn and two others tentatively accepted.

The jurors impaneled are Charles Brya of Gurnee, Alexander Cedarstoff and Oliver Peterson of Zion, Paul Ferris of Antioch, Albert E. Meyer of Libertyville, and Mark Redlein, Andrew Flood and Charles Alden of Waukegan. The two tentatively accepted are Frank Hess and Robert Sigourney of Waukegan.

Defendants Smile in Court.

Ross, Tufano, Maentanis, and Perrello appeared at ease yesterday as they sat in the center of the court surrounded by bailiffs. They smiled frequently as their attorneys, Frank McDonnell of Chicago and Sidney Block of Waukegan, challenged veniremen.

Former Judge Claire C. Edwards is assisting in the defense.

The plea of the defendants will be alibis, it is understood. State's Attorney A. V. Smith and George McGaughey are prosecuting. At their request night sessions will be held, beginning tonight, so that the trial may be finished by Monday, when Col. Smith is to appear in the bank trial at Woodstock.

CAPTIVES TELL HOW BLAST HURT ARSON SUSPECTS

Three New Arrests Made in Indiana Inquiry.

Pete Popovitch and Steve Swaykowski carefully sprayed gasoline through the basement of the vegetable store of Chris Spiros of Valparaiso on Christmas eve, but their cotton fuse, saturated in ether, burned too quickly. There was an explosion, the men were severely burned and had to go on foot through the early morning hours to refuge in Gary, 22 miles away.

PETE POPOVITCH.

The story of the flight and the attempts of friends to hide the injured men from the police during the last three weeks was told yesterday by some of those arrested in connection with the investigation. Ten men and one woman are held as accessories in the operation of an arson and bombing ring in northwestern Indiana.

Popovitch and Swaykowski, wrapped in bandages, were found by police on Wednesday during a raid on the Knollwood filling station at the northwest edge of Lake Forest. Two other men were seized in the raid and four men and a woman were arrested in Gary some time after the raid. John Lancala, an attendant at the filling station, who was one of those taken in the raid, was released after the police failed to find any evidence to incriminate him.

Three more men were seized by the Gary police yesterday. They are Alex Sante, Michael [Zip] Stillanovich and Alex Necco, who have served several jail terms for bootlegging.

QUEBEC DEFEATS SEAWAY PROJECT; STRIKES AT U. S.

QUEBEC, Jan. 14.—The Quebec legislature today adopted a resolution opposing the immediate development of the St. Lawrence waterways. The vote was 54 to 7.

The resolution expressed the opinion the project was "untimely, that its enormous cost would be a burden to Canada, already heavily taxed, and that before developing international hydraulic power, which would be beneficial to the United States, it is preferable to improve that which is purely Canadian."

Moreover, the resolution said, it would be a "mistake to allow the United States government to develop with its own capital the purely Canadian natural resources."

YOUTHS HELD AS ROBBERS.

Charles Frieda, 20 years old, 921 Bishop street; Dominic Angelo, also 20, of 1411 Flournoy street, and Joseph Suero, 17, of 812 South Marshfield avenue, were held to the grand jury in bonds of $20,000, each in the boys' court yesterday on a charge of robbing Steven Stone, druggist at 4601 South Ashland avenue, on Jan. 7.

NORTHUP SNAPS HIS FINGERS AT JUDGE IN COURT

Prosecutor Warned After Clash Over Connolly.

First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup, who is in charge of the sanitary district graft conspiracy prosecutions, snapped his fingers under the nose of Judge Philip L. Sullivan in the Criminal court yesterday in one of the wildest court scenes within the memory of the old time court attachés. Judge Sullivan replied with the remark that the assistant prosecutor is "amenable to the power of the court and this court is going to exercise it."

The stormy scene ended a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of Timothy L. Connolly, who was purchasing agent for the sanitary district during the régime of Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the sanitary district.

Connolly was arrested in San Diego Cal., and on his return last week promised for a time to be the prosecution's most important witness against Crowe and seven of his former associates, who are on trial before Chief Justice Harry Fisher of the Criminal court. Judges James J. Kelly and John Prystalski are sitting with Judge Fisher in an advisory capacity.

Hearing on Writ for Connolly.

Judge Sullivan, on the motion of Attorney Cameron Latter, representing Connolly, was trying to determine whether the state's attorney's office had made a true return to the writ issued by him last Saturday. In the return filed by Assista State's Attorney Euclid Taylor, the prosecutor's office said that Connolly was not in the custody of the prosecutor's office.

The hearing occupied all of yesterday, thereby delaying the continuance of the graft trial before Chief Justice Fisher. At the conclusion of the testimony Judge Sullivan announced that he would take the matter under advisement.

Prosecutor Nothup, his face flushed, rose to his feet after the announcement of the court. He said:

"I want to know just what this proceeding is?"

A Query by Northup.

The judge replied that Mr. Northup was in the courtroom all the time and that he should be aware of the kind of proceeding involved. The prosecutor's face turned white as he said:

"Is this a proposed contempt proceding or is it something else?"

Judge Sullivan seemed irritated as he raised his voice to reply:

"You have been here all the time. I say——"

The Clash in Court.

The prosecutor interrupted and from that point on the judge and prosecutor shouted at each other. The court record of the proceedings that followed reads:

MR. NORTHUP—Can't your honor tell me whether it is a contempt proceeding or something else? We are in court, but I don't know what we are here for.

THE COURT—You don't?

MR. NORTHUP—No, sir. I don't know what we are here for. Isn't your honor willing to tell me?

THE COURT—You have been here. Isn't that sarcasm?

MR. NORTHUP—I have been here all day hearing these proceedings. There has been no paper filed, no nothing. We are not here on any sort of process or document that I know anything about, and I would like to know why we are here, sir.

The Judge's Explanation.

THE COURT—You came in here on the return of the writ, the traverse of the writ, and you know it. Now the question has been——

MR. NORTHUP—Let me know what your honor has in mind.

THE COURT—From the time that the return was filed the question has been as to whether or not the state's attorney had made a correct and true return in this case.

MR. NORTHUP—Do you mean to imply, sir, that——

THE COURT—Wait a minute, wait a minute. I don't care for that part. Now let me suggest to you that I demand respect in my courtroom. I don't care for your dogmatic or your sarcastic remarks at all. They do not impress me and I am sure they don't coerce and intimidate me.

At this point the prosecutor edged over from the corner of the bench, and when he was in front of the judge replied:

Snaps Fingers at Judge.

"And I don't care that [the prosecutor's fingers snapped so as to be heard throughout the room] for yours either.

THE COURT—That might be true, but you are amenable to the power that this court has and this court is going to exercise it. I say to you that this court will take this case under advisement and will notify you what the judgment of the court is, as well as advising your colleagues.

MR. NORTHUP—Does that mean that your honor is not going to find out or undertake to find out whether there is a false return to the writ?

THE COURT—I have explained my position in the matter and that is all there will be to it.

MR. NORTHUP—Very well.

The courtroom was packed with spectators during this scene. The court fans had expected some "fireworks" in view of the fact that Prosecutor Northup on the previous day had vigorously opposed Judge Sullivan's cutting of Connolly's bond from $190,000 to $30,000. The defendants in the graft trial and their lawyers were among those in Judge Sullivan's court.

Assistant State's Attorneys Harold Keele and Henry Seyfarth, who questioned Connolly while he was being moved through three states, were the first witnesses called. They said Connolly was in the custody of a private detective.

Connolly testified that he objected to being moved around.

The graft conspiracy trial is expected to be resumed again this morning.

SANITARY DISTRICT CUTS PAY BY 10%; WILL ASK U. S. AID

The sanitary district trustees voted yesterday to cut the pay of all the 1,400 employés of the district 10 per cent during the present year. The district's monthly pay roll is now in the neighborhood of $380,000, which would make the annual saving $456,000.

T. J. BOWLER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The move, President T. J. Bowler said, is motivated by the district officials' desire to conduct its affairs with the strictest economy, but was not made necessary by an anticipated deficit in revenue.

All nonunion employés will receive a straight 10 per cent pay cut. No change will be made in the scale paid union employés, but the former system of paying them on a monthly basis will be done away with, and they will be paid by the hour.

Mr. Bowler and Edward J. Kelly, chief engineer of the district, will go to Washington Sunday to make another plea for federal aid in carrying out the sewage disposal projects which the United States Supreme court has ordered finished by 1938. The work is now halted because of the district's inability to sell its bonds.

Opposes Delay for Chicago.

Columbus, O., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Attorney General Gilbert Bettman today asked Secretary of War Patrick Hurley to take no action toward extending the time for stopping the city of Chicago from diverting water from Lake Michigan until lake states are afforded a hearing.

Bettman appealed to the war secretary on being advised that the Chicago sanitary district was seeking an extension of the war department's order to reduce the diversion of lake water.

The United States Supreme court has ordered the Illinois city to reconstruct its sanitary disposal plant so that diversion of water from the lake will be stopped by 1938.

DRIVERS VOTE "FINISH FIGHT" IN TAXI STRIKE

Peace Conference Fails; 1,122 Cabs Idle.

The strike of 1,700 Checker cab drivers, resulting in 1,122 taxicabs being kept off the streets, will continue until the drivers get all they demand. This was unanimously voted last night by the drivers in a mass-meeting at Walsh hall, Noble street and Milwaukee avenue, following a report of their special committee on the results of a conference with company officials.

Victor Hirsch, a member of the committee, informed the men of the results of the conference. A unanimous vote of confidence was given the committee and a $1 per man collection taken to defray the expenses of what was termed a "finish fight."

Conference Is Failure.

The afternoon conference, held in an office at 208 South La Salle street, was attended by a committee of Checker Taxicab company officials headed by President Michael Sokoll, and the drivers' committee, headed by Abe Golden, a cab driver for 15 years; Hirsch, and Attorney Emmanuel Eller. Both delegations reported that no common ground had been found. The company refuses to arbitrate until the men return to work and the men refuse to work unless their demands are met.

According to Hirsch, the company officials refused any cut in storage prices. It was indicated, however, that if the men returned to work at once a possible cut in the charges, ranging from $5 to $15, depending on the service time, would be made.

Sokoll cited figures to show why the storage charges could not be reduced. He stated that charges for running the organization in 1931 amounted to $477,757, including $306,553.71 for garage expense and $254,742 for office administration.

Tell Cost of Insurance.

The officials stated that insurance on each cab cost $40 a month, or a grand total of $538,560 for the fleet for the year. In addition, the officials stated, during 1931 they incurred a debt of $47,000 for towing service, operating their own trucks. The drivers contend that, as they pay a towing charge of $3, the towing fleet should show a profit.

In answer to the drivers' charges that an excessive fee is charged for used cabs, which they are forced to buy, the officials stated the prices are as follows: $250 initial charge, $200 for body alterations, $300 to repair the motor, $50 for a 30 day guarantee, $50 for tires and tubes, $50 for finance charges.

Call Gas Profit Legitimate.

If the drivers could guarantee to pay cash as in New York and could buy in thousand car lots, new cars would be sold them for $1,400 instead of $2,265, officials said. As for the selling of gas in company garages, officials stated the profit from this was a legitimate source of revenue for the company.

The conference will be resumed today. Another mass meeting of the drivers will be held tonight.

Two moves were made during the day by the company. Approximately 20 cabs, held in private garages, were towed to the company garage. A letter calling on "loyal Checker drivers" to return to work at once and stating that the cost of the strike would be borne by the drivers, was sent to the strikers.

2 INQUIRIES LINK S. AMERICAN OIL DEAL TO MELLON

Charge Concessions and Loans Related.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The name of Mellon and reports of intrigue over an oil concession in far away Colombia resounded throughout two committee rooms, one at each end of the capitol, today, as the senate finance committee looked further into the state department's dabbling in the business of floating foreign loans and the house judiciary committee heard further evidence in support of the resolution to impeach Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon.

ANDREW MELLON. [Acme Photo.]

Stripped of financial and diplomatic details, the background of both hearings was this: Colombia had a credit with the National City company of New York, and wanted a payment on it; the Mellon controlled Gulf Oil company wanted the so-called "Barco" concession on oil properties in the Catatumbo field close by the Colombian-Venezuelan border. The state department intervened, urging that Colombia receive the payment. The department also intervened in the oil concession difficulties. The oil concession was granted to the Mellon companies. Colombia got the money. This was last summer.

Offers Letter as Proof.

The accusation made today by Representative Wright Patman [Dem., Tex.], author of the impeachment resolution, was that Secretary Mellon had been active in obtaining the "Barco" concession for the Colombian Petroleum and South American Oil companies, Gulf subsidiaries.

By way of proof, he offered a letter written by a Colombian citizen whom he said he would name if the committee desired. Representative Dyer [Rep., Mo.], wanted the name. Chairman La Guardia [Rep., N. Y.], lifted a warning hand. Knowing politics in Colombia, he said, the committee would have a better chance of finding the witness in good health if his name were not revealed for the present.

The letter described a statement said to have been published, Aug. 7, 1931, in two Bogota newspapers by President Enrique Olaya Herrera of Colombia describing a visit to Washington and his entertainment at a banquet by Secretary of State Stimson.

Tells of Agreement.

"There he [President Herrera] spoke with Mr. Mellon, secretary of the treasury," the letter quoted the statement as saying. "In the conversation the president of Columbia spoke about the situation of his country, to which Mr. Mellon told him that if he would arrange the petroleum business difficulties in Colombia, that Colombia would develop itself in a much better condition, letting him understand that he in turn would help Colombia in coming out of the crisis that it was going through. . . .

"Then President Olaya Herrara in virtue of this offer allowed a law to pass in favor of the 'Gulf Oil corporation,' which also favored Mr. Mellon. But after acquiring said law which favored Mr. Mellon's interests, Mr. Mellon did not fulfill his promise, or at least his insinuations, to President Olaya Herrera."

The Texas representative reiterated charges that "tens of millions of dollars" have been granted in tax refunds to companies which are among the Mellon interests.

Senate Committee Defied.

It was the oil concession matter, however, which interested the house committee, as it did the senate committee busy at the other end of the capitol, and confronted with a flat refusal by Assistant Secretary of State White to turn over the state department's correspondence relating to the "Barco" confession.

Mr. White and E. Freeman Matthews of the department Latin-American division were questioned for five hours by Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.], but both maintained that there was no connection between the department efforts in the case of the oil concession and the case of the loan.

Senator Johnson developed the fact that Americans hold approximately $100,000,000 in securities of Colombia or its political subdivisions which soon are expected to be defaulted because of an embargo on the export of exchange.

"You were endeavoring to straighten out differences that arose over a private loan made to the Colombian government by the National City bank," asked Senator Johnson, "but you made no efforts to straighten out a difficulty by Colombia and its subdivisions where $100,000,000 had been put into the pockets of Colombia by American investors?"

"That is correct, senator," replied Mr. Matthews. "There was nothing for us to do."

DAWES LEAVES FOR CAPITAL ON WAY TO GENEVA

Gen. Charles G. Dawes, retiring ambassador to Great Britain, left Chicago yesterday for Washington, where he will spend a few days before departing on Jan. 20 for Geneva and the arms conference, at which he will be head of the American delegation. The ambassador made no comment on current affairs except to repeat his declaration that he is out of politics. In reply to a question he remarked, "I repeat now that for the first time in fifteen years I am definitely out of politics." Gen. Dawes plans to return late in February or early in March.

Condition of P.M.Warburg, Banker, Slightly Better

Miss Pitts asks custody of her daughter, Ann, aged 9, and her adopted son, Michael, also 9.

Gallery and his wife are well known in Chicago, from which city they moved to Hollywood about 10 years ago. The little boy whose custody Miss Pitts seeks formerly was the adopted child of the late Barbara La Marr, actress.

GIRL JAILED FOR 60 DAYS IN PLOT TO AID ESCAPE

Miss Opal Kolin, 19 years old, who confessed that she engineered a plot a help her sweetheart escape from the county jail, was sentenced to serve 60 days in the Bridewell by Judge Rudolph Desort in the Criminal court yesterday.

At the same time the girl's confederate, Nathan Goldman, 22 years old, a paroled convict, was sentenced to a year in the Bridewell.

Goldman was found by a police squad on the running board of a taxicab parked near the wall of the county jail early in the morning of Oct. 5. He was holding the cab driver with a revolver. Taken into custody, he told the police that he was waiting for Michael Romano, a prisoner, to escape. Romano had already overpowered a guard, but was captured inside the jail.

The police were led to the apartment of Miss Kolin at 1645 West Jackson boulevard. She confessed the plot. Romano is now in the Joliet penitentiary serving a term of one year to life for robbery.

Fire After Mystery Blast Causes Loss of $10,000

Fire which followed an explosion yesterday morning caused damage of 10,000 in a one-story brick building at 1546-1550 West Chicago avenue. Most of the loss was suffered by Mandel Singer, owner of a shoe store.

RAIL PAY PARLEY STRIKES SNAG AS LINES HOLD OUT

But Leaders Hope to Open Conference Today.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

An eleventh hour snag yesterday caused a postponement of the conference of railway union leaders and a committee of railroad presidents which had been scheduled to open at 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

The conference, called in the hope of arriving at a friendly settlement of issues in which the roads are seeking a voluntary 10 per cent wage cut and the unions are asking for improved working conditions and relief of unemployment, was twice delayed yesterday, once in the morning and again in the afternoon.

Although it was announced last night that it was the hope of both sides in the negotiations to open the conference at 10 o'clock this morning, some doubt seemed to exist that it would begin even at that hour.

Railroads Cause Delay.

The delay was caused by the railway presidents, and Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and chairman of the presidents' committee of nine, stated it was caused by the fact that some railroads had not given a clear and complete authority to the committee to act on their behalf.

This explanation by Mr. Willard caused considerable consternation among the labor forces, who had understood that the committee weeks ago had obtained full authority from all the roads concerned.

Mr. Willard would not explain in what degree the holdout roads had failed to delegate authority, and he refused with evident irritation to answer a newspaper man's question as to how many roads were withholding full authority from their committee. He did say that he hoped the matter would be cleared up by morning, so the conference might proceed, but he conceded the possibility that it might be delayed until afternoon or even later.

Labor Ready to Proceed.

David B. Robertson, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association and general spokesman for all the railway labor forces, said last night that the unions were ready to proceed, and had been all day yesterday.

Yesterday morning Mr. Robertson announced that the meeting had been postponed until 2 o'clock, quoting Mr. Willard as asking for that delay because one of the members of his committee had been late in arriving. At 2 o'clock all the members of the labor group were assembled in the grand ballroom of the Palmer house, ready for the conference to open.

At 2:15 Mr. Willard appeared in the doorway of the ballroom and summoned Mr. Robertson to his side. They talked earnestly for a few minutes, and then, while Mr. Robertson went to inform his colleagues that the session was off until this morning, Mr. Willard made his explanation to newspaper men.

Rumors of Serious Snag.

With the lack of more complete information on what was holding up the railroad presidents, reports began to circulate about the Palmer house that serious difficulties had arisen which might disrupt the entire conference and cause the breaking off of the meeting altogether.

Mr. Willard and Mr. Robertson denied this, but that the matter holding up the conference was really serious seemed indicated by the fact that the labor and railroad groups held several secret conferences during the day.

The fact that these meetings were held was not given out to the press, but it was learned that Mr. Willard met yesterday afternoon with Mr. Robertson and Alvanley Johnston, president of the brotherhood of engineers. At this meeting, it was reported, Mr. Willard notified the labor leaders of the predicament of the presidents' committee.

Seeks Authority by Phone.

Mr. Willard then returned to the Palmer house suite of Charles E. Denney, president of the Erie railroad and a member of the committee, informing reporters that he was communicating by long distance telephone with the railroads whose delegation of authority was in doubt.

Immediately after the dinner hour Mr. Robertson called a meeting of the presidents of the 21 union brotherhoods.

From a reliable source it was reported that the snag in the ranks of the railway presidents concerned a question as to what action should be taken in the wage controversy in the event the conference fails of a solution of this problem.

While both sides—managements and the unions—are reported hopeful that the wage problem may be settled in this amicable manner by negotiations, it was reported to have been considered that in the event of failure, a method must be devised for proceeding according to law to settle the question.

The unions, it is reported, desire that if the wage question cannot be settled now, it should be submitted to mediation under the rules of the federal railway act, and that the mediation should proceed in a single proceeding to which all the roads and all the employés would be parties. The holdout railroads, it is said, have thus far withheld consent to this plan.

The final result may be determined today.

A 10 per cent cut in wages was voluntarily accepted by the officials, clerks, and shopmen of the Bangor and Aroostok railroad, according to an announcement made yesterday in the east. Some 500 employés agreed to take the cut, of which 325 were shopmen and 125 were clerks.

The Soo line announced that 284 men will go back to work in the locomotive shops at Minneapolis on Jan. 18. Ten days ago 167 men were reemployed in the coach repair department.

TEACHERS WANT SCHOOLS SHUT, LEADER ASSERTS

Bogan Submits His List of Pay Reductions.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The teachers desire the board of education to close the Chicago public schools at once, according to Charles B. Stillman, chairman of the central council of 23 teachers' unions.

That is what he had in mind, Mr. Stillman explained yesterday, when he criticized the school trustees in their meeting on Wednesday afternoon.

"I believe the board should close the schools and do it now," said Mr. Stillman.

"Is that the opinion of the representatives of the 23 union organizations?" he was asked.

"It is the sentiment of all of the teachers with whom I have come in contact," replied Mr. Stillman. "It is the board's responsibility, not the teachers'."

Myers Opposes Closing.

President Myers of the school board commented later as follows:

"I do not favor closing the schools. It is much better to have the children in school than on the streets. It is better that the teachers be working, earning money which they will eventually get, than sitting at home worrying about the situation. Besides, while working they have a better chance of getting credit than they would after the schools were closed and their earnings were shut off."

In an effort to reduce expenses President Myers sent a letter to department heads yesterday asking them to curtail expense for supplies. He asked specifically that the bureau chiefs eliminate part, if practicable, of the following requested equipment, for which the board has obtained bids:

	Estimated cost.
400 drop octagon clocks	$1,400
500 official indoor baseballs	2,500
400 basketballs	1,100
3,000 packages modeling clay	2,085
1,500 playground balls	1,075
300 pencil sharpeners	1,049
3,000 gross colored chalk crayons	3,750
1,500 gross penholders	1,455
325 dozen water buckets	1,100
700 pounds of sponges	3,066

Some of the trustees at the meeting questioned the number of water buckets ordered.

"O, you don't appreciate how many janitors we have," said Mrs. W. S. Hefferan with sarcasm. "Every one must have a bucket. We asked bids for only 3,900 buckets and we have about 2,000 janitors. While we have so many janitors, why deny them 1.9 buckets each?"

Superintendent of Schools Bogan has suggested to the trustees that the salaries of about 1,500 "bonus" teachers be reduced, starting next Monday, if the board adopts the 1932 budget as framed. The trustees approved of the date and indicate they will formally sanction this salary reduction.

Bogan's List of Reductions.

At the same time Superintendent Bogan submitted his list of the teachers whose pay would be trimmed. In three classifications he did not indicate how many teachers would be affected. His list follows:

No.	Kind of teacher—	Salary cut.
..	Principals, high schools	$ 4,650
27	Deans, high schools	8,100
20	Deans, junior high schools	4,000
233	Physical education teachers	58,250
228	Manual training teachers	57,000
232	Household arts teachers	46,400
71	Teachers of anaemic children	7,100
59	Teachers of deaf children	10,325
112	Teachers of crippled children	19,600
28	Teachers of blind, 18 teachers of delinquents, 22 teachers of pupils with defective speech	3,400
..	Prevocational schools	9,800
..	Parental school	600
20	Critic teachers	4,000
411	Eighth grade teachers	41,100
12	Teachers of tubercular children	1,200
1	Science teacher	100
6	Teachers of adults	600
4	Teachers in homes	400
9	Teachers in hospitals	900
	Total salary cuts	$277,525

School Auditor H. H. Brackett and his assistants were busy yesterday applying to the 1932 budget the superintendent's recommendations for reduced expenditures. The task will not be completed this week. The meeting of the board's budget subcommittee will be delayed until the figures are in shape.

Teachers Seek Hearing.

Some of the teachers whose salaries are scheduled for reduction are said to want to show the trustees that the proposal is wrong. Several deans have asked for a hearing, which the board will give later.

Not all of the deans are scheduled for salary cuts. The exceptions are said to be in the normal and Crane colleges. A few of the so-called "bonus" teachers, who receive extra pay because of the nature of their duties, also have been omitted from the salary reduction program. They instruct certain pupils whom the board is said to have difficulty in getting teachers to serve.

Assembly Move Seen Death Knell for Kelly Tax Bill

Both the state income tax and the Kelly plan bill will be defeated in the legislature if a plan reported yesterday is put in operation at Springfield next week.

HENRY SONNENSCHEIN.

If successful, the series of moves would junk these major planks in the program of the governor's tax conference, Chicagoans killing the income tax and downstaters refusing 102 votes to the Kelly plan for the revision of Cook county's assessing machinery.

As outlined by a Chicago legislator yesterday, the plan, if carried through, would begin with the calling before the house of senate bill 14—the Kelly plan—on Tuesday, consideration to be given it before the income tax. The house defeated its own Kelly plan bill at a session early Wednesday morning, largely through the efforts of a bloc of representatives aligned with Minority Leader Michael Igoe, Len Small, and the former Chicago city hall machine.

Representative Henry Sonnenschein, secretary to Mayor Cermak, who is now in Miami, told the mayor in a long distance telephone call yesterday that 102 votes can be obtained to put the Kelly plan into effect as an emergency measure, but Chicagoans who watched the roll call Wednesday morning do not believe the bill will get many more than the 80 votes it received then.

That strenuous attempts will be made to gather in these 22 additional votes was seen yesterday when various political leaders of both parties utilized the telephone and telegraph to lobby with downstaters who voted against the Kelly plan and talked locally with Cook county Republicans also tallied against it. Some representatives believe Gov. Emmerson will help in this enlistment.

Mayor Cermak told Sonnenschein, the latter said, that if senate bill 14 is killed and the schools close, a possibility which threatens, the blame would rest wholly on those opposing the relief measure.

If the bill is called Tuesday morning an attempt will be made to get 102 votes for it, but those who told of the plan yesterday say this will not be possible. The plan then provides that the emergency clause will be stricken and the bill called again to ascertain if 77 votes can be gotten for it. If those who favored it last Wednesday morning in the first roll call maintain their attitude this will be possible.

It would then be necessary to have senate concurrence in the amendment striking the emergency clause and the bill would go across the statehouse corridor for that permission.

The plan calls next for consideration of the income tax bill in the house. Chicago members are against it and the predictions are that it will not pass, inasmuch as representatives from the larger municipalities downstate have voted with Chicago in the past.

Reaching the senate the Kelly plan, according to the routine planned, would be treated purely as an emergency measure and those downstaters who aided in giving it a high vote of 48 to 1 last week would refuse to recede from their position and vote to return the bill to the house with a request that it pass the bill in its original state—with the emergency clause. Since this seems impossible now, both bills would go in the discard and the tax conference program would be defeated.

Unless some week-end conferences alter the situation, this plan will be followed, it is believed.

SUBURBAN HIGH SCHOOLS FACING SHUTDOWN FEB. 1

New Trier and Maine Appeal for Funds.

Unless funds are raised by the sale of tax warrants immediately, the New Trier and Maine township high schools will have to be closed on Feb. 1, taxpayers and parents of school children were informed last night at mass-meetings.

The New Trier school serves Wilmette, Winnetka, Glencoe, and Kenilworth. According to Jesse R. Gathercoal, president of the district board of education, about $335,000 will have to be raised to carry the school through the scholastic year, which ends on July 1.

Drives Already Under Way.

In all the towns except Kenilworth drives are already in progress, with the object of selling warrants. Kenilworth is expected to launch a campaign at once, Mr. Gathercoal said. He outlined the needs of the school stating that expenses were higher this year then in the past.

At the Maine High school meeting, attended by residents of Des Plaines and Park Ridge, it was asserted by C. M. Himel, the school principal, that only $37,000 of the $75,000 needed had been pledged so far. Of the pledges, $25,000 came from school teachers, who agreed to take tax anticipation warrants for half their salaries if outsiders made up the remainder.

Need Funds to Go On.

"There is no use trying to go on past Feb. 1," Mr. Himel said, "unless we have funds to finish out the year."

Pupils of the Maine Township school have established a savings bank, using the proceeds to buy warrants. In ten days, it was said, they had raised $100.

Evening classes at the Evanston Township High school are to be dropped in the next two week, and no summer school will be held, it was announced last night by Francis L. Bacon, principal.

More than 300 pupils are attending the evening classes, he said, but the financial situation of the school will not permit any unnecessary expense. About 750 students usually attend the summer sessions. The school will save $5,000 by the elimination of the evening classes and summer school.

Approve $100,000 Bond Issue.

The voters of Harvey, in a special election yesterday, approved a $100,000 bond issue by a vote of 1,122 to 1,021. The proceeds will be used for corporate expenses. It was explained that the Harvey schools had enough funds to operate through the year, but that the city government had difficulty in selling tax anticipation warrants for its own uses and it would be easier to dispose of bonds. Mayor Bruggemann said that several companies had offered to buy the bonds.

DEFAULT OF $297,000 TO BE MADE TODAY BY FOREST PRESERVE

The forest preserve board today will default on $200,000 in bonds and $97,000 of interest. The bonds are the third series within the last 30 days which the board has been unable to retire and the commissioners are faced with $65,000 in bonds and interest which fall due on Feb. 1. Salaries of employés have not been paid since Dec. 1 and the board has exhausted its funds in the county treasurer's office.

Charles G. Sauers, superintendent of the preserves, yesterday concluded attempts to interest La Salle street brokers and bankers in the board's predicament. He offered 1930 or 1931 tax warrants for sale and $1,500,000 in bonds which were authorized for distribution last January, but there were no takers. A conference with County Treasurer McDonough disclosed only that there could be no help from that source.

Considered until recently the soundest financially of all the local governments, the preserves, acording to Supt. Sauers, have been forced to the wall by the noncollection of 1930 taxes. There is not a tax warrant outstanding against the board and when a $2,000,000 bond issue was available a year ago only $500,000 was sold in order to save interest and sale charges. If the whole issue had been disposed of the present and future obligations could be met easily.

Du Page County Reports 7 Auto Deaths in 1931

Du Page county had 110 automobile accidents last year with 99 persons injured and seven killed, Sheriff John Hesterman announced yesterday. There were also five bicycle accidents reported to his office, one of which resulted in a death. The county had only one murder among its 80,000 citizens during the year, but three Chicago gang ride victims were left across the county line, the sheriff's records showed.

PARTIES' CHIEFS START BUILDING PRIMARY SLATES

Chicago G. O. P. Leaders Hold Harmony Parley.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Cook county Republicans as well as Illinois Democrats were discovered yesterday in the early throes of slate making for the April primary.

It was announced early in the week that the Democratic state central committee would meet this morning for preliminary steps toward the selection of candidates, but a peep into the Hotel Sherman headquarters revealed that the meeting already has taken on the proportions of a general state conference.

A greater surprise was the discovery of a Republican harmony meeting in the Conway building office of George F. Harding. Here representatives of all the local factions except the Deneen group were found discussing ways and means of getting together on a slate. In addition to the factional spokesmen representatives of the three sections of the city were present.

Agree on Need of Harmony.

While no definite steps were taken toward setting up the machinery for picking candidates, it was said following the meeting that all the participants were agreed on the necessity of a get-together movement. The leaders agreed to take up the subject with their groups and report back at a later meeting. Under these circumstances it is probable that no action will be taken at the county committee meeting to be held at the Hotel Bismarck Monday afternoon.

In addition to Harding the conferees were Charles A. Nowak, as Harding's associate in representing the south side; Robert E. Crowe and Eden T. Brekke, as spokesmen for the west side, and Ald. Oscar Nelson, representing the north side. These five constituted a committee selected at Springfield last Monday, when a large delegation of ward committeemen presented commendatory resolutions to Gov. Emmerson.

Other Leaders Attend.

That committee held a meeting on Wednesday and determined to invite the coöperation of other leaders not represented in the quintet. Edward J. Brundage and William H. Weber, a country town leader, accepted in person the invitation given by Harding. Leslie P. Volz appeared for Fred Lundin and Louis E. Golan represented the former Republican mayor. B. W. Snow, county chairman, was found to be in Washington.

Harding explained to this group of nine that the plan proposed would concern only the county ticket, that it would have no bearing on the governorship or other phases of the state fight, each participant and his associates being entirely free to do as they pleased in state matters.

Harding is with Omer N. Custer for governor, but he said he would not urge the conference to take any action in reference to the Galesburg man or any other candidate for that office.

Shouse to Attend Parley.

Jouett Shouse, chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic national committee, it was announced, will be an added attraction at the Democratic meeting this morning. Many downstaters who heard him speak at the Victory dinner last night will be in the morning gathering.

It is expected that all the prominent candidates for governor will be on hand. They are Probate Judge Henry Horner, State Representative Michael L. Igoe, Bruce A. Campbell of East St. Louis, and Clayton F. Smith. Campbell arrived last night and spiked as "propaganda" rumors that he may quit the race and run for the state Supreme court if Justice Duncan retires. V. Y. Dallman of Springfield, United States marshal under the Wilson administration, who has been discussed as a candidate for lieutenant governor or secretary of state, also is here.

Other Candidates to Be There.

Edward J. Barrett, the present state treasurer, against whom there has developed no opposition for the office of auditor, will attend. So will two candidates for secretary of state, Charles Power of Cantrall and Edmond P. Conerton of La Salle, and two possible candidates for state treasurer, John Stelle of McLeansboro and John C. Martin of Salem. Possible entries for attorney general who have been invited are State Senator Thomas J. Courtney, of Chicago; State Representative Truman A. Snell of Carlinville and J. LeRoy Adair of Quincy.

WOMAN ENDS LIFE IN HOME.

Mrs. Alice Mansfield, 72 years old, 2126 Gladys avenue, committed suicide yesterday by turning on all the gas burners in her kitchen range and then lashing her throat with a butcher knife.

15 MILLION DOLLARS FROM STATE EASES NEW YORK FINANCES

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The city's financial distress was in a measure relieved today by an advance by the state of $15,000,000 of the $22,000,000 due the city in state aid school funds.

The advance payment was made at the request of Controller Charles W. Berry, who made a hurried trip to Albany for a conference last night with Gov. Roosevelt regarding the city's financial plight. The conference lasted three hours and resulted today in the advance of the $15,000,000.

Further progress in the city's retrenchment program, made imperative by lack of funds, was reported today by Charles L. Kohler, director of the budget.

The board of education reported to Mr. Kohler that it could and would save $1,380,000 by deferring the appointment of new teachers and by holding up expenditures on school repairs and supplies not immediately needed.

Borough President George U. Harvey of Queens and members of his cabinet receiving salaries of more than $5,000 a year have voluntarily accepted a 10 per cent reduction.

Athens Cuts Salaries.

Athens, Ga., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—A 10 per cent reduction in salaries of all city employés, including the mayor and council, and recommendation to the city board of assessors that tax valuations be reduced 10 per cent, was voted at the first meeting of Athens city council for 1932.

LEGISLATORS TO EXPLAIN VOTES ON KELLY PLAN

State Representatives Anna Wilmarth Ickes [Rep., Winnetka], Emmett McGrath [Dem., Brookfield], and Frank E. Foster [Rep., Harvey] are expected to attend a meeting in the Western Springs school tonight to explain their votes on the Kelly plan to revise Cook county's taxing machinery. The bill failed of passage in the house early Wednesday.

Foster voted against the bill, which is advocated by Mayor Cermak and the governor's tax conference, on both roll calls taken. Mrs. Ickes and McGrath voted for it on the first roll call, when an effort was made to get 102 votes so that the bill might go into effect immediately, but both switched to the opposition when a vote was taken to pass the measure without the emergency clause.

The Western Springs school was closed last week, but citizens subscriptions put it in operation again this week.

HOUSE SAYS NO TO CITIES' PLEA FOR U. S. RELIEF

Reconstruction Bill Vote May Come Today.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The efforts of Chicago, New York and other large municipalities throughout the country to get relief from their frozen credit conditions through the administration's reconstruction finance corporation met final failure in the house today, when such a proposal was ruled out of order.

The same proposal was voted down in the senate Monday night. Submitted to the house today by Representative Prall [Dem., N. Y.], Representative Warren [Dem., N. C.], acting chairman, ruled that it was not germane to the reconstruction bill, which specifically provided for emergency financing facilities for "financial institutions."

Measure Nears Final Action.

With the death of the amendment the reconstruction finance corporation measure took its longest stride toward final action. Leaders regarded it as one of the most controversial items that could be submitted for inclusion in the bill and with it out of the way a vote early tomorrow was thought to be assured.

One other attempt at amendment provoked lengthy debate. This was the effort of the farm bloc to set aside a large portion of the 2 billion dollar capital of the corporation for special aid to the farmers. An amendment directing $50,000,000 of the capital to be loaned at the direction of the secretary of agriculture was ruled out of order. But an amendment providing an ultimate amount of 200 millions for farm relief was successful, as it provided that $50,000,000 of the original capital voted from the treasury be made available to the intermediate credit banks, agricultural credit corporations, live stock credit corporations, and agricultural and farmers' associations—all considered financial institutions.

Amendment Is Defeated.

By its own amendment, the Democratic majority of the banking and currency committee deleted the provisions in the house bill empowering Speaker Garner to name two of the appointed directors of the corporation.

With the reconstruction finance corporation bill under debate in the house, senate subcommittees took up two other bills in the Hoover program—the 150 million dollar measure for the establishment of a home loan discount banking system, and the 750 million dollar bill for the creation of a depositors' relief corporation to assist the liquidation of closed banks.

ROYALS TAKES STAND; DENIES KILLING WOMAN

Youth Asserts He Was at Home.

Vernon Royals, 17 years old, accused of slaying Mrs. Agnes Lavander on Feb. 17, 1930, took the stand in his own defense last night in the crowded courtroom of Judge Walter T. Stanton and denied that he knew anything about the murder.

VERNON ROYALS.

Questioned by his attorney, W. W. O'Brien, young Royals told the jury that he had never been in the neighborhood of the lonely Forest Glen railroad station, where Mrs. Lavander's body was found, until the police took him there. He also denied that he had a gun.

Went Home from School.

The murder occurred on a Monday night or early Tuesday morning. Royals testified that he had attended the Lane Technical High school on Monday and went home right after school. He said that he did not leave his home until Wednesday. Then, Royals asserted, he went to the home of a friend, whom he named as Jimmie Obermeyer, and on the following day the two boys hopped a freight train to Iowa.

That Royals was in his home at 5523 West Huron street on the Monday night was testified to by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Royals; his father, Rankin, and other defense witnesses.

Dr. Carl A. Vinnedge, 1101 North Taylor avenue, Oak Park, told the court that he went to the Royals home on Monday night to treat Mrs. Royals. He said that he saw Vernon and his brother, Jack, playing with a train on the parlor floor.

Boy Seen at Home.

Joel Christianson, 6110 Roscoe street, an employé in the insurance department of the Austin National bank, asserted that he had also seen Vernon at home when he went there on the Monday night to deliver some insurance papers.

In addition to his denial of the crime, Royals repudiated every detail of his purported confession, which had been submitted to the jury the day before.

Earlier in the day the defense received a blow to its contention that Vernon's confession was obtained through duress. He had told of throwing away the gun which killed Mrs. Lavander. Wilbur Kowalke, 5345 Lynch avenue, a pupil in the fifth grade, testified that he had found the gun in an ash can where Vernon had said he had thrown it.

4 WORLD'S FAIR BILLS APPROVED BY COMMITTEES

Senate Measure Up Today —Asks $1,725,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Legislation providing for participation by the federal government in the Chicago Century of Progress exposition was reported favorably by the committee in both houses of congress today.

JAMES T. IGOE. [Acme Photo.]

The senate commerce committee submitted a favorable report on the bill drafted by Senator Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.] while the house library committee reported favorably on three bills sponsored by Representatives James T. Igoe [Dem., Ill.], Carl Chindblom [Rep., Ill.], and Adolph J. Sabath [Dem., Ill.].

Up to Senate Today.

The senate measure, which is expected to be introduced on the floor tomorrow by Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.], chairman of the commerce committee, calls for a federal appropriation of $1,725,000 to defray the cost of government exhibits in the world's fair, and provides for the establishment of a Chicago world's fair commission to be composed of the secretary of state, the secretary of commerce, and the secretary of agriculture. It also authorizes the President to appoint a commissioner to actively carry on the work of preparing and arranging for the government's exhibits.

The house measure will be constructed from the bills prepared by Representatives Igoe, Sabath, and Chindblom, all of which are identical except that the Sabath bill provides that the commissioner to be appointed by the President receive a salary of $7,500, whereas the others, including the senate bill, authorize a salary of $10,000 for the official. All of the measures provide for a $1,250,000 appropriation.

Dawes Before Committee.

Representative Kent E. Keller [Dem., Ill.], a member of the house library committee, has been instructed by the committee to draft a report on three bills for submission to the house.

Rufus C. Dawes, president of the World's Fair commission, testified today before the house library committee during hearings on the measure.

PARIS AND BERLIN DICKER FOR DELAY IN DEBTS PARLEY

Fear European Chaos Will Upset Negotiations.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—Germany and France are negotiating for a postponement of the Lausan. conference on reparations, which is scheduled to open on Jan. 25, until after the French parliamentary elections and the German presidential elections next spring.

Both Premier Laval and Chancellor Bruening feel that the political oppositions in their respective countries are extremely strong now, and that after the elections the various parties will be more malleable.

Financial experts have also figured out that the Hoover moratorium expires June 30 and that this will postpone the next reparations payments Germany must make until December. Under the Young plan reparations have been paid in June and December. June, it is declared, will come under the Hoover moratorium, consequently the next reparations bill is not due until December, which financial experts say will give the powers ample leaway to postpone the conference.

WHAT DOES BERLIN OWE?

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

PARIS, Jan. 14.—European participants in the world war are drawing up varied reparations balance sheets with which to confront Germany when she faces the former allies once again at Lausanne on Jan. 25.

Confused from the beginning, the "reparations muddle," as it often is called, is anybody's guess and each country is preparing its own figures.

Since the armistice Germany has paid $4,829,000,000, if the figures of the reparations commission are accepted, but Germany maintains she has paid something like $9,119,000,000. The truth is that no official statement exists. The figures of the reparations commission, which died with the birth of the Young plan, never were official, but were accepted by the allies as the most accurate available.

Belgium Claims to Be Short.

On its side, the German government is busy preparing totals, and the indications are these will be considerably higher than $9,000,000,000.

The other two powers most interested—France and Belgium—contend they have not been paid enough to cover the actual damage to property by the German armies.

Belgium says she is still $100,000,000 short. Her 1931 budget shows $670,000,000 expended for rehabilitation of damaged areas as of Dec. 31, 1931, while only $570,000,000 was received from Germany as of June, 1931. This does not include any expenditure except for actual repairs to damaged property, the budget report says:

France Says She's Worse Off.

France says it is even worse off. Germany still owes the French $2,859,000,000 for reconstruction, the 1932 budget shows. As of April 1, 1931, France paid out in repairing war damages $3,915,000,000, and there remained $200,000,000 to pay.

This totals for all reconstruction expenses $4,115,000,000, but on April 1, 1931, only $1,256,000,000 in German cash and kind had been registered in the treasury.

Great Britain's policy since the war has been to ask in reparations and other debts only as much as she paid the United States in reimbursement of wartime loans.

Britain Gets 23 Per Cent.

Until the Hoover moratorium put a temporary end to all payments, the British Empire was receiving 23.05 per cent of all the cash and kind which Germany paid.

On the lower side of the continent Italy maintained a front during the war and as a result Germany has paid Italy about $285,000,000, three-fourths of it in goods, and most of that in coal.

The original claims of the allies, mostly of France and Belgium, amounted to a huge sum in the neighborhood of one hundred billion dollars.

The reparations commission asked the governments to lay their claims before it and when this was done the commission approved bills for slightly more than half that amount.

Germany protested and the commission set the total of all payments at $53,809,000,000.

The Dawes plan did not set a total, but the Young plan calls for payment of about $26,546,000,000, or half of the total which the original commission decided Germany ought to pay.

DEPENDABLE FOR 81 YEARS

SAYS HUGH GIBSON ASKED THE APOLOGY FROM BELGIUM

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—An inquiry was made today at the state department as to who asked Belgium for the apology for an article in a Brussels paper on "American Ignorance." The article attacked Senators Borah and Johnson. The apology was given by Foreign Minister Hymans to Ambassador Hugh Gibson.

In Washington today Undersecretary Castle, speaking for Secretary Stimson, said the state department did not ask for the apology but that Ambassador Gibson acted on his own initiative.

Uproar in Brussels.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Following the action yesterday of Foreign Minister Hymans in apologizing to the American ambassador for certain articles in the Belgian press, today's newspapers carried indignant comment on what they regarded as American interference with the Belgian press.

Apparently under the impression that the American ambassador had complained, the Gazette de Charleroi recalled that when Napoleon III. "intruded upon the liberty of the Belgian press he was flatly rebuffed."

The Nation Belge said: "There is no warrant for complaint by the ambassador from the country of liberty enlightening the world against the manner in which the citizens of this nation exercise their liberty to write what they think."

WILY BRIAND'S 'GOOD-BY' MAY BE JUST 'AU REVOIR'

Quits Quai d'Orsay Today —Itches for Battle.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 14.—Aristide Briand, resigned foreign minister, bade farewell to his old friends of the press and diplomatic service today, but more than one hint was dropped that it may be just "au revoir" after all.

Tomorrow it is expected he will pack up the last of his belongings and clear out of his luxurious quarters in the Quai d'Orsay which he has occupied almost continuously for the last twelve years. He will drive to Cocheral, his beloved country estate, to spend a few days there, but it is possible that next Tuesday will find him in his usual seat in the chamber of deputies pulling political strings with his old time zest.

Laval to Move in.

Premier Laval, who forced the old chief out of the cabinet in order to compensate the nationalists for the loss of the bulwark, the late Andre Maginot, minister of war, will move into the Quai d'Orsay immediately and install his family in the lofty chambers of the palace.

This was the first time Briand has been out of his sick room in more than two weeks. He walked unaided from his apartment to his desk to show newspaper men that reports as to the seriousness of his sickness were exaggerated.

In answer to anxious questions, the 69 year old statesman admitted that he is still homewhat feeble, but said the heart attack which prostrated him is over. It was learned that he was stricken on Jan. 2 and for four days was "really in a bad way."

Briand's consuming ambition now is to keep alive until the elections in May without completely giving up his political activities in the hope that a big victory of the left parties will sweep him back to office and give him a chance to fulfill the greatest desire of his later years by dying in harness.

Briand "Quite Cheerful."

In contrast with his despondency after his defeat in the presidential election, Briand was quite cheerful today. He actually seemed to be relieved that the long struggle to hold his job was ended. Although his voice trembled with emotion when he expressed his appreciation of the gesture of respect on the part of the newspaper men, he injected humorous references over the present situation and took some sly digs at his enemies.

Laval formally called on him later in the afternoon to try to persuade him to accept the job of minister without portfolio, thus assuring the cabinet of the support of his followers. Briand, however, turned this offer down completely. He took under advisement an alternative offer to become French delegate to the Geneva disarmament conference.

BAKER MAKES PLEA FOR U. S. TO ENTER LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Immediate entry of the United States into the league of nations "as a member on a 100 per cent basis" was urged at the annual convention of the League of Nations association here today.

War debts and reparations were characterized as "Arabian Nights Dreams," which "cannot and will not be paid."

Leading in the demand for the entry of the United States into the league of nations was Newton D. Baker, secretary of war under President Wilson, looked upon as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. In a letter Mr. Baker declared that the national interests of this country demanded its full participation in the affairs of the league.

ODD FELLOW DIES AT 99.

Pana, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Funeral services were held today at Maroa, Macon county, for William H. Bridgeman, 99, who died at the Illinois Odd Fellows home at Mattoon, and who was probably the oldest Odd Fellow in this state. Bridgeman had been a member of the order for seventy-seven years.

NO DISARMAMENT UNTIL OTHERS DO! BRITAIN WARNS

Says Her Army and Navy Are "Cut to the Bone."

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—"We have reached the limit of example. We can do no more. This country can make no further contribution to unilateral disarmament. Other nations must do their share. They must first follow our lead. There will be no real progress otherwise."

Great Britain's attitude toward disarmament was thus declared today by Capt. Anthony Eden, undersecretary of foreign affairs, at the launching of a nation-wide disarmament campaign under the auspices of the league of nations union. Maurice Jenks, lord mayor of London, presided.

Cites Britain's Lead.

Citing Great Britain's lead on the question of disarmament, the undersecretary declared that his country had reduced its army to little more than a police force; had drastically curtailed her navy, and had scrapped seven-eighths of her wartime aircraft.

"Although London is more vulnerable to an air attack than any other capital in Europe," he declared, "we rank only fifth among the world air powers. This is a discrepancy I trust the disarmament conference will succeed in removing."

Warns of New War Horrors.

Viscount Cecil emphasized the horrors of a future war unchecked by disarmament. Within a short period of time after the outbreak of hostilities, he asserted, more bombs could be dropped on London than were used in the whole of the last war.

Sir John Simon, foreign minister, was unable to be present, but he sent a note in which he warned the audience against entertaining too high conference.

J. W. WILKERSON, JUDGE'S FATHER, DIES AT AGE OF 88

John W. Wilkerson, father of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson died in a hospital in St. Joseph, Mo., yesterday while the judge was on a train traveling to his father's bedside. The elder Wilkerson, who was 88 years old, was a resident of Mount Ayr, Ia.

Judge Wilkerson started for St. Joseph yesterday when notified of the critical state of his father's illness. He had returned from a visit only last Monday. On reaching Creston, Ia., at 4 o'clock he learned his father had died two hours before. He remained at Creston for the night.

Mr. Wilkerson was born in Ohio. At 17 he enlisted in Benjamin Harrison's brigade at the outbreak of the civil war, served in several major engagements, and marched with Sherman to the sea. To complete his education he carried his textbooks on the battlefields. Following the war he moved to Iowa and became a school teacher. In 1895, after serving as school superintendent at Mount Ayr, he was appointed county superintendent.

Surviving Mr. Wilkerson beside his son are his widow and his daughter, Mrs. Kate Wight. Mrs. Wight's husband, the Rev. Dr. E. Van Dyke Wight, pastor of the Horton Memorial Presbyterian church, Middletown, N. Y., will officiate at the funeral services, which will be held at Mount Ayr tomorrow afternoon.

REPORT BANKERS READY TO RENEW GERMAN CREDITS

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—[Friday.]—(AP)—Renewal of Germany's short term credits, amounting to 4,400,000,000 marks [about $1,000,000,000] upon payment of 250,000,000 marks, was said by the Vossische Zeitung today to have been agreed upon by a committee of foreign bankers. The committee has been meeting with German bankers to consider the credits, which were "frozen" during the latter part of 1931 under a "standstill" pact.

The newspaper said the Wiggin plan would be adopted, under which 200,000,000 marks would be consolidated into five year credits bearing 6 per cent interest. The balance of the 4,400,000,000 marks would be renewed for one year on payment of 5 per cent interest.

Bail Jumper Rearrested on Charge of Robbery

Joseph Esposito, alias Mendino, a member of the "42" gang, was arrested yesterday and placed in the county jail on a robbery charge on which he had previously forfeited a bond. He was arrested as a result of telephone information received by Assistant State's Attorney A. C. De Witt of the bond department. Esposito is under indictment on a charge of robbing the Smith Ice Cream company, 2819 Harrison street. Louis Sinople was shot and killed by the police in the pursuit which followed the robbery. Esposito's bond was raised from $5,000 to $10,000 after his arrest yesterday.

6 Seized in Brewery Raid Held on Dry Law Charges

Six men, said to be members of the George Barker-Leonard Bolts gang, which has been competing recently with the Capone syndicate in the beer and booze business, were held in bonds ranging from $2,500 to $3,000 by United States Commissioner Walker yesterday on charges of violation of the prohibition law. A hearing was set for Jan. 20. The men, William Madsen, James Barry, Morris Kroat, Albert Olson, John Watzen, and George Johnson, were arrested by special prohibition agents under Eliot Ness in a raid on a brewery at 1712 North Kilbourn avenue.

"The way I figure is this: A fellow don't spend so much on himself but what he can afford to enjoy the best in smokes.

"Myself... I smoke Chesterfields. They cured me of rollin' my own. First off, you get better tobacco.

"I'm not knockin' the makin's... but it stands to reason Chesterfields wouldn't be where they are today if they didn't give you the finest tobacco. I like their aroma.

"Plenty of Turkish in Chesterfields... and you don't get that in the makin's. And there must be something about the blend, too... you can't get a milder, better taste... not anywhere!

"Got a right good opinion of myself, but I don't figure I'm as clever as those cigarette-making machines. Every single Chesterfield is round and filled right... beats anything you can roll yourself. Besides, it smokes cooler and lasts longer. I've tried both, so I know."

PORTUGAL FEARS REVOLT; BRITISH FLEET STANDS BY

Spain Refuses Demand to Expel Exiles.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Jan. 14.—The Spanish republic has flatly refused to expel or muzzle the swarm of Portuguese political exiles in Spain as demanded recently by the Portuguese government if was learned today.

President Carmona's Portuguese dictatorship fears, it is understood, that the Portuguese "outs" here are in league with elements in Spain which are anxious for an Iberian union. At the same time, communists in Portugal are said to be prepared for an uprising near the frontier which would virtually amount to an invasion.

As a preventive measure, most of the Portuguese army is mobilized at the frontier. And if the information is correct, it is for the same reason that the British cruiser, Centaur, nine destroyers of the Vimy class and many submarines have dropped anchor off Lisbon.

British Fleet Ready to Aid.

When, a year ago, a revolution against Carmona was brewing, a British fleet nosed into the Tagus river. This summer, when British envoys heard of a possible communist uprising, the Portuguese government was notified that his majesty's fleet was available.

Now, when the situation of "Britain's oldest ally" is much worse because its escudo, which was stablized against the pound just before that unit went off the gold standard, has suffered proportionately, the fleet has come again.

"Our glorious ally can be counted upon to throw her strength into the struggle against the dreadful communist monster that is threating the occident," said Carmona's newspaper.

"Spain Haven for Oppressed."

The British consul, commenting on the fleet's arrival, say it is to show British sympathy for Portugal's struggle against financial misfortunes. The finance policy of Oliveira Salazar, minister of finance, the keystone of the dictatorship which is running a country that occupies strategic positions on Britain's imperial sea lane, has met with constant approval from London.

Answering the Portuguese note, Spain took the position of France that a republic is the haven of all oppressed persons. Possibilities of a Pan-Iberian conspiracy for the invasion of Portugal from Spanish territory, is scouted, however, in government circles.

20 CUBAN CIGAR FACTORIES SHUT; 8,000 MEN STRIKE

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A general strike of Cuban cigar makers was called today after employers had refused to give the workers more time to consider a proposal to reduce wages. The number of employes affected by the strike, applied to more than twenty factories in Havana and other Cuban cities, was estimated at 8,000 to 10,000.

The Tobacco Manufacturers' association notified the unions yesterday of an intention to cut wages from 15 to 25 per cent, bringing them down to the prewar level.

100,000 Swedes Face Lockout.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 14.—One hundred thousand Swedish engineers and iron workers will be locked out on Jan. 24 if a wage dispute between the unions and employers is not settled by that date, the employers announced today. The unions have rejected the recent recommendations of mediators.

TAKEN FOR RIDE, BUT HE LIVES TO TELL ABOUT IT

Carbondale, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Three booze hoodlums tried to take Clyde Hornick, 24 years old, for a ride tonight. They did, in fact, but Hornick is living to tell the tale.

Hornick was in front of his home when a machine containing three men drew up. Two menaced him with revolvers. "Get inside," they ordered. Hornick obeyed. "This is your last ride," warned one of the men. The trio drove Hornick to the outskirts of the town.

"Now get out and walk," commanded the leader. Hornick obeyed, except he didn't walk. He ran. Half a dozen shots followed him. Wisely, Hornick dropped to the dirt as though mortally wounded. The gunmen drove away.

Hornick, suffering only from a bullet puncture in the shoulder, walked to the home of Police Chief John Parrish. He said the gangsters belonged to the "west side gang" in Springfield, and admitted he belonged to the rival "east side" gang.

Union Head's Son Injured; Denies Hoodlum Report

George Farmer, 25 years old, 1125 North 9th avenue, Maywood, was reported in a serious condition last night in the Oak Park hospital as the result of an automobile accident at 22d avenue and the Illinois Central tracks in North Riverside last Tuesday. He is a son of James Farmer, successor of Tim Lynch as secretary-treasurer of the Cook County Chauffeurs and Teamsters' union. Lynch was assassinated several months ago. Reports intimated yesterday that young Farmer was forced to drive his car against the railroad viaduct by hoodlums. He denied this yesterday, declaring a tire on his car blew out, causing the accident.

Chicagoan Is Found Dead by Road Near Lincoln, Ill.

Lincoln, Ill., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A body identified as that of Harry Brelsford, 53, a Chicago boat steward, was found lying beside state highway No. 4, three miles north of here, late tonight. Brelsford had been visiting relatives here. Deputy Sheriff William Schaffgenacker and Coroner E. C. Goff said they were unable to determine whether Brelsford was killed when struck by an automobile or died as a result of foul play.

BUSINESS, CIVIC LEADERS PLAN TO AID JOBLESS

Business, civic, labor and industrial representatives met yesterday at the Mid-Day club to organize a widespread plan to stimulate business in the metropolitan area. The gathering was called at the request of the governor's commission on unemployment and relief, and the joint emergency relief fund of Cook county.

It was agreed that the situation demanded institution of practical plans for the relief of the unemployed, and that new avenues for worker placement should be found. The conference decided to appoint a special subcommittee to devise such plans. George W. Rossetter, president-elect of the Chicago Association of Commerce, will head the committee.

Among those who attended the meeting were Mr. Rossetter, Robert I. Randolph, Victor Olander, Illinois of Labor; John Fitzpatrick, Chicago Federation of Labor; Oscar W. Rosenthal, Illinois Builders' league; E. M. Craig, Building Construction Employers' association; M. H. Bickham, emergency relief fund; Patrick F. Sullivan, Chicago Building Trades council; Robert C. Ross, Joseph K. Brittain, Britton I. Budd, Col. Edward J. Blair, and Gerhardt Meyne.

CHANCE SEEN TO ADD 5 CRUISERS, IGNORE NEW BILL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special]—Five new 10,000-ton 6-inch gun cruisers may be added to the vessels which the navy can build regardless of the outcome of the 616 million dollar Vinson bill. They would be added to the list for which only appropriations are needed before they can be built by simply substituting five 6 inch gun vessels for the 8 inch gun cruisers authorized in the fifteen cruiser bill in 1927, but which cannot be built as 8 inch gun vessels under the limitations of the London treaty.

GEORGE H. ROCK.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

That such a move was contemplated became known today when it was disclosed that President Hoover included an 8-inch gun cruiser in the group for which construction appropriations are asked for 1933. Investigation showed this action was taken after the navy had decided the authorizations were still good despite the bill required all ships should be laid down in 1929, 1930, and 1931.

Once Suspended.

Construction of eight 8-inch gun cruisers was suspended by the London naval treaty limiting the United States to eighteen 8-inch gun ships, only fifteen to be laid down prior to the 1933 fiscal year, when the sixteenth could be built. The law permitted laying down the seventeenth in 1934 and the eighteenth in 1935.

As only three of the eight suspended eight inch gun vessels could be laid down under the treaty provisions it was generally supposed construction of the other five eight inch gun ships would have to be abandoned.

Private Shipyards Best.

Rear Admiral George H. Rock, chief of the bureau of construction and repair, urged the naval committee today to arrange for constructon of a larger percentage of warships in private yards.

Testifying before the house naval affairs committee, he said his experience indicated that it was more economical to build warships in private than in government yards. He said that authorization of the Vinson bill woud aid the private shipyards industry and aid the unemployment situation.

Aviation Notes

The Rev. Father James Organisiak, pastor of St. Bruno's Catholic church, 4749 South Harding avenue, left yesterday over United Air Lines for Omaha, where he will fly on the first plane that system will send over its new air mail extension to Watertown, S. D., tomorrow. Father Organisiak is an inveterate first flighter, having flown on the first trips over the United system from Chicago to New York, to Dallas, and to the Pacific coast, and on the first Continental Airways flight to Washington, D. C.

Time saving for passengers flying into St. Louis is sought by a group of organizations that will appear before Postmaster General Brown in Washington on Jan. 21 to ask the designation of the Curtiss-Steinberg airport at East St. Louis, Ill., as an air mail landing field.

FLIVVER PLANE CALLED SUCCESS IN TEST FLIGHT

Test flights of the new flivver airplane designed by engineers of the Herren Aeronautical corporation, Barrington, were started yesterday at Sky Harbor airport. The plane's performance equalled the expectations of its designers, who expect it to create a sensation in the aviation industry. The craft is powered by a two cycle motor.

The plane was flown on its initial flight by George F. Fischer, manager of Sky Harbor, who said it had such stability that he was able to fly it "hands off the controls." Maj. R. W. Schroeder, who has assisted in designing the plane and motor, witnessed the flights and said they proved the two cycle motor finally has been adapted for use in aircraft. Automobile gasoline, costing about half as much as aviation gasoline, was used.

The motor is a four cylinder, 58 horse power, radial air cooled type, and has no valves, the pistons performing the functions of the valves. The motor is supercharged and the propellor is geared, so that it makes one revolution to every two of the crankshaft. Fischer said this gearing virtually eliminates vibration.

The craft weighs 475 pounds empty, is a two place, tandem, open biplane with a 24 foot wing spread and 19 feet 6 inches over all length. Its cruising speed is estimated to be 85 miles an hour, and its top speed at 100 miles an hour.

BARES TRAPPING OF RUM SUSPECT AT JURY HEARING

Offer to Dry Snooper Is Told at Trial.

Some of the finer points of stool pigeoning were illustrated in the mid-west booze conspiracy trial before Federal Judge Lindley yesterday by Peter Petijanski, a dry snooper.

Petijanski told with manifest pride how, on his own initiative, he stopped a stranger in the corridors of the federal building with the remark that it was a hot day and concluded the conversation by getting a confession that the man was a bootlegger.

The stranger was Joe Keller, a farmer living near Aurora, in whose barn the alleged alcohol ring stored some of its product. Keller's attorney contends that he was indicted by the grand jury on his own testimony after he had signed a waiver of immunity in complete ignorance of his right to refuse.

Poses as a Bartender.

"Keller was sitting on a bench outside of Mr. Anderson's office," said Petijanski, indicating the prosecutor, Daniel Anderson. "I said it was a hot day and then asked him what he had to do with the case. He said he was a witness, and I told him I was a witness.

"Then I told him I was a bartender, because I didn't want him to know what I was doing, and he said when he got through with that case he would put me on easy street. He said all they had on him was using his barn for storing alcohol, and they didn't know he was running alcohol to a little town on the other side of Gary. 'And they won't find it out from me,' he said."

Petijanski's conversation with Keller occurred when both of them appeared before the grand jury last summer. The witness said he was employed as an informer by the prohibition agents for two years and that he is now in the restaurant business in Detroit.

TESTIFIES BRIBE OFFERED

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The opulent opportunities of the coast guard in prohibition enforcement—how easy it is for a coast guard officer or enlisted man to grow rich from bootlegging graft—was explained today in federal court in Brooklyn at the trial of Vannie Higgins, gangster and boss booze runner, along with eight Long Beach policemen and seven civilians on an indictment for having violated the Volstead act.

The man who did the explaining was Chief Boatswain George M. Schellinger, commander of the coast guard station near Long Beach. He was a witness for the prosecution. He swore that a Long Beach policeman named Lawrence Hayes, one of the defendants, and whom he identified in court, went to him in November, 1930, and told him that a friend wanted to be introduced. Schellinger added that he met this friend of the policeman's, a man named Green, and that Green offered him $50,000 to close his eyes to liquor smuggling.

Offer $10,000 in Cash.

Of this amount $10,000 in cash could have been had at once, Schellinger said, the rest to be paid at the rate of $3,000 for every cargo of liquor landed until the $50,000 had been turned over.

Schellinger said he refused the offer. He identified some of the defendants as men arrested by the coast guard on Dec. 15, 1930. He said Green, who offered him the $50,000 bribe, had mentioned the name of no member of the booze running syndicate. He said he knew that rum running operations were heavy in the vicinity of Long Beach from September to Dec. 15, 1930.

Information that the department of justice pays citizens who tell of violations of the customs or prohibition laws was obtained by the defense today in the trial.

Describes Scene on Beach.

The second witness called was William Clurman, who described himself as the Long Beach representative of a heating company. He said that one night in September, 1930, he saw activity on the beach at the foot of Lafayette avenue. There were several trucks there and 12 or 15 men were carrying packages from a raft and loading them on trucks.

On the boardwalk, overlooking this scene was, the witness stated, Chief of Police Grossman, then in charge of the Long Beach police force.

Clurman was cross-examined by defense counsel. He said he saw Grossman through the window of his car, which was 200 feet from the boardwalk.

"Isn't it a fact," he was asked, "that you are attached to the customs division of the department of justice?"

Clurman admitted that he was an "under cover" man. He was not regularly employed, he said, but got paid for tips he gave of violations of the law.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste, and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

CLEAN UP BROADWAY OF RACKETEERS, CHEAP CROOKS, POLICE TOLD

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—"Gentlemen, Broadway needs cleaning up worse than any street in this town has needed it for twenty-five year. I am going to apply the vacuum cleaner!"

Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney thus announced to the newspaper men at headquarters this afternoon his intention to drive from the greatest amusement street in the world the cheap crooks, professional panhandlers, "guides" to vice resorts and 10 cent racketeers that swarm upon it from the Battery to Harlem. The crusade started tonight at theater time.

The commissioner's "vacuum cleaner" will be an efficient special squad of 20 plain clothes men who will sweep Broadway from 14th street to 59th every night between the hours of 7 p. m. and 2 a. m.

According to Commissioner Mulrooney, Broadway has become literally a swarming ground for grafters, panhandlers, shady guides, and beggars.

"There has been nothing like it," said the commissioner, "since the days when Grand and Chrystie streets were the parade ground of criminals, gyppers, and pickpockets and panhandlers."

Head of Inquiry Named.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—Assistant Attorney General Seth W. Richardson will conduct the special department of justice inquiry into vice conditions in Hawaii ordered by a senate resolution passed last Monday. His task will include a thorough investigation of the local police department, the Hawaiian court and parole system, and all other phases of the island law enforcement machinery.

In announcing the appointment today Attorney General William D. Mitchell directed Mr. Richardson to hasten to Honolulu and begin his investigation at once.

77 YR. OLD MINER FOUND GUILTY OF HARLAN MURDER

Mount Sterling, Ky., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—William Hightower, 77 year old coal miner from the mountains of Harlan county, was found guilty today of conspiracy to murder a deputy sheriff mine guard during mine troubles there. His punishment was fixed at life imprisonment.

WILLIAM HIGHTOWER.

The conviction is the second obtained by the state in the prosecution of thirty strikers for the killing of Jim Daniels during a gun fight between strikers and officers who were guarding a mine at Evarts, Ky.

W. B. Jones, secretary of the Evarts local of the United Mine Workers of America, was the other man convicted. He also received a life sentence.

Both men will appear Monday before Circuit Judge Henry R. Prewitt for formal sentences and rulings on their motions for new trials.

Hightower, a grizzled veteran of the Spanish-American war, took the announcement of the verdict without show of emotion.

BEER A CRIME? NOT TO AVERAGE MAN, MAAS SAYS

Gives Senate Committee an Example.

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The average American citizen won't kidnap nor counterfeit, but he will take a drink, Representative Melvin J. Maas [Rep., Minn.] today told the senate subcommittee holding hearings on the bill of Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.] to legalize 4 per cent [by volume] beer.

"There's not a man in this room," Representative Maas told the committee, "who'll go into his neighbor's basement and help him counterfeit money. There's not a man here who'd help his neighbor kidnap victims. But pretty nearly any man will go into his neighbor's basement and help him brew beer.

"That's because prohibition isn't a law; it's merely a legislative decree, and you can't legislate social progress before that social progress comes. In 200 years, perhaps; but not now."

Tells of Lost Temperance.

Representative Maas wants the return of beer, but he doesn't believe that will cure the present "hard liquor drinking custom." In the civil war, he stated, 90 per cent of the drinkers drank hard liquor; then came the temperance trend, with a 1919 result that 93 per cent of the drinkers consumed wine and beer.

But prohibition, he charged, swung the pendulum all the other way, with present statistics, he believes, revealing close to the 90 per cent hard liquor drinking of civil war days.

Recalling that "the most alluring promise held out to us by prohibitionists was the prediction that children would know nothing of liquor," the Minnesota representative remarked that "nowadays children not only know about liquor; they know how to make it."

Former Coach for Beer.

Representative Malcolm Baldrige [Rep., Neb.], who has coached football at Yale and Nebraska universities, pleaded for the return of beer to prevent the youth from "drinking this rotten whisky they get everywhere nowadays."

He is opposed to the return of the saloon or any of its derivatives, and warned the committee against permitting the distribution of beer in any way save through grocery store deliveries to the home.

Representative Baldrige, when questioned about the repeal of prohibition, said he was in favor of state rights.

MICHIGAN VOTERS TO GET NOVEMBER SHOT AT DRY LAW

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—It is now conceded, even by the most arid of politicians, that some measure for liberalization of the Michigan prohibition act will come before the voters at the November election.

Petitions distributed throughout the state this week by the liberal organizations—the Crusaders, the Michigan Moderation league, and the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform—are filling up rapidly wherever they appear. Many volunteer workers, previously not aligned, are helping to obtain signatures to the petitions which call for modification of the present state prohibition amendment to permit establishment by the legislature of a commission for liquor control similar to that now functioning in Ontario.

While the bone dry element is attempting to reorganize somewhat scattered forces through the medium of the allied campaigners, allied citizens, and allied business men, and is holding rallies at various points, working almost exclusively through the churches, it appears that there have been huge defections in their ranks. The meetings generally have been reported small.

DEFENDS KEEPING INTEREST, SAYING AL SMITH DID IT

Charge Sheriff Gained by Funds He Held.

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Sensation piled atop sensation today at a stormy public hearing of the Hofstadter legislative committee.

1. State Senator John J. McNaboe declared that former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, as well as former Sheriff Charles W. Culkin, had appropriated to his own uses interest on funds in his custody during his term as sheriff.

2. Former Sheriff Culkin refused to waive total immunity when called to the witness stand to be questioned about his disposal of $25,000 interest money. He was excused from testifying.

His bank accounts, however, were allowed to tell their own story. Read into the record they showed that over a five year period the total deposited in six banks and one brokerage house was $1,929,759.35. Then the bank accounts of the Monroe Lamp and Equipment company, a Culkin concern, were examined. They showed a total for five years of $5,549,458.88.

Friend of Walker Cites.

3. Samuel Seabury, counsel to the committee, declared that District Attorney T. C. T. Crain, if he wanted to, "could indict Culkin tomorrow and put him on trial."

4. State Senator John A. Hastings, close personal friend of Mayor James J. Walker, was cited for contempt by the committee, but obtained a legal stay from the Appellate division which blocked the carrying of the case to the courts.

Senator McNaboe's statement regarding former Gov. Smith was made in defense of Culkin, who had been charged by Mr. Seabury with embezzling $25,000 in interest money. The senator maintained that Culkin had not committed a crime because there was no intent to steal.

Brings Smith Into Picture.

"Sheriffs of New York county for a quarter of a century," he said, "have retained interest on funds in their custody, and claimed it as their right. One of them was elected four times as governor of this state, selected as the presidential candidate of a great party and received the largest popular vote ever given to a Democrat."

"Is he, because he followed a custom, to be accused of embezzlement?"

Senator McNaboe made a great point of the fact that the funds in question were those of litigants and not the regular public moneys of the county. He said there was no question that such interest money as accrued belonged to the city; it was either the sheriff's or the litigants."

Mr. Seabury threw an inferential doubt on the senator's statement that Gov. Smith had put interest money into his own pocket.

"I question the senator's historical references," he declared, "but whatever the fact of that, the custom of the sheriff over a quarter of a century has nothing to do with the issue of whether or not a crime has been committed.

GANGS WAR IN BOSTON; 1 KILLED AND 2 WOUNDED

Boston, Mass., Jan. 14.—(AP)—One man was killed and two were severely wounded tonight in what police believed was gang warfare.

The dead man was identified as Harry Davis, alias Brown, who lived at a hotel near the North railroad station. He was found at the wheel of an automobile in east Boston.

Jack Berger, 34, of Belmont, was found in Winthrop with two bullet wounds. He told police he had been hurled from an automobile.

Arthur D'Lucci, alias Fiori, who said he lived in New York, was found attempting to get into an automobile at the North station. He was suffering from wounds.

Jobless Editor Is Found Shot to Death in His Home

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 14.—(AP)—George Newman, 55, managing editor of the Louisville Herald-Post until it changed hands recently, was found shot to death in his apartment tonight. His wife said he had been despondent because of inability to obtain employment.

GANGSTER HELD AS CAR HITS 2 ON SAFETY ISLAND

"Bubs" Quinlan, Reputed Beer Boss, Is Seized.

Michael (Bubs) Quinlan, gangster and reputedly one of the leaders in the beer industry on the south side, was arrested by the Chicago Lawn police last night after an automobile he was driving struck and seriously injured two persons at 65th street and Ashland avenue.

The injured are James Borkovic, 45 years old, 6506 Justine street, and his wife, Julia, 42 years old. According to witnesses, they were standing on a safety island when Quinlan's car crashed into them. Borkovic, who suffered a skull fracture, was taken to the Englewood hospital. His wife, whose legs were crushed, was taken to St. Bernard's hospital.

Quinlan, about three years ago, was the target of rival gangsters. His car was riddled with bullets, but he apparently escaped injury. He is said to have been connected with gambling houses on the south side recently. At one time he was a business agent for a janitors' union.

Woman Is Hit-and-Run Driver.

Thomas Shea, 60 years old, 6408 Artesian avenue, a retired policeman, was killed last evening when he was struck by a hit-and-run motorist at 51st street and Racine avenue. Witnesses told Stockyards police that the car was a small and battered coupé driven by a woman. She continued northward in Racine avenue and made her escape.

Shea who was wearing his retired policeman's badge, was recognized by a number of persons who gathered at the scene. He was a widower without children. When he was retired from active duty last November he had been stationed in the Woodlawn district.

Seven Others Die.

This death and seven others in Cook county yesterday raised the toll since Jan. 1 to 49. The victims:

Mrs. Clara McEwen, 68 years old, of 1508 South 57th avenue, Cicero. Fatally injured early this morning when she was struck by an automobile at Canal and Taylor streets, where she was waiting for a street car. Her daughter, Cora, leaped to safety. Bernard J. Ryan, 32, 6765 Sheridan road, owner of a wholesale dry goods establishment at 300 West Adams street, was the driver. He was not held.

Frank Zuk, 42 years old, 6612 Cottage Grove avenue, a mechanic. Died in the Oak Forest infirmary from injuries suffered on Jan. 10 when the car in which he was riding skidded into a ditch at Central avenue and 147th street. Two other passengers were bruised.

Mrs. Bandina Hopkins, 35 years old, 5714 West Erie street. Died in St. Elizabeth's hospital from injuries suffered on Jan. 8 when she was run down at Iowa street and Western avenue. The driver was Edward Penwick, colored, of Fowler, Ind.

Simon Gorney, 30 years old, 1321 North California avenue. Died in St. Anne's hospital from injuries received on Jan. 10 when his car collided with another machine at Central Park avenue and Augusta street. Albert Gordon, 900 Belmont avenue, was the other driver.

George Anderson, 25 years old, 6554 South Winchester avenue, a salesman. Died in the Southwest General hospital from injuries suffered on Jan. 10 when his automobile crashed into a telephone pole at 57th street and Damen avenue.

Warren H. Childs, 63 years old, 2833 West Madison street. Died in the Washington boulevard hospital of injuries suffered on Oct. 27 when he was struck at Western avenue and Fulton street by a truck driven by Glenn Cowger, 180 North Le Claire avenue.

Mrs. Louise Rouse, 50 years old, 1400 East 76th street. Killed when she was struck at 77th street and South Shore drive by an automobile driven by George P. Tomasek, 5730 South Artesian avenue.

Leap as Train Hits.

Mr. and Mrs. August S. Stahl and the latter's sister, all of 215 South Villa avenue, Villa Park, leaped from their small sedan just before it was struck by a Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad train at the Old Mill road crossing in Lake Forest last night. Stahl, a druggist, killed his engine on the tracks.

TEACHER USES TAPE TO SEAL PUPILS' LIPS

Admits Boy's Charge; Inquiry Begun.

Charges that adhesive tape was stuck to the mouths of boy pupils in the second grade in the Central elementary school, Evanston, when they broke class room silence out of turn, were being investigated last night by school authorities.

The accusations were made by Mrs. Ralph Watts, 802 Monroe street, Evanston, wife of a garage builder, in letters to Frederick Nichols, superintendent, David Walker, assistant superintendent of school district 76, and Mrs. E. W. Treen, president of the Mothers' club of the Central school. In her letters, Mrs. Watts described the use of the adhesive tape gag as "barbaric."

Boy Tells His Mother.

According to Mrs. Watts, her son, Willard, 7 years old, complained that Miss Vivian Heuss, second grade teacher, had taped his mouth because he had talked in class. The incident she said, occurred on Tuesday, and came to her attention when she noticed smudges of dirt on either side of the boy's mouth. When questioned, he told of the taping, she said.

Miss Heuss admitted using the adhesive tape for disciplinary purposes, but asserted that no undue hardships resulted. Moreover, she said the treatment did not originate with her, but was prescribed by the pupils in her class. Before employing it, she added, she discussed the matter with other teachers.

Decided by Pupils, She Says.

"Recently I let my class decide what should be done with pupils who spoke out of turn in classroom," explained Miss Heuss last night. "Their idea was that paper should be placed over their mouths. That was done. I merely attached the paper with strips of adhesive tape. The paper was not kept on long."

Supt. Nichols questioned Miss Heuss. He refused to discuss the matter further than to say that the charges were under inquiry. Miss Heuss, he said, was considered an efficient teacher. No permanent harm had been done in any case, he intimated. It is understood the Mothers' club will consider Mrs. Watts' charges at its regular meeting on Monday.

1931 Tax Valuations of 5 Towns Go to Reviewers

The 1931 real estate revaluations in five country town districts were turned over to the board of review by the assessors yesterday. The books had been left open to the public for two weeks. Only a few persons appeared to look at them and no protests were made, said Charles E. Fox, director of appraisals. The towns are Wheeling, Northfield, Elk Grove, Barrington, and Schaumburg. The books comprise the second group which has been given the reviewers.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

MUSSOLINI ON THE DEBTS.

Mussolini, to whom is attributed an article on the debts appearing in the administration newspaper, Popolo D'Italia, has not added anything to the amenities or rationality of the issue. He proposes that Europe shall announce the accomplished fact that the debts are dead. Germany will not pay and the others will follow its example. The United States will be forced to accept the situation, meaning, evidently, that it will discover that the debts have been repudiated. There is added the suggestion that this country cannot face the stigma of being the only profiteer in the war and consequently its Shylock.

The statement no doubt was intended to woo the Germans for Italian advantage and to strengthen the Hitler cause in Germany, but these ethical and moral reflections upon the United States are the intolerable criticism which Americans will not endure. It is folly for Europe to give them official sanction. Private opinions will take their own course, but repudiation based upon moral reproaches and justified by opprobrium sanctioned by government will stiffen the American people to a complete contempt for peoples who borrow money and repay with slander.

A REPORT NEEDING EXPLANATION.

According to Brussels newspapers, the American ambassador has received apologies from the Belgian foreign minister for "recent attacks upon the United States government and President Hoover." The article for which the apology was made, as quoted in the dispatch published in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, does not refer to Mr. Hoover, but to Senators Borah and Johnson. It appeared in the Independence Belge, leading Belgian journal, and was entitled "American Ignorance." It is like much other comment in the European press. What interests us and should interest the American public is how the American ambassador came to receive the official regrets of the Belgian foreign minister. We cannot think they were volunteered, and, if not, we should like to know who authorized or commanded an official complaint by our representative. Is our government proposing to censor the European press, or is it preparing a precedent for state department censorship of our own press reports from abroad?

The Brussels report should be clarified. The American people intend to keep a free press. They do not begrudge it to other countries. The Independence Belge is entitled to say what it thinks of us, and any protest by an American representative, on his own initiative, which is unlikely, or by orders from the state department, against the free exercise of the right of comment would be indignantly repudiated by all intelligent Americans.

One of the sinister developments in our own country has been recent attempts by politicians and officials, even judges, to muzzle publicity. In our international affairs it has been tried with some success by indirection. We are approaching most important negotiations in which our rights and interests are seriously involved. The nation will assert its right to full and timely knowledge of what is going on, and it should be on its guard against any device to censor news or manipulate information.

PROMOTION FOR SIR NORMAN.

Sir Norman Angell, British M. P. and author, left some beguiling thoughts with the Council of Foreign Relations and the English Speaking union in Chicago. One was that Americans if they were truly wise would spend their money on automobiles and not on battleships, leaving the English, if they were so foolish, to stand the costs of a navy and the expense of patrolling the seas, a job they probably would continue to do and do well. If the auditors had been listening for it they might have heard a round of applause coming out of English past as far back as the days of Elizabeth at least. Sir Norman said that of late Great Britain's gold supply had been raided and the fleet had not prevented it and the gold of the United States had been raided and the fleet had not prevented it. It is probably unimportant that there were claims against the gold which navies are intended not to obstruct, but to protect, protecting the orderly processes of the world and the structure of trade.

There also have been raids on German gold attributable not to the flux of international commerce and finance, but to the fact that when Germany needed a navy it was not big enough. Great Britain then was patrolling the seas, and whatever hardships may have come upon the British people they have not included the burden of maintaining armies of occupation and of paying reparations to other peoples who stipulate the time and the amounts.

There's more than knighthood in store for the Englishman who can reduce the American navy. Balfour rated an earl.

UNEQUAL REPRESENTATION.

The state Supreme court holds that the congressional reapportionment adopted by the legislature last year is not in conformity with the law which provides that congressional districts shall be as nearly as practicable compact and contiguous and containing as nearly as practicable an equal number of inhabitants.

That the apportionment did not conform to these requirements is easily apparent at the first glance at the map. There is hardly a district outside of the metropolitan area that by any stretch of the words could be called compact and contiguous, and the discrepancy in number of inhabitants is flagrant. Thus the 5th district [in Cook] has 521,000 inhabitants, and the 17th 158,000. As Judge Shurtleff pointed out in the decision now affirmed on review, a citizen in the 17th district would have about three times the voting weight of a citizen in the 5th.

If there is to be any political equality among citizens of Illinois, such an apportionment of representation cannot be accepted. Equality of representation is an American principle which no pressure of political expediency should be permitted to abolish.

The apportionment rejected was governed by political expediency and not by the plain terms of the law. It was condoned because it was a closer approach to the law than the apportionment which has existed since 1911. That, too, was an apportionment which did not conform to the law and with changes of population has not even an approximate conformity. The inequality imposed upon the inhabitants of Cook and other counties has been a deprival of their political right and it has been imposed upon them by unequal representation in defiance of explicit law. This wrong may be continued, but the Supreme court has freed the issue from any respectable doubt and performed an important service to the state by asserting the validity of the principle of equal representation.

ANOTHER TRAGIC ERA.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia was annoyed at the Jackson day dinner of the Democracy when James M. Cox of Ohio asked the south to think of its own unhappiness under the federal coercion of reconstruction and call the "political ecclesiastics back to their pulpits" even as the northern Democrats had pulled the army and the carpetbaggers out of the harried states south of the Ohio.

Probably the irritant in the plea was the vividness of the analogy. The south seems to escape many of the manifestations of the Volstead act, but the nonconformist states of the north are overrun by a horde of dry dragoons who are without compunction or conscience. If Senator Glass were more considerate of the traditional principles of his state and his party and less devoted to the inconsistency of federal prohibition he would have agreed that Mr. Cox made a reasonable request. Mr. Cox has his system shot full of error in his ideas of foreign policy, but when he placed this domestic doctrine before his party he was asking it only for a minimum of loyalty to itself.

THE TRULY GOOD SENATOR BROOKHART.

Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart of Iowa says the newspapers have organized a racket against the Anti-Saloon league because they cannot get advertising from it. The good senator had been irritated at the session of the senate committee on manufactures. It is giving a hearing on Senator Bingham's bill to legalize the sale of a mild beer. Physicians have testified that such a beverage could not be intoxicating because a person could not get enough of it in his system to become intoxicated. Senator Hatfield was sure that beer drinking caused cirrhosis of the liver. Senator Brookhart was sure of it. Dr. William Gerry Morgan of the American Medical association asked him how he explained the continued existence of the German people. Mr. Brookhart explained that by retorting that the newspapers are racketeering the Anti-Saloon league.

This may explain how the Germans survive cirrhosis of the liver and keep their physical sturdiness, but there the miracle rests. No one could racketeer the Anti-Saloon league. Bishop Cannon, who sits at the committee meeting taking notes, may be offered as one exhibit of a first class resistance.

The truly good of this organization can more than take care of themselves. They have introduced a number of new practices into American politics, all bad, and that, considering how long the system has been operated by very competent citizens, is saying a great deal. Mr. Brookhart is one of the things which democracy produces and then must survive. Sometimes he seems to have the best of it. Viewing the country generally this might be said to be one of the times. The country may or may not survive. It will depend upon the vilability of the political type which grows hair on top of an oral cavity and relies for its popular charm on the decorations of a mandrill and the mechanism of a pair of bellows.

Editorial of the Day

POOR LITTLE YAP.

[The Boston Herald.]

There hasn't been a squawk out of Yap for some years and we presumed that everything was jake, as "Bossy" used to say, on that little fly speck of an island in the Pacific. But the league of nations permanent mandates commission [which is rather a formidable sounding organization for such a small job] is worried because the island's population has dwindled by one-fourth in the last decade and urges that somebody should do something about it.

Yap—not yep—if you are old enough to remember the world war, belonged to Germany, which ceded it to Japan as a mandate under the treaty of Versailles. The United States didn't like the idea, as Yap was an important meeting place for several Pacific cables and also had a wireless station. After several months of negotiations, during which Yap, as a handy three letter word, figured frequently in the headlines, an arrangement was reached by which American interests were protected. But evidently being a mandate hasn't agreed with the Yapians' digestion.

Yap has the fortune, or the misfortune, of possessing a name that once heard is seldom forgotten. This attribute is shared by such mouth warming places at Oshkosh, Wis.; Skowhegan, Me.; Yaphank, N. Y.; Walla Walla, Wash.; Medicine Hat, Alberta; Chillicothe, O., and Santa Claus, Ind. The residents of these communities may get tired of seeing strangers smile at the mention of the towns, but they should comfort themselves with the thought that such fame is enduring.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

NEW GUIDE BOOK TO WASHINGTON.

Washington, the capital of our great and not uninteresting country, is full of attractions for one and all. It is on the w. b. Potomac river, contains the residence of the President of this great republic, the Capitol building, where our congress and other eminent statesmen think up new ways of taxing us, and a great many costly palaces for all the various bureaus of our government. Inasmuch as our citizens paid for all these wonderful marble buildings there is no reason why they shouldn't walk along in the street and gaze upon them. They will then feel that at last they have got something for their money. Not much, but something.

As the tourist starts out on his sightseeing jaunt he probably will go first either to the White House, the Washington monument, or the Capitol building, lying so peacefully under its great dome in the dim distance. The rapid increase in the various government bureaus has compelled the giving up of all these buildings as well as those of the Freer library, the Smithsonian institution, the Lincoln memorial, and the Cathedral of St. Albans, for bureaucratic housing purposes.

Let us first wend our way to the Washington monument. This was originally intended as a perpetual monument to our first President, but the needs of the U. S. department of household cookery compelled that invaluable department of our government to take it over, and as you stand outside and look in the door you will observe that it has been fitted with many landings, so that the clerks can find places for their typewriters on which they indite their burning messages to the housewives of the country on how to fry eggs and whether the custard for the pie should be beaten or only spoken to firmly. Out of the windows all the way up the great tower bundles of literature are being continually thrown, which are picked up by endless lines of trucks and carried to the postoffice. It is not a good idea to stand around here, for being struck on the head by ten thousand copies of "Should We Continue to Call It Devil's Food Cake or Employ the Politer Name, 'Beelzebub Cake'?" is no laughing matter.

Now let us go to the great Capitol building. We will first enter what was once the senate chamber, but which is now occupied by the U. S. Department of Rompers, Nightlies, and How to Cure Toothache. This great department of our government, employing thousands and thousands of clerks, so outgrew its old quarters that it was obliged to take over the senate chamber and office building. In what was once the House of Representatives we find the Department of Social Science, Painting (Landscape), Portrait, House, Barn, and Woodshed), and the thousands of typewriters within are busy clicking instructions to the citizens all over this great broad land on how to paint their houses and barns to match the color of their horses, cows and chickens, thus making a harmonious and pleasing effect. Or, if they choose, they may paint their horses, cows, and chickens to match the house and barn. It is this elasticity of our great bureaus in Washington that has so endeared them to our taxpayers.

And now, dear tourists, let us elbow our way through the dense masses of officeholders who are employed (in a manner of speaking) in all the thousands of departments and bureaus of the government in this beautiful city, and visit some more of the centers of interest in our nation's capital. We will go to the lovely Mall, which was once a wide park, extending from the capitol to the Lincoln memorial. But room had to be found for the new Bureau of Marcel Hair Waving and Removing Warts from the Hand. As you observe, the Mall is now covered with temporary buildings devoted to this great department of our government and its work for the health and happiness of our people. When the bill appropriating eight hundred millions of dollars for this new bureau is approved these unsightly temporary structures will be removed to give place to a great marble palace, into which the new bureau will be moved, as will also the Bureau for Curing Hangnails and Winter Itch and the Bureau for Making Apple Butter and Red Flannel Shirts for Firemen. New bureaus are starting up every hour. Look, one is just beginning work over there. It is the U. S. Bureau on How to Clean the Pantry Shelves and Wash the Kitchen Sink.

Next, dear tourists, let us force our way through the seething crowds of department clerks to what was once the residential part of Washington. All the former residents on these three streets have been hooted out to make way for the great army necessary for the Bureau of Teaching Maltese Kittens to Drink Milk Without Slopping It All Over the Kitchen Floor. This is, indeed, one of the most important bureaus of our government, and the tons and tons of literature they send out on the subject you wouldn't believe. North of this, the next five streets are given up to the bureau presided over by dear Aunt Sammy. Ah, yes, we have an Aunt Sammy as well as an Uncle Sam, and Aunt Sammy and her thousands and thousands of assistants tell us each and every one those great truths which we as a people must know if we would preserve life, liberty, and the happiness guaranteed by the constitution before they began tying bricks to its tail.

For, dear tourists, what would life, what would liberty, what would happiness be if the government did not tell us we should water the geranjums every morning and capture the wicked moths in the clothes and chop off their heads with an ax? Who among us would think of the proper ingredients for an apple pie were it not for Aunt Sammy? We would start to make an apple pie and what would we put in it? Some would put gooseberries in it, some cucumbers, others cabbage or chopped hay. But Aunt Sammy sends us letters and circulars and cunning little booklets, and she tells us what to put in it when we make an apple pie. APPLES! That's it; Aunt Sammy knows, and so she tells us, no matter if we live in the woods of Maine or the great desert wastes of the far southwest, to put apples in our apple pie.

But, dear tourists, our day has ended, and we have not seen a thousandth part of the wonderful bureaus of our gracious and sympathetic government. These marvelous bureaus down in Washington simply tell us everything, except how to get the money to pay the taxes which it takes to support them.

TULAREMIA IN ILLINOIS.

A VERY good illustration of the customary heedlessness of people is supplied by the recent history of human tularemia in Illinois. In that state human tularemia is a rabbit-borne disease, and no other animal is responsible for human infection, so far as is known. This fact has been published repeatedly. Detailed information has been extensively circulated.

These stories have told of the seriousness of the disease and its considerable prevalence at certain seasons of the year. Some warnings have stated that the time of greatest prevalence was coincident with the open season for hunting rabbits. The stories have told how sick rabbits acted and which rabbits should not be killed; or, if killed, should be left out of the game bag. The danger of skinning rabbits, cutting them up, and cooking them has been given.

To add interest, the stages of human tularemia and its course have been given: How it was first recognized in Utah and, in that section, was called deer fly fever; how its prevalence was related to an epidemic among jack rabbits and some began calling it rabbit fever; how it was found in Tulare county, California, its cause was there determined and the name tularemia given it; how it was next discovered that it prevailed among rabbit butchers in Washington, D. C., and, finally, how it was found to prevail everywhere in America, at least everywhere that the humble rabbit supplied our sportsmen with opportunity for play and doubled as a by no means negligible source of food and raiment.

All this was told repeatedly, and yet—the open season for rabbits began Nov. 10. People began slaughtering rabbits that day. That night they were being skinned and butchered. The incubation period of tularemia in the human subject is about 7 days. About Nov. 18 cases of human tularemia were developing. By Nov. 25 the diagnoses were being made and the reports of cases were being received at the state health department. By Dec. 1 the state health news carried a story telling of the considerable number of cases of tularemia known to be prevailing in the state. They warned the people again to avoid killing sick rabbits and to throw away any game that acted or appeared sick before slaughter, or the carcass or organs of which did not look right.

In spite of all the prior warnings the disease had come on when the season was right, and the program of spread had followed as though it had been regulated by a clock.

PIMPLES.

F. W. writes: My 14 year old son is attending a very fine school. During the five days he spends there he consumes 12 apples aside from his regular meals, which are well balanced. In spite of this care he has several large and angry pimples.

1. Is this acne?
2. Is it caused by infection?
3. How long does the adolescent youth have the right and privilege of parading this scarred banner of approaching manhood?
4. Is acne, like hard times, eternal in its malignant influence, or will it succumb to scientific treatment?
5. If so, what treatment would you suggest?

REPLY.

1. Yes.
2. Yes, but back of the infection is accumulation of grease and dirt in the grease glands—blackheads.
3. Some never get too old to indulge. Married men do not have pimples, as a rule. After a man commences to shave he seldom has pimples on the shaved areas.
4. But pimples and hard times are curable In fact, both are self-limited—hard times always, pimples usually.
5. If the grease glands all over the face are kept well emptied pimples will disappear and stay away.

SEEDS AND APPENDICITIS.

C. S. writes: Are grapeseeds or blackberries liable to cause appendicitis?

REPLY.

No.

TEMPERATURE FOR OFFICE.

H. I. writes: What is the correct temperature for an office?

REPLY.

Seventy, as a rule. If the floor is warm, and there are not many drafts, 68 is a better temperature.

BANK STOCKHOLDER.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In 1929 I bought two shares of stock from a bank which never paid dividends. Later this bank consolidated with another and the name changed. As a small stockholder [1] I didn't sign any proxy which the official tried to persuade me to do. 2. I tried to sell my claim to them at a loss, which they agreed, but never bought. This bank did business only a short time after the merger and was closed. 3. Am I liable inasmuch as my stock wasn't in the new name of the bank? 4. I understand they're starting court proceedings to collect from the stockholders. To what extent would each be liable? 5. After the court hearing what moves could they make to collect? 6. Can my wages be garnisheed? 7. Could they interfere with a joint bank account of a near relative and myself? 8. What other legal steps can they take? 9. What would be a wise thing to do in such a case?

J. L. B.

1. The mere fact that you did not sign a proxy would affect only the voting of your stock and would not necessarily affect the merger.
2. It is not clear what claim you refer to.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

This nation has had other serious financial depressions, as the following excerpts from The Tribune files reveal. Each of these periods of hard times has been followed by periods of great prosperity.

New York, Oct. 15.—A financial crisis, equal in its disastrous consequences to stocks to that which began on Sept. 18, seemed to be impending over Wall street. The depression exceeded that of any day since the reopening of the exchange on Sept. 29. Prominent among those whose failure was rumored were a number of Vanderbilt brokers. Many of the Vanderbilt stocks were hard hit. The primary cause of the panicky feeling was the inability of Commodore Vanderbilt to sustain the prices of his particular stocks. It is also reported that he is so pressed for money that he will not be able to pay the New York Central dividend due tomorrow. The house of Burger, Hulbert & Levingston suspended. Among the stocks which fell were Western Union from 57½ to 48, Lake Shore from 64 to 60, New York Central from 88¼ to 83¾, Rock Island from 88 to 80½, and Northwestern from 40 to 31½.

1893.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—The Trade and Labor assembly adopted resolutions seeking work for the thousands of unemployed. One was an appeal to federal authorities and the other to the state. The former recites that "Whereas, the present condition of the industrial field requires that every avenue should be opened for the employment of the unemployed," President Cleveland is urged to hasten appointments so reconstruction of the federal building can be begun at once to make work. The other resolution states that "Whereas, there are thousands and thousands of unemployed in this city and state," the governor is urged to call a special session of the legislature to start public improvements "to relieve the poverty of the army of our unemployed."

1907.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 5.—The National Bank of Commerce, the second largest financial institution in the city, with $16,942,694 in deposits, failed to open its doors. Later three small institutions in which the Bank of Commerce was largely interested also closed their doors.

1921.

Chicago, March 3.—Wages of from 2,500 to 3,500 employés of Sears, Roebuck & Co. were reduced yesterday.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 15, 1916.

LONDON.—Rotterdam reports a tidal wave coming off the North sea, destroying the railroad to Dordrecht and totally interrupting communications through the province of South Holland. Dordrecht has 40,000 inhabitants and is situated on an island in the Meuse river, ten miles southeast of Rotterdam. The flood at Rotterdam is the highest in memory. The excessive rains of the last fortnight caused the River Maas to overflow, bursting the dike that protects the southern part of the city. The center of the town rapidly became an empty waste of rushing waters.

LONDON.—A series of sensational disclosures is contained in a dossier furnished the American embassy by the British authorities, consisting of bank books, check stubs, and letters taken from Capt. Franz von Papen, the recalled military attaché to the German embassy in Washington, when he arrived at Falmouth on the liner Noordam on Jan. 2. The dossier furnished to the American embassy discloses, among other things, that Capt. von Papen paid Werner Horn, alias Van Horne, who blew up the Canadian Pacific bridge at St. Croix, Me., the sum of $700 a few days previous to the commission of the outrage; that through the same agency he paid Anton Kuepferle, the German spy who committed suicide in Brixton prison here, the sum of $100 just prior to Kuepferle's embarking for his mission, and that Capt. von Papen kept the German consulate in Seattle regularly supplied with large sums until a fortnight prior to the bomb outrage in Seattle on May 30, when the last payment of $500 was made.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 15, 1902.

CHICAGO.—"Close the high schools for four months. Give Supt. Cooley the money and the time to reorganize them, to give them proper teachers, and to weed out unnecessary ones. Get a business manager who will put the schools on a business basis. Confine the teaching of foreign languages to the eighth and higher grades. Dispense with kindergartens in districts where they are not needed." The foregoing statements by Trustee John T. Keating in an address last night before the Iroquois club comprise the first definite plan for retrenchment which has been offered since the board of education realized that it faced a deficit.

BERLIN.—Prince Henry proposes to give a gala dinner aboard the yacht Hohenzollern to President Roosevelt and the high American officials when the yacht reaches the United States. Emperor William will send a special silver service from the palace in charge of Wessels, the imperial butler, to grace the table at the dinner.

CHICAGO.—County Commissioner Maurice Rosenfeld is pointed out as the "living enigma" of the world of politics. In the city hall they speak of him in whispers as the fellow who paid back $1,500 of his salary as a public officeholder. "I was absent from my seat as county commissioner for five months," said Mr. Rosenfeld, "and didn't earn the money."

MINORITY REPRESENTATION.

Lacon, Ill., Jan. 11.—Once again the time is approaching for the filing of nomination papers for public office for the April primaries. There is one office that comes under that system that makes the so-called primaries a farce. I am now speaking of minority representation in the general assembly or the lower house at Springfield. Just before time for filing of the papers for the candidates the senatorial committeemen of the two older political parties get together and form a you take this and we'll take that sort of society, or, in other words, we, the Democrats, will only put up one candidate and you, the Republicans, can put up two candidates, or vice versa. Now I think, with hundreds of other voters independently inclined, that we should get a chance to make our selections for the general assembly at the general election in November by having each of the older parties put on their tickets three candidates, or at least two candidates, so that independent voters can pick a choice without having certain candidates crammed down their throats time after time.

B. J. RAYMOND.

TO PAY THE TEACHERS.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Every family in Chicago whose children attend school desires the schools to continue functioning. Why not levy a tax, styled as an emergency tax, on each household having children attending school to be paid each month at the school, each family to be taxed equally, regardless of number of children in attendance?

Children whose parents refuse to make this sacrifice to insure the continued education of their offspring should be barred from the schoolroom, unless it has been proved to the satisfaction of the school board that the parents are unable to contribute.

Let the money that parents allow the young ones to spend in movie houses go to pay the heroic teachers. A sacrifice should be made by the citizen. I have one child attending school and would be glad to make such a sacrifice.

Years ago we paid for our children's books, etc., at school. Today it costs us nothing. A bookshelf and a coffee table made in the manual class adorns my home. It cost us nothing. I would gladly pay for these things, but the school furnishes them.

Why not go back to the old times and let parents help pay for the schools? True, I subscribe to the Parent-Teachers' association, but that is a drop in the bucket.

Mrs. E. G.

ADVICE TO ILLINOIS REPUBLICANS

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 8.—We were in hopes that a bright future was before us in this new year, but Len Small and William Hale Thompson are pushing themselves into the political field and will undertake to deceive the people by contending that white is black and that they are honest. If the facts are disclosed it will be found that members of the legislature who were on the sanitary pay roll were supporters of these two men, and if that is not enough proof to satisfy the public that supporters of these men are unfit to hold public office what further proof could be given?

Has any person received any of Thompson's million dollar fund he promised, as mentioned by a Voice of the People writer? What about the 5 cent fare Small and Thompson advocated and said could be granted with a profit to the companies? Champaign and other cities are collecting a 10 cent fare and report no excessive profits. The fact is that Small and Thompson are demagogues of the first class and those who desire honest government will repudiate them and vote against any candidate for office who upholds them.

OLD TIME REPUBLICAN.

FROM A TEACHER.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—May I express my appreciation for Mr. Oscar Hewitt's articles on our public schools?

I cannot help but wish that Mr. Hewitt could have spent some time in the schools and then given his readers an opportunity to understand just what their taxes are keeping up. By spending time in the schools I mean participating in the work and not going in as a spectator to view some showoff performance prepared by the teachers for the glory of the principal and superintendent.

What would he think of the correctional schools, maintained at terrific cost, especially as to equipment, catering to the truant pupil? Pupils who try to do right can be herded in, forty-eight or more to a room, while these so-called "problems" may enjoy private instruction with five to ten children in each room.

Does the principal of a six grade school need the services of a secretary? Find out how much time they spend doing actual school work.

Just how necessary are the many music and art supervisors?

How much good is accomplished by the many district superintendents who come and chat with the principals, stroll with a bored air from room to room, or try to pick some minor flaw in classroom work? Never any suggestions, any constructive criticism, or concrete demonstrations.

Let us know why the tremendous increase in the cost of the superintendent's office. Could we not possibly struggle along without ten assistant superintendents at ten thousand dollars each per year?

Why have two teachers in the kindergarten when attendance there is neither compulsory nor regular? The first grade teacher has to handle the same children a few months later and accomplish a definite amount of work single handed.

Maybe Mr. Hewitt could discover the reason for vocational advisers, assistants to assistants, teachers of dental hygiene, and the host of bureaus which our poverty stricken educational department boasts.

A TEACHER.

RYERSON FOR GOVERNOR.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—I would like to propose a new name for the next governor of the state of Illinois. We are now suffering the results from government by politicians. We need a new deal headed by the best talent which is available.

I propose the name of Mr. Edward L. Ryerson Sr., who has concentrated his entire effort and ability toward helping the relief for Cook county. The results of his work have been amazing and the ability to raise funds under present conditions honors the general confidence of the people in Mr. Ryerson's integrity and ability. Many contributions were made entirely due to confidence in the honesty of the leaders.

Mr. Ryerson's present task has been a thankless one and the governorship would be equally so. We need above all a leader who is honest and who is an executive who has business experience. If Mr. Ryerson could be persuaded to accept this additional task we can expect the job to be done thoroughly on a businesslike basis.

D. D. PORTER.

A DISTINCTION.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—When Gov. Phil LaFollette of the state of Wisconsin submitted a plan whereby the state could raise by taxation a fund for the relief of the unemployed the Chicago newspapers treated it as some more of that Wisconsin radicalism. Now we have THE TRIBUNE in an editorial advocating the use of the counties' share of the gasoline taxes to aid the unemployed. Why the right about face attitude?

BRITAIN INSISTS REVOLT IN INDIA HAS BEEN A FLOP

Will Free Gandhi When He Promises to Behave.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Mahatma Gandhi, India's Nationalist leader, can get out of his Yeravda prison cell as soon as he is prepared to behave himself and play the game with the British. This, in effect, was the statement of Sir Samuel Hoare, secretary of state for India, today after the departure of members of the three round table committees for India to continue the work interrupted in London a few weeks ago.

SIR SAMUEL HOARE
[Acme Photo.]

The British government has no desire to be oppressive in India, Sir Samuel maintained, but "it must govern and will not tolerate any parallel or alternative government." The government is highly pleased, he said, with the response of representative Indians to invitations to serve on round table committees. According to Sir Samuel, the response was practically unanimous with the exception of members of the all-India congress who were not invited.

Revolt Failure, He Says.

He also declared conditions in India are steadily improving. The boycott, he said, is half-hearted. The "redshirts" in the northwest are becoming friendly and the attempt to revive civil disobedience has failed, he said.

Sir Samuel paid a personal tribute to Gandhi, saying he is convinced he wished to coöperate but found the congress movement had fallen into the hands of extremists during his absence from India.

Prime Minister MacDonald bade the delegates on the Indian committees farewell at Victoria station. They are due to arrive in Bombay Jan. 29.

A wide revision of the Indian voting franchise, including an extension of the vote for women, which is now less than one-twentieth of the male electorate, is one of the main subjects to be investigated by the committees.

Ruin Threatens India.

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 14.—(AP)—While Great Britain is temporarily victorious in the "nonviolent" struggle, Nationalist India is smouldering with bitterness and is threatened with commercial ruin of her own design. Since Mahatma Gandhi was imprisoned two weeks ago the government's repressive ordinances have temporarily throttled the civil disobedience campaign without major disorder, but business has almost come to a standstill.

Sporadic manifestations against the British continue. A volunteer of the Nationalist congres broke a leg in a daring attempt tonight to haul down the Union Jack from the congress headquarters, now in the possession of the police.

As he was climbing to the flag he was seen and challenged by a sentry. One of his legs was fractured in his attempt to escape. He was arrested and then taken to a hospital.

Four Boys Under 10 Fined.

Four boys under 10 years of age, who had urged that their school at Surat be closed in protest against Gandhi's incarceration, were fined 25 rupees today.

The headquarters of the local branch of the Natfonalist congress at Lucknow was closed by authorities and forty persons, most of them volunteers, were arrested. Nationalist organizations in the Bengal district to the number of 272 were outlawed by officials at Calcutta.

Putting patriotism above their monetary losses, Indian merchants here declare they will not rest until Gandhi is released from prison, the ordinances are repealed, and the Nationalist demands for independence are granted.

SCHOLARSHIP TO AID HIM AS SALE OF BLOOD LAGS

For the last three and a half years Julius Kowalski, 24 years old, 4850 Cornelia avenue, obtained funds for his education by selling his blood for transfusions. When the faculty of the Y. M. C. A. College of Arts and Sciences learned that the depression had cut into his earnings, he was granted a scholarship so that he might continue as a junior in the college, it was learned yesterday.

"Blood transfusions haven't interfered with my school work at all," said Kowalski. "In fact, I am able to be in the classroom the same day I undergo a transfusion. I'm 'on tap' in four hospitals and often am summoned from my classroom for a transfusion. When not at school and at the hospital, I try selling a little life insurance."

DISCOVER COMPOUND THAT MAY PROVE AID IN BATTLING CANCER

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Discovery of a strange, yellow fluorescent chemical compound extraordinarily effective in producing cancer in animals was described today in the American Journal of Cancer.

Its name is "1:2:5:6-dibenzenthracene," and it explains in part why certain substances used in commerce produce human cancer occasionally.

Describing the discovery Dr. Francis Carter Wood of Columbia university, Crocker Institute of Cancer Research th editor of the journal said:

"Cancer, it has long been known, occurs with unpleasant frequency in the laboring men in the German aniline dye works. Recent studies from the Research Institute of the London Cancer hospital offer some suggestions as to the possible nature of the compound which causes the disease.

"Drs. H. Burpows, I. Hieger and E. L. Kennaway have found that a fluorescent substance bearing the astounding name of 1:2:5:6-dibenzenthracene has a remarkable power of producing large numbers of cancers in mice and rats.

"It might seem from a superficial examination of this work that it would hardly be important to produce cancer because there are already more cancers in the world than anybody wants and that the thing to do would be to discover some compound which would cure cancer. The answer which the scientist makes is that if you only know what starts a thing one would be more apt to be able to stop it than if one works the other way and tries to stop a disease when it is in full blast."

TWO SUSPECTS IN ILSLEY KILLINGS HELD IN JERSEY

One Answers Description of Negro Sought.

BULLETIN.

Camden, N. J., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Two suspects in the slaying of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley were being questioned here tonight regarding the slaying. The men said they were James Nolen, 22, and John Rice, 46, both of Richmond, Va. Rice, police said, answered the description of George Crawford, sought in connection with the case.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Middleburg, Va., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Virginia Blue Grass society and police of cities from Washington to Philadelphia patrolled hundreds of miles of highway and bypaths today in a man hunt for a short, squat Negro sought as the slayer of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, wealthy horse woman, and her maid.

Into the Negro section of the national capital, of Baltimore, Wilmington, Del.; Chester, Pa., and the Quaker City, squads of detectives armed with descriptions of the wanted George Crawford pursued their way but without success.

The fugitive's trail was lost at Clarendon, Va., across the Potomac from Washington, where a blue Ford coupe in which he is believed to have escaped after crushing the skulls of his two victims was found abandoned late last night.

Evidence of Battle.

Police are convinced they will have no trouble recognizing the murderer. His face and hands are believed to be covered with deep scratches inflicted by Mrs. Ilsley as she struggled to save herself from the fatal blows of an iron bootjack.

An autopsy conducted by Coroner John A. Gibson of Loudoun county upon the body of the comely 35 year old widow revealed skin and hair of a Negro imbedded under the finger nails. The tell-tale evidence was brought out under microscopic examination and chemical analysis.

Dr. Gibson said that, so far as he could determine, neither Mrs. Ilsley nor Mrs. Mina Buckner, the 62 year old servitor, had been raped.

Mitchell Leads Posses.

Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, former assistant chief of the army air forces, who directed the work of the society manned posses, said he is convinced Crawford was actuated solely by revenge because Mrs. Ilsley had sworn out a warrant for his arrest, charging robbery.

Speculation that robbery was his motive was discarded after it was found that expensive jewelry worn by Mrs. Ilsley had been untouched. Valuable articles in the house were still intact.

The body of the heiress—she is said to have inherited millions upon the death of her 70 year old husband Spencer Ilsley, retired Milwaukee banker, last spring—was brought from an undertaker's establishment in Washington for the autopsy.

Funeral services for the huntswoman will be held at noon tomorrow in Emmanuel Episcopal church, with the rector, Dr. D. Campbell Mayers, officiating. The body will be conveyed to Washington and put aboard a train for Milwaukee, where it will be buried in the Ilsley family plot.

HUNT GREEN BAY MAN HERE.

The Chicago police have been asked to search for Lee E. F. Dante, 33 years old, of Green Bay, Wis., who has been missing from his home since Wednesday.

JAPAN REVEALS SECRET TREATIES CHINA VIOLATED

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, Jan. 14.—The foreign office tonight published translations of the secret agreements concluded in 1905, when China confirmed the transfer to Japan of Russian rights in Manchuria.

The agreements were kept secret at China's request, it is stated here.

Two of the sixteen agreements are of capital importance in Japan's charges of treaty violation. Under article 3 China engages not to construct any main lines parallel to the Japanese owned South Manchuria railway or branch lines prejudicial to the railway's interests.

Japan asserts that this pledge was violated by the construction of a road running north and south via Tahushan, Tungliao, Chenchiatun, Taonan, and Tsitsihar, and also by the continuation of the Peiping-Mukden line across the South Manchuria tracks at Mukden to Hailung-Cheng, thence to be continued on to Kirin and Changchun.

While what constitutes parallel lines is open to discussion, those two roads were planned to carry traffic away from Dairen to the new Chinese port of Hulutao, which would have been prejudicial to the South Manchuria railway, the Japanese contend. Japan did not oppose Chinese construction of those roads while a policy of cooperation was being tried out, but they were held to be part of a policy of squeezing out Japan, a policy which the Chinese pursued to their ultimate undoing.

Under article 10, China promises an administration which will guarantee the security of life and occupation, which pledge, the Japanese assert, has proven beyond her power. The treaties are published now because Dr. Wellington Koo, former Nanking foreign minister, and other Chinese officials have denied their existence.

Banks Provide China Funds.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

SHANGHAI, Jan. 14.—With the new government facing collapse owing to financial difficulties and with a proposal made to declare a moratorium on domestic bond payments, powerful Shanghai Chinese bankers today took firm action to avert an impending catastrophe.

Registering strong opposition to the moratorium suggestion, which would inevitably react unfavorably on the banking situation, as most banks are heavy investors in government bonds, it is understood the banks have decided to finance the government over the present emergency which is likely to last until the Chinese New Year, Feb. 6.

The government is said to have accepted the bankers' proposal to provide funds on definite terms. Finance Minister Huang Han-liang resigned tonight.

WOMEN FOES OF DRY LAW MEET IN WILL COUNTY

Col. Ira L. Reeves of the Crusaders yesterday accompanied two women speakers to Mokena for a massmeeting in the high school there under the auspices of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform. Mrs. William A. Sauer, a member of the executive committee of the Illinois division of the women's organization, and Miss Mary K. Platt, secretary, discussed, respectively, the evils of prohibition from a woman's viewpoint, and the inception of the organization in this state. Col. Reeves' topic was "The Economics of Prohibition." The gathering was the first of its kind in Will county. There are now about 45,000 members in Illinois, organized in 82 of the 102 counties.

Do You use these 7 tests when you buy advertising in Chicago?

2	COVERAGE OF PURCHASING POWER
3	HOME-DELIVERED CIRCULATION
4	TOTAL CIRCULATION
5	RETAIL ADVERTISING VOLUME
6	GENERAL ADVERTISING VOLUME
7	CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING VOLUME

THESE seven checkpoints go right to the heart of newspaper values. They reveal the success of a newspaper in its first purpose—selling news.

They record the ability of a newspaper to promote the sales of advertisers.

They constitute the most dependable measure of the value of space, of advertising responsiveness. The newspaper which best meets the seven-point check list gives you the greatest value for your money.

By these basic tests, applicable to all newspapers, the Chicago Tribune is supreme among Chicago newspapers.

The Tribune has 150,000 more city and suburban circulation than any other Chicago newspaper. 32% more.

4 out of every 7 families in the metropolitan area read the Tribune. Here is penetration deep into every income level of consequence to advertisers. The best grip on the greatest buying power.

The Tribune has 57% more circulation than any other Chicago newspaper in the city's 25 better residential districts.

67% more in the prosperous suburban communities.

More men and women in metropolitan Chicago step up to newsstands and buy the Tribune than buy any other Chicago newspaper. More people take it at their homes than take all other Chicago newspapers combined.

In the entire Chicago territory there is no newspaper, no magazine, which has the influence and the responsiveness which the Tribune commands for advertisers seeking to get sales in this key market.

Last year the Tribune was the backbone of retail advertising in Chicago. State Street stores seeking mass response, exclusive shops, merchants who clock store traffic, check daily receipts, found their most productive advertising medium was the Tribune. Placed in it more lineage than in any other Chicago newspaper.

1,790,000 more lines!

You may feel that you can get along without the Tribune, but Chicago's own merchants know that no secondary medium gives them the coverage and penetration of the Chicago market, the greater purchasing power delivered by the Tribune.

General advertisers last year placed 1,494,000 more lines of advertising in the Tribune than in any other Chicago newspaper.

1,494,000 more lines bought not on bias, not on sentiment. Not any more than were the 1,779,000 more lines of classified advertising placed in the Tribune by the want advertisers who look to each penny for results.

If you seek a way to meet competition squarely, if there is any merit in association with leadership, you'll place the Tribune first on your advertising schedule for Chicago as it is first in the preference of the merchants and consumers of this market.

Let a Tribune representative help you get the greatest value out of every dollar you plan to spend in the Chicago market in 1932. Ask to have him call.

REVEAL STATUS OF DOZEN MORE CLOSED BANKS

Gross Receivership Costs Under 6 Per Cent.

Statements of the condition of 12 closed state banks were made public yesterday by State Auditor Oscar Nelson. The auditor revealed the condition of 20 closed banks last Wednesday. The new statements reveal that the gross cut of liquidation in the 32 banks has been kept below 6 per cent and the net cost of liquidation is about one per cent of the total money collected by receivers.

"The receivers of the 32 banks have spent $717,900 in collecting $12,078,796. Against this they earned $579,133 in interest, salvage of legal costs and other items. The actual net cost of the receiverships was $138,767. Twelve of the 32 closed banks showed an operating profit during the receiverships of $59,406.

Banks' Collections Told.

The following table shows the collections made by the receiver for each of the 12 banks whose condition was revealed yesterday and the receiver's expenses and earnings:

The costs in some cases are much heavier than in others and the cost in all banks is higher in the first six months after liquidation starts than at any other time, Mr. Nelson said. He gave out another report on the average holdings of depositors in the 12 closed banks. This follows:

A bank debtor was taken into custody yesterday when Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg ordered his bailiff to take into custody Samuel Gordon, 918 Lafayette avenue, an insurance salesman. The judge termed Gordon "the worst liar" he had ever heard.

Gordon owed the closed Sheridan Trust and Savings bank a balance of $434 on an unsecured loan of $2,000. He told a complicated story in attempting to prove that he was unable to pay the balance and the judge said it was apparent that he had perjured himself. Gordon was held in chambers for several hours, but was finally allowed to go home. He will appear again today.

Gives Farm to Receiver.

William A. Murdock, former well to do subdivision operator, who at first told the court that he had nothing with which to pay his indebtedness of $3,257, finally agreed to turn over to the receiver title to an 800 acre farm near Woodstock in McHenry county and a 160 acre farm near Palatine.

Mrs. Hannah Zuker, 5329 Kenmore avenue, once known as the Hetty Green of Chicago because of her many real estate holdings, told Judge Feinberg that she would pay her indebtedness of $5,710 by a payment of $500 next Monday and $500 a month thereafter. Mrs. Zuker at first insisted she could pay nothing, but testimony yesterday revealed that she still has an income of $100,000 a year from apartment buildings.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Squaring Himself

MICHIGAN HEIRESS GIVEN 20 TO 25 YEARS FOR KILLING LOVER

Flint, Mich., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Helen Joy Morgan, 27 year old heiress to a fortune estimated at $250,000, was found guilty of murdering Leslie Casteel, her garage mechanic sweetheart, and was sentenced to serve from 20 to 25 years in the Detroit House of Correction.

HELEN J. MORGAN.

The jury brought in a verdict of second degree murder and Judge James S. Parker recommended that she serve 20 years.

After hearing the verdict, Miss Morgan wrote it on a slip of newspaper and passed it to her mother, Mrs. Carrie P. Morgan, wealthy Flint woman, who is deaf.

While seated in an automobile one evening last April, in a lonely road near a cemetery, Casteel was shot and killed by Miss Morgan. She claimed self defense. The prosecution, however, charged premediated murder, the result of jealousy.

HAVOC OF SLUMP SHOWN IN ESTATE OF FRANK H. SCOTT

Inventory Sets Value at $150,000.

The havoc which the present depression market plays even with the investments of a careful business man was illustrated yesterday when an inventory of the estate of the late Frank Hamline Scott, a leading Chicago attorney, was filed in the Probate court.

Mr. Scott died on Oct. 11, at the age of 74. He represented Lady Marguerite Hyde, countess of Suffolk and Berks, in her suit against her brother, Joseph Leiter, over the administration of the $30,000,000 estate of their father, the late Levi Z. Leiter, and was counsel in the International Harvester company anti-trust suits, and many other important cases.

Present Value $150,000.

Although his estate was reported to be in excess of a million dollars at the time of his death, the inventory, which was approved yesterday byN. J. Bonelli, assistant to Probate Judge Horner, showed that if it were necessary to liquidate the estate at present market prices only a little more than $150,000 would be realized. Attorneys said that Mrs. Edith Scott, 1347 State parkway, the widow and principal legatee, has means which will save her from incurring this loss.

Most of Mr. Scott's investments were in bonds, practically all of them listed on the New York or Chicago stock exchanges. These bonds, of a par value of $119,000, would bring only $84,207, or about 71 cents on the dollar at present prices. The list, with the par and market values, follows:

The list also included $3,000 in Kingston Manor mortgage bonds and two other building bonds of $100 denomination, the latter two listed as desperate.

Today's hearing will be one of the largest held by Chambers since the heating season opened. The hearings are conducted on the theory that few of those summoned violate the city's smoke abatement ordinance subsequently.

LEVEE COLLAPSES IN MISSISSIPPI; 5,000 IN DANGER

Glendora, Miss., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The main Tallahatchie river levee at the Seawright plantation collapsed at 8 o'clock tonight, hurling an eight foot wall of water into the already partly flooded Tippo basin.

The break was directly across from Glendora, through whose business district streets water has been flowing for more than three weeks. It is about four miles south of Sharkey, where the levee broke last week.

W. R. Gay, levee commissioner, issued an urgent call for boats to rescue the estimated 5,000 persons who are still in the Tippo basin. He said it would be necessary to bring all of them out.

COWDERY RITES TODAY; ONCE GAS COMPANY HEAD

Funeral services for Edward G. Cowdery, 75 years old, former president of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, will be held at 3 o'clock today from his home at 245 Sheridan road, Kenilworth. The body will be taken to White Pigeon, Mich., for burial. Mr. Cowdery died on Wednesday in Presbyterian hospital, following a short illness.

Mr. Cowdery was born in Andover, Mass., and was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He became an authority on gas engineering and joined the Peoples company in 1907 as vice president, after service in Toledo, Milwaukee and St. Paul. He became president of the local company in 1915 and held the post until 1919. He then became chairman of the board of Counselman & Co., investment bankers. He retired from business in 1921.

His widow, Mrs. Jennie Burr Cowdery, and three children, Mrs. Charles B. Willard, Mrs. Corene Davison, and Chester V. Cowdery, survive.

FILES PAPERS FOR NEW ROSENWALD CHARITIES FUND

The certificate of resolution announcing the incorporation of the Rosenwald Family association and naming the five children of the late Julius Rosenwald as life trustees was filed yesterday with County Recorder Clayton F. Smith. The association was described as "a philanthropic education, scientific, and charitable" organization.

Lessing J. Rosenwald, one of the sons and a trustee, declined to comment on the association's work or the funds at its command, saying: "It is all too vague just now."

Legal technicalities preparatory to the filing of Mr. Rosenwald's will were being disposed of yesterday by the law firms who have been engaged to handle the Rosenwald estate.

Peter Campbell, Belt Line Veteran, Dies at Office

Peter Campbell, 66 years old, master mechanic of the Chicago River and Indiana railroad, died yesterday of heart disease in his office at 837 Exchange avenue, in the Union stockyards. He had been employed by the railroad and by its predecessor, the Chicago Railway Transfer association, since 1890. He was a widower and lived at the Gladstone hotel, 6200 Kenwood avenue.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

DUMPLING RELIC OF PRE-VITAMIN ERA OF MENUS

Still Has Standing Among Heroic Appetites.

Restraint, forsooth, is excellent,
When dining on the dumpling—
'Tis here the epicure is wise,
The gourmand quite a chumpling.

BY WILLIAM IRVIN.

The dumpling—the good old fashioned dumpling, alias "the devil's tire patch"—properly belongs to the age of bustles and man o' war appetites. It played the heavy part in every mealodrama back "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," and rated as a man sized mouthful of anybody's menu.

It was in vogue when grandmother was in pantalettes, and was still going strong when Dewey captured Manila. Its popularity as a gastronomical "heavy" began to wane, however, somewhere between the turn of the century and the first Bull Moose campaign, declining steadily, until today it ranks alongside the mohair sofa and tandem bicycle as a relic of the previtamin era.

Don't get an idea from all this, though, that the dumpling has done a complete "vanishing American," because in some parts it is still a tradition and a solid one at that. It's lost none of its standing among the old guard eaters, principally of rural origin, who can take on as many as three or four dumplings at one sitting without feeling like a bag of marbles.

Simply Doesn't Belong.

But to turn the dumpling loose on the modern digestive mechanism, attuned to nothing more virile than French pastry and frappé, would be akin to dropping a red hot rivet into grandpa's milk toast. Not only would the dumpling have a deuce of a time getting itself digested, but the digestive system would be a nervous wreck as a result. Alas, the old fashioned dumpling would be as ill at ease on the modern menu as Ghandi in a Boy Scout suit.

The dumpling, however, has its place in the Americana of gastronomy, its proper niche in the hall of blame for the pills and ills of nearly a century of American life, and a substantial claim on the gastronomical affections of those hardy folk of a by-gone day for whom eating was the ultimate in earthly joys three times a day, 365 days a year.

This is not an attempt to dislodge the dumpling from the pinnacle it deservedly occupies, nor an effort to swerve those devoted souls, who have remained steadfastly loyal to the dumpling, from the course of their true devotion. It is merely an appraisal of the dumpling as an American institution, a provincial one, perhaps, but an institution, nevertheless.

Induced Outward Peace.

In all fairness to the dumpling, it should be said that it has been to America what sand is to a balloon: ballast. To it may be traced much of the listless conservatism of the 19th century—nobody felt like doing anything after two, three, or four helpings of dumplings, anything, that is, more strenuous than croquet.

The good old fashioned dumpling was little more than a hunk of dough masquerading as an edible tidbit with a gravy like covering. Somewhere I've come across an old fashioned recipe that calls for two cups of flour, three of baking powder, one of salt, and two tablespoonfuls of shortening, which gives you some idea of what you were up against. The dumpling was rolled out and cut in squares like biscuit dough.

Drop dumplings, however, are the more civilized version of the dumpling story. A cup and a half of flour, a half teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonsful of baking powder and two tablespoonfuls of shortening, or thereabouts, go into it. The dry ingredients are sifted together. The egg is beaten lightly in a cup and the cup filled with milk, and this, then, is mixed with dry ingredients, resulting in a stiff batter. A light, fluffy ball is the drop dumpling, as worthy as the apple of consideration by the modern swain, such as "You're the dumpling of my eye."

Pork and Lamb Cuts Best Meat Buys This Week-End

In its regular weekly report issued for the guidance of consumers the committee on marketing information of the Meat Council of Chicago states: "Pork cuts, especially the smoked meats, are recommended to the housewives of Chicago as the most economical meat buy over the coming weekend. Forequarter cuts of lamb, such as the shoulder, breast and rib chops, are also available to the housewife at very attractive prices."

2 Acres of Crops Needed to Feed Average American Government economists estimate that it takes two acres of crops to feed the average American, one acre of land for the average German, half an acre for the average Chinese, and only one-fourth an acre for the average Japanese.

Return to Home Parties Raises Problem of Lunch

BY FLORA MARTIN.

People these days are going in for home parties rather than for the old favorites of cabareting, theater going, and other amusements which held full sway before bank failures and stock crashes depleted their incomes. Bridge and poker parties, ping pong, backgammon, and many old fashioned parlor games have come to the front as leading forms of amusement for these informal parties.

The main worry for the hostess on these occasions is the refreshment question, for, of course, once the ball is started rolling, the games will work out for themselves. The chief thing to remember in planning a menu is that simplicity is the keynote for parties this winter. The tendency at most informal gatherings is to bring the evening to a climax with a light midnight repast, probably of nothing more than cake and coffee, served informally around the card table, which is by far the easiest way out.

Get Ready in Advance.

Many hostesses this year are serving buffet suppers, which are time savers for those who are not fortunate enough to have maids, and by far one of the most informal ways of serving. The refreshments can be attractively laid out on the dining room table, on card tables, or can be wheeled in on tea wagons.

The stage should be all set early in the evening, as one of the chief annoyances at parties is having the hostess abruptly take leave of her guests for half an hour or more while preparing a midnight supper. For instance, if a salad is to be one of the main parts of the supper, all of the ingredients can be mixed and put in the refrigerator until the midnight gong announces the hour for refreshments. Then it is just a question of perching it atop crisp lettuce leaves and serving.

A combination of cooked chicken, celery, apples, marshmallows, stuffed olives and red pimento, all cut into small pieces, makes an ideal salad for a midnight supper. Start out with mixing the chopped chicken with the mayonnaise, add the other ingredients and then serve on lettuce leaves. The amount of each ingredient used, all depends upon the individual.

Nothing More Needed.

This combination, accompanied by buttered rolls and coffee, is enough in itself. But in case the hostess desires to go a little farther, shoestring potatoes, bought at the corner delicatessen, can be heated in the oven and added to the menu. Perhaps a bit of cake can also be included, but it is not necessary if the hostess follows the rule for simplicity.

The open "combination" sandwich served with coffee is ideal for a midnight supper. This sandwich starts out with a piece of bread which has been toasted on one side. The following are placed in layers on the untoasted side: [1] A slice of American cheese, [2] a slice of Bermuda onion, [3] a slice of tomato, and last, two slices of bacon. Then the combination is placed in the lower part of the oven and broiled until the bacon is crisp and served hot.

4 STATES SHIPPING STRAWBERRIES HERE TO INCREASE OUTPUT

More strawberries for 1932 from the states of Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky and Tennessee, which ship heavily to Chicago, are forecast following a survey of acreages and field conditions compared with 1931. The outlook was prepared by Gordon B. Nance, extension specialist for Missouri state college of agriculture.

In 1931 the four states produced 35,000,000 quarts for the market from around 35,000 acres. The same states expect to pick a berry crop from 44 per cent more land. For the nation as a whole, the government reports, there will be 186,860 acres for commercial production as compared with 176,120 acres growing strawberries in 1931.

The harvest season divides the states into four classes. The early states have an increase of 16 per cent in acreage; the second early class, 38 per cent increase; 30 per cent for the intermediate; and 9 per cent for the late group including the lake and far western states.

"LYCHEE NUTS" ARE VALUABLE CHINESE FRUIT

Dried They Resemble a Raisin.

BY ANGELA PETESCH.

A Portuguese writer has said about the lychee, "It is the most beautiful fruit that God has created in the universe." No fruit, in fact, has inspired more poets and artists than the lychee. Literary references have been traced back years and years, even before the time of Christ.

Just as this writer says, the lychee is, in reality, a fruit. We westerners, or occidentals, call them "lychee nuts." They are marketed in this country in large quantities during the holiday season and served with our popular almonds and walnuts. Perhaps that is why we call them nuts.

Chinese Find It Valuable.

Southern China is conspicuously characterized by the lychee. In this section it is extensively cultivated. Aside from a very small section in India, southern China is the only place where the fruit is grown for commercial purposes. It is China's most valuable fruit. There, of course, it is eaten in the fresh ripe state when the skin is soft and pliable and the flesh is juicy and tender. The lychees with which we are familiar are dried. They are delicious when dried—a raisin-like fruit. What must they be when fresh? I would welcome an opportunity of sampling them. But China's a long way off.

In size the fruit is about that of a strawberry or small English walnut. The shape more nearly resembles that of the strawberry, however. When fresh the skin has the toughness of a thick skinned grape. It is eaten like a grape, too—the pulp being removed after the skin is broken. When dried, though, the skin snaps open with the brittleness of our paper shelled almonds. The dried fruit I have said resembles a raisin.

Origin of Name.

The origin and the romanization of the word "lychee" holds our attention for awhile.

Wu Ying K'uei is our authority for the origin. He says "that the lychee has secured its name from the fact that the fruit clings so tenaciously to the twigs necessitating the use of knives to separate it from the branches." In the Chinese language "lychee" is a two character word. Very, very early in its history the first character, meaning "to separate," was pronounced in English "lay." The second character, "chee," means branch. The combination of the two is interpreted as an attempt to convey the idea that in gathering, the twigs must be separated from the branches and the fruit then separated from twigs.

Later, when knives were used in gathering, the first character was changed to represent the use of that implement and the syllable in English was changed to "li" as in "ice." And so on down until now we have the word "lychee."

Many Ways of Spelling.

I only wish I would reproduce for you the Chinese characters. They are interesting and very mysterious to one not educated in the Chinese tongue. But in the first place I'm sure I couldn't even copy the clever marks from a model. And in the second place the copy reader would misunderstand my efforts and cross them all out.

Just as there are many ways of writing and representing the same word "lychee" in Chinese, there are many ways of spelling it in English. We have, for instance, litchi, leechee, lichi, etc. In either case it is difficult to arrive at the correct form. I believe in English, however, that lychee is the most satisfactory because the "y" will best convey the correct Cantonese sound of the word. The first syllable should be correctly pronounced "ly" as in lying or lyceum.

Ask for lychee nuts, then. If you aren't familiar with them you will find it an interesting new taste sensation.

1932 ONION OUTPUT OF SOUTHERN STATES WILL BE INCREASED

Southern states intend to produce far larger quantities of snap beans and Bermuda and Creole onions as compared to 1931 although the early spring months will see less of the southern grown cabbage. Crop forecasts, based on acreages intended for planting these crops, have just been completed for the states of California, Florida, Louisiana, Texas, on cabbage: Florida and Texas on snap beans, and California, Louisiana and Texas on onions.

Chicago can expect some of the new onions by April, if weather conditions are favorable. Of the snap beans, Florida has already shipped more than 3,000 carloads. The cabbage is being harvested now and shipments northward will continue until more northerly states get into production next spring.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Do not allow woolen garments to freeze after they have been washed because the freezing may cause shrinking.

A few drops of oil every three or four weeks keeps household machines in better condition than a large amount once or twice a year.

Use two-thirds of a cup of sugar to a cup of juice when making apple jelly instead of the old "cup for cup" recipe.

Fur that has been wet should be well brushed to keep it from matting.

POWER OF WILL IS REQUISITE IN CUTTING WEIGHT

How the average person can reduce without going on a starvation diet and how he can put on weight are graphically outlined by the bureau of home economics of the United States department of agriculture in an exhibit recently completed.

The will power to stick to a program is the first requisite in changing weight after knowing what to do, the bureau's nutrition experts say. They strongly advise against drastic measures and discourage all reducing practices except on the advice of a physician.

When to Worry.

Adults need not worry about their weight unless they find themselves more than 10 to 15 per cent over or under the averages in tables for height at the age of 30, according to the bureau. The exhibit points out the dangers of underweight and of overweight and contrasts the advantages derived from a good healthy routine.

The best course to follow, after the correct weight has been obtained, is to maintain it, the bureau says. The way to do this is to balance the amount of energy giving foods with the energy spent. The energy giving foods which provide most of the calories—in short, the weight regulators—are the fats, sweets, breads, and cereals.

Milk should be included in both the fattening and thinning diets, but skim milk or buttermilk is preferable for those who are keeping the calories low. The "thins" who are eating to gain weight should help themselves liberally to whole milk, drink it in place of part of the water at meal time and in extra milk shakes. The bureau suggests that food cooked or served with milk will help to add more calories and consequently more pounds.

Fruits, Vegetable on List.

Fruits and vegetables are in the imperative list for both the "fats" and "thins." Bulky green vegetables, low in calories, must be eaten by the latter group, even though they add little to the weight. They are important since they offer many other substances essential for good nutrition. Some vegetables and fruits, because of their starch and sugar supply a great many calories.

PERISHABLE FOOD LOSSES ARE HEAVY IN RETAIL STORES

Retail food stores provide problems in food conservation that need more study, says the editor of Food Distribution, who reports perishable food losses in retail stores in the United States are more than $470,127,000 annually, or about three per cent of the nation's food bill.

One egg of every dozen is lost in distribution, while losses in fruits and vegetables through evaporation and deterioration are as high as 25 per cent. Meat losses from discoloration and shrinkage are also high.

BEGINNING TO LIVE

An appetizing cereal, bringing "bulk" and Vitamin B, stopped the source of those dull headaches, and premature wrinkles

SHE had been a sufferer from constipation for years. It sapped her enthusiasm and energy, took the sparkle out of her eyes, and made her skin sallow.

Every night she dosed herself with pills and drugs—in bigger and bigger quantities as time went on. They gave only temporary relief. Then, fortunately, she read an advertisement about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN (just as you are doing now).

She tried this delicious cereal. The results were surprising. She found she had a lot more energy at the end of a day. Her skin lost its sallow hue. Her drabness departed. Her friends discovered in her a new and colorful personality.

How could so simple a thing as eating a cereal effect this great change? Here's why. ALL-BRAN brings two things that check common constipation. "Bulk" to exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to help give them tone. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar in action to that of lettuce. Inside the body, it absorbs moisture, and becomes a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Try two tablespoonfuls daily — serious cases, with every meal. If you suffer from intestinal trouble not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. It is not habit-forming. Equally tasty as a cereal or in cooked dishes. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

GIANT INDUSTRY IS BUILT UPON THIS FISH STORY!

Salmon—a Romantic Tale of the Deep Sea.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Salmon, crowned king of food fish by the American public! In the lowliest cottage dwelling and the loftiest city mansion it finds a place carrying along a romance that is all its own.

A romance of deep seas murmuring dreamily for thousands of miles up inland passages; of miles of netting looped into huge traps; of fleets of ships and tenders hurrying to and fro with tackle, workers, and supplies; of huge, rambling buildings vibrating with the whir of machinery that packs the rich catch with amazing speed into varied tins; of cargoes and trainloads of tempting sea food leaving great ports for all parts of the world. This is the picture painted by the little pink fish that has produced a $75,000,000 American industry. The week of Jan. 25, members of the National Canners' association will turn their attention to the subject when they convene in Chicago.

Story of Salmon's Birth.

The story of the salmon industry begins necessarily with the story of the salmon itself, but strange to relate, most of the chapters of the tale are missing. In the clear lakes and the cold streams that flow from the snow clad mountains of Alaska and the Pacific Northwest small, orange colored globules lying along the shallow riffles hatch into tiny fish.

The parent salmon, their life's mission ended, vanish from the scene. Then begins the trip of the young ones from the sparkling fresh water downstream to the great ocean. Sometimes the journey takes a year, sometimes it is accomplished in the season of birth, but in any case the salmon live their lives in the salt sea, returning to the stream or lake of their birth only when it comes time for spawning. Even science is baffled in determining what becomes of the young salmon when they enter the deep seas.

It is on the return trip to fresh waters that the "silver horde," fat, healthy, and full of life, is caught off the coast of Oregon, Washington, British Columbia, and Alaska. When a salmon starts for the spawning ground it is at the full flush of maturity, so the nearer the beginning of the journey it is caught the better the quality.

How They Are Caught.

Early every summer, the salmon fishing season, millions of dollars' worth of nets, fishing gear, cans, and other equipment is dispatched to the scores of canneries that dot the waters of the Pacific all the way from the Columbia river into the Bering sea. Along with these supplies go an army of fishermen, who work fast, for in the short space of 60 days, or even less, they must catch and then pack 100,000,000 rich, healthy salmon into almost half a billion cans for the world's consumption.

Traps, seines, and gill nets are used to ensnare the salmon, which are delivered to large scows and rushed to the canneries. An amazing piece of machinery called the "iron chink" prepares the salmon for the can at the rate of 60 fish per minute. Every scientific aid is employed to insure the sanitary packing of the salmon meat. Automatically, without touch of human hands, the cans are filled with rich, vital sea food, a dash of salt only being added for seasoning.

Differ in Size.

Placed end on end, these cans of salmon would reach all the way around the earth at the equator, with enough left over to stretch from Seattle, Wash., across to New York.

Salmon differ in size, shape, color of flesh, distinguishing marks, and life habits, but they vary slightly in protein, mineral, and iodine content. The red salmon [often referred to as Sockeye or Blueback] is always in great demand because of its deep red color. It was the first variety of salmon to be canned in quantity. Then there is the King or Chinook salmon, a red meated fish that is also widely distributed; the Coho, a medium red salmon and an excellent food fish, the Pink, the smallest of the family, which is amazingly low priced because of its abundance; and the Chum salmon, recognized by its pale color and high food and health value.

Cooked in Cans.

In hermetically sealed tins the salmon receives its first and final cooking under terrific steam pressure, effecting at the same time complete sterilization. During this cooking the few bones in the salmon are so softened that they become perfectly edible and at the same time contribute their beneficial mineral elements to the human system.

The Associated Salmon Packers recently conducted a national contest to obtain the best salmon recipes. More than 200,000 responses from some of the best cooks in the country poured in. Below are listed the first two prize winners:

SALMON PATTIES.

One can salmon, 4 eggs, 2 tablespoons thick sweet cream, ½ teaspoon salt, pinch of pepper, 4 tablespoons cold water, sifted bread crumbs, 2 cups white sauce, ½ cup finely cut celery, 8 slices toast.

Flake the salmon, add 2 eggs slightly beaten, the cream, salt and pepper. Mix and shape in small flat cakes. Coat with 2 eggs beaten with cold water, cover with sifted bread crumbs. Saute in butter until well browned on both sides. Serve each cake on a slice of hot toast and cover with white sauce to which celery has been added.

SALMON OMELETTE.

Cook 1 tablespoon onion and green pepper in bacon fat until delicate brown. Add 1½ cups cooked tomatoes, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper and 1 can salmon, flaked. Simmer 10 minutes. Add 1 tablespoon flour beaten smooth in ½ cup milk. Cook 1 minute. Remove from fire. Whip in the well beaten yolks of 4 eggs. Pour in well buttered, flat bottomed skillet. When partly cooked spread over one-half the stiffly beaten egg whites. Fold the other half of the yellow mixture over the whites. Bake in moderately hot oven for 10 or 12 minutes. Serve at once on hot platter.

THAT IDEAL SWEET POTATO

For housewives who are particular about getting the best type of sweet potato, E. M. Anderson (right) points out that one that is two and one-half inches in diameter and five inches long and tapering is the best. The experts agreeing with him are (left to right): Luther Fuller, agricultural agent for the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad; W. B. Ward, extension horticulturist for Purdue university, and C. E. Jennings, transportation inspector for the C. & E. I. road, which brings several hundred carloads annually from several Indiana counties. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

FOOD AUTHORITY EXTOLS VIRTUES OF THE LOWLY POTATO

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The plain, unassuming potato might blush or burst if it could know its virtues as a food as extolled by Prof. E. V. Hardenburg of the New York State College of Agriculture, who quotes the opinions of several authorities to show the potato as one of the most healthful and cheapest of foods.

Residents of the United States eat about three bushels of potatoes to the person each year, less than for any other country in the north temperate zone, where the crop is grown commercially, he says.

The potato possesses certain qualities that tend to maintain health. The human blood is naturally alkaline, and when normal alkalinity is maintained, the resistance to disease is high. Many of the ordinary diets load the blood with acids and the result is seen in the vast number of persons who are chronically tired. The potato, he says, is one of the most highly alkaline foods and also one of the most easily digestible. Cooked potato starch digests in one-sixth of the time required for the digestion of oatmeal, and in less time than any cereal.

"The typical bill of fare," he says, "is deficient in vitamin C, the scurvy preventing vitamin, which the potato supplies in abundance." Howe attributes the almost universal premature decay of teeth to the lack of this vitamin.

McCarrison and others hold that this vitamin deficiency is the leading cause of much of the semi-invalidism in every community. Adults, they say, should eat one pound of potatoes daily. Infants of six months may be given potato puree, especially as a protection against acidosis, which often manifests itself in children as cyclic or regularly recurring vomiting.

Many persons do not eat potatoes because of their alleged fattening properties. This prejudice against the potato has little scientific foundation, he says. The potato, like other foods, is fattening when eaten in quantity more than sufficient to meet the body needs, and it is no more fattening than any other food that is so rich in starch.

Science Makes Unexpected Guests Delight to Hostess

BY NANCY STONE.

There is a strange fiction that the unexpected guest is a peculiar phenomenon who plunges the household into the midst of domestic crisis by a mere appearance on the threshold. How foolish, for what is more delightful than a surprise arrival who will enjoy the informal hospitality of a cup of tea or a bite of supper?

Especially in this day and age when everything has turned scientific, no hostess, who is assured of the mechanics of her kitchen and the state of her larder, need have a fear for the guest's welfare. Most any meal can be extended to serve an extra and even if there is one course prepared for only four it is a simple matter for the hostess to refuse it herself with no sense of being ill at ease.

A Well Stocked Larder.

Of course, the well stocked larder is the first requirement for well ordered hospitality either to supplement a meal already planned or to provide refreshment when nothing previously has been arranged. And no hostess should await an unexpected guest to prove the truth of this advice, for any well run house boasts a carefully stocked larder. Then, too, it is almost always a saving to buy supplies by the dozens or half dozens.

The packages, bottles and jars lined row upon row in the pantry depend most generally on family preferences with the exception of the every day varieties of food and a special shelf of luxuries. Explorations every now and then into the food realm by way of the family grocery or delicatessen are often productive of new and interesting ideas for the larder. Never forget that a new note in a menu accrues to the personal triumph of the hostess.

Reading from the first course to the last, first place on the reserve shelves might be given to a variety of soups with the consomme or bouillon cubes included. Remember that the latter with gelatin [an item of importance in itself] will make an aspic base or take the place of meat stock. In the same group include some jars of mayonnaise and French dressing, a bit of prepared or English mustard, and any other seasoning or sauce the family favors.

Those Everyday Vegetables.

On the shelf below line up the everyday vegetables—beans, peas, beets, asparagus, and plenty of tomatoes, since they figure so prominently in a number of dishes. One end of this shelf must be reserved for at least a few samples of interesting little vegetables that are always decorative and intriguing. There are the tiny, perfectly flavored French peas, the long slender string beans matched in size, baby flageolots, tiny whole carrots, macedoine of vegetables in amusing shapes, and truffles, whole or in pieces.

Boned chicken, hams, deviled meats, and eggs are particularly helpful in emergencies and may often be served as the "pièce de résistance" of a luncheon or supper. In this same grouping you might include roast partridge in jelly, boneless pigeons, sardines, salmon, tuna fish, clams, crab meat, or even lobster if you want to please a particular guest. Most every hostess will agree that two or three fish pastes, caviar, and pate de foies gras are vital parts of any epicurean assortment.

Side Dishes at Luncheon.

For side dishes at luncheon or dinner, or for that Sunday evening supper or tea, there's nothing quite so indispensable as olives, green, ripe, and stuffed, and pickles, sweet and sour. Orange peel, watermelon pickles, pickled walnuts, and chutney will add a touch of the unusual to this assortment. And on the same shelf there must be room for a variety of jams and jellies, shelled walnuts, pecans, almonds, saltine wafers, and any domestic or imported biscuits that your fancy may have hit upon at the family grocery.

A jar of peaches, pears, cherries, plums, or pineapple will make a dessert in itself if chilled and served attractively in compote dishes or cups. Or any one of these fruits, as well as grapefruit sections, is valuable to have on hand for the salad course. Raspberries and similar fruits lend themselves nicely to pastries or to a fruit whip that may be easily stirred up for the last course.

Florida Orange Shipments Here Decline 15 Per Cent

Chicago can expect shipments of Florida oranges to be about 15 per cent below those of 1931, according to growers' reports. Prices, however, are considered the lowest in many years. Other citrus fruits, including lemons, grapefruit and tangerines, are described by the wholesale trade as plentiful but of excellent quality and of good flavor and size.

ONE GOOD TURN TO THE PANCAKE BRINGS REWARD

Should Be Eaten in Its Lighter Moments.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Pancakes of pleasing personality require something more than a supply of batter, as any one who has attempted without proper training to flip them publicly in a restaurant window can embarrassedly testify. Even in the confines of one's own kitchen, it is sufficiently trying on a cook's ego when the finished product falls short of reasonable expectations. Surely a word or two of preface is not amiss in the promotion of the perfect pancake.

Experienced pancake makers have something in common with the blacksmith and are guided by those epigrams hinting that the time to get busy is when the iron is hot. Regardless of the eagerness of those awaiting the breakfast treat, it is sheer folly to flip the substance on the griddle before the batter has prepared itself for this phase of adventure.

Every Pancake Has Silver Lining.

Thus, there is a time and tide in the affairs of pancakes that, without chagrin to the beholder, cannot be overlooked. There is perhaps no sorrier sight in the culinary realm than that which results from a disappointing pancake flip. No doubt, the term "flop" here had its derivation.

Let us not, however, dwell over long on the dark side of pancake possibilities. For there are two sides to every pancake.

Let us presume that the griddle has been heated to just the right temperature, and there has been a thorough understanding as to which favored one, waiting at the table, will receive the first steaming masterpiece. If too long a delay has been occasioned by griddle heating preliminaries and appetites have grown impatient, and it is almost school time, harmony may be accomplished through a division of the initial offering into as many parts as there are applicants. Or, perhaps, to offset competition, the first cake may be purposely burnt about its circumference.

Perfection Always Desired.

It is probable that every pancake has the desire to be a perfect pancake. Given the proper inheritance and environment and a patient person to guide its destiny, there is no reason why its ambition should not be fulfilled.

Here is a recipe that will yield eight servings:

2 eggs,	½ tsp. salt.
1 pint buttermilk,	1 tsp. soda.
3 cups family flour.

Beat the eggs and add the buttermilk. Sift flour and measure. Resift with salt and soda into the mixing bowl. Add the liquid, gradually beating until smooth. Pour batter into a wide mouthed pitcher. Bake on a hot griddle.

And here is one for the sublimated pancake known as the waffle:

2 tbsp. butter.	½ tsp. soda.
4 eggs.	½ tsp. salt.
2 cups sour milk.	2½ cups flour.
2 tbsp. sour cream.

Dissolve the soda in two tablespoonfuls of milk. Beat the egg yolks well and add to the sifted dry ingredients. Melt the butter and add to this mixture. Add the milk, cream, and dissolved soda. Beat well and fold in the beaten whites of the eggs. Heat your waffle iron for eight or ten minutes before using. Bake the waffles about three minutes, the time varying with the type of iron used. Yield: Six servings.

Food Talk

In the winter season our bodies have more of a tendency to become sluggish than in the warmer months of the year. This is due to the fact that we exercise less, expose ourselves less to the sun, and eat fewer of the fresh fruits and vegetables plentiful in the latter period. To prevent or counteract this sluggishness, we should eat more of the fresh and raw fruits and vegetables, whenever possible. One of the least expensive, yet healthful, of the fruits, is the apple.

While we can't guarantee that "an apple a day keeps the doctor away," the apple is important from a nutrition standpoint. It is a combination of refreshing acids, good bulk, and well flavored fruit juices, and therefore attractive for eating enjoyment alone. However, the apple has a full value of two hundred and eighty-five calories per pound due to carbohydrate and protein content. The most important acid found in an apple is malic acid and the important minerals are calcium and phosphorous, which act as a blood purifier and assist in keeping the correct body alkalinity.

Apples, from a medical view, help our bodies, for they serve as a mild cathartic. The high percentage of water and bulky content—the cellulose, and the minerals, result in a laxative action. The small amount of tannin in the apple is not injurious. Taken as a whole, we can help our periodic sluggishness by eating them, because they tend to promote a healthy and vigorous digestion.

The following pudding is a delicious way to serve them.

BIRD'S NEST PUDDING.

Core and pare eight apples. Put into a deep, well buttered baking dish, and fill the centers with sugar and a little nutmeg. Add one pint of water, and bake them until tender, but not soft. To two cups of flour, add three teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of salt, one pint of milk, and the well beaten yolks of four eggs. Stir thoroughly, and then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Pour over the apples, and bake for one hour in a moderate oven [325 degrees Fahrenheit]. Serve hot with any pudding sauce.

DATE AND APPLE PIE.

Line a pie plate with a rather rich crust, and fill it with a mixture of chopped dates and apples. Sprinkle over them one-half cup of sugar and one teaspoon of cinnamon. Add two tablespoons of water [scant] and cover the pie with a top crust. Bake about half an hour in a moderate oven [350 degrees Fahrenheit]. Serve hot or cold.

CIDER APPLE SAUCE.

Reduce four quarts of new cider to two by boiling. Add to it enough pared and quartered apples to fill the kettle. Let these cook slowly for about four hours. [This sauce is particularly good with roast pork].

COLLEGE IN IOWA WILL TEACH MEN HOW TO BE COOKS

How to prepare beans in ways other than stewing, how to carve a fowl, how to get an appetizing meal from a limited food supply when out in the forest—these and other subjects pertaining to foods and nutrition will be studied by men students at Iowa State college in a special class during the winter quarter. Foresters, engineers, potential husbands and future bachelors will be enrolled. The course has been offered in the winter quarter for several years and is the outgrowth of a demand from foresters and engineers who might have to prepare their own meals or manage a commissary for a group, according to Miss Louise L'Engle, assistant professor of foods, who will teach the course.

BORDEN'S MILK

LAST YEAR'S WIFE

By ALICE M. WILLIAMSON

SYNOPSIS.

Lorne Carlton and Dick Farrow, popular moving picture stars of Hollywood, sail for Europe on a delayed honeymoon after a year's happy marriage. Lorne is sad about leaving, as she has an undefinable presentiment of trouble, but Dick is anxious for the adventure. Dick's parents are famous on the stage. Lorne, who fought her way through poverty to the heights, feels that she is not approved by the elder Farrows. Dolores, the Duchess of Crowninshield, a friend of Dick's parents, has invited the young couple to be her guests in London. She is divorced from the duke, but is one of England's most important hostesses. From the first moment of their meeting Dick is a willing captive of the beautiful and charming duchess. Dolores has a huge program arranged for their entertainment. Lorne carries on a silent tug-of-war to hold her husband.

INSTALLMENT XI.

HEARTBREAK.

"I've spoken my piece, and chucked my grouch off the old chest, so I'll go back now to my own roost," Lorne announced. "Bye-bye!" and she kissed her husband's forehead.

"You do see how I feel, don't you, dear?" Dick called after the flitting white spirit at the door.

"I do indeed see," she answered.

"And you think as I do?"

"O, yes," Lorne flung back, without turning, "I think exactly what you are thinking."

She crept into her own bed and pulled the lavender scented linen sheet and a downy, ribbon edged blanket up to her throat. She was shivering from head to foot. It seemed, somehow, quite important to get warm. Little every day things like sweet smells and physical comfort, hot, scented baths, followed by cold showers, blazing aromatic coffee and so forth, must be considered worth while from now on, if life were to be lived at all, since the one great boon had been taken from her. Lost!

"But," Lorne scolded herself as these thoughts beat dully in her brain, "you're weak and ineffective to be so sure it is lost. Maybe you are just being morbid. Maybe, as Dick says, you'll see the whole business differently tomorrow. O, it must be a kind of waking nightmare, thus! Dick can't have stopped loving you all of a sudden! Men don't stop loving like that! It can't be done. Things don't happen this way."

He gave his American clothes to the footman who valeted him.

Yet all the while her real self obstinately clung to its wretchedness. Something inside her, something mysteriously wise as the serpent of the Nile, and as old as Eve, knew well that men did stop loving you all of a sudden if they fell in love with another woman; knew that it was done; knew that things did happen this way.

Lorne lay still, slowly growing warm, breathing in the sweet lavender perfume of the linen, and thinking how funny it was that your heart could break, yet you didn't seem to mind a whole lot.

She could see how, according to her character, she would go on and on, being what is called "brave," and not letting any one pity or sympathize with her, when the inevitable had come to pass. She wished that she were not built on these lines. She thought it would be very nice to collapse and go out of her head, so that she could be sent to a pleasant, peaceful insane asylum, with bright rooms and quantities of flowers, and confidently believe herself to be a china teapot or a poached egg on restful toast, or something which wouldn't care a tinker's damn because her Dick—her own precious Dick, her man—had fallen head over heels in love with the Duchess of Crowninshield.

When Dolores Crowninshield wanted a thing, she wanted it unbearably. An unsatisfied wish of hers was so intense that it seemed she would die if it were not soon fulfilled, and as a world without Dolores Crowninshield was unthinkable, her efforts to obtain the desired object were, of course, for the general good as well as for her own happiness.

Lorne had been right when she said to herself: "Dick will be the handsomest young man the duchess has ever seen." Dick was the handsomest young man among aspirants, or Dolores thought him so at the moment, which amounted to the same thing. He was a new specimen, and as for the fact that he was married, it was but a trifling and surely temporary inconvenience. Wasn't it proverbial that Hollywood stars married merely till divorce did them part?

Dolores was too deeply experienced in matters of the [alleged] heart not to recognize, as Lorne had done, at the first meeting of eyes that she had bowled Dick Farrow over. She knew at once that he was hers to play with, and, though not surprised, she was pleased because he was a charming toy and she would love playing with him. Soon, however, mere playing was not enough. There had to be more. She wasn't going to tire of this toy and let Lorne Carlton take it away. It must become her own. It must remain in her life, as far into the future as she cared to look ahead.

The duchess was never less than nice to Lorne. She laid herself out to be polite, which she never did to Dick, that not being her method with men. She produced for Lorne's benefit, and to keep her occupied, a number of budding baronets, embryo earls, and gorgeous guardsmen, almost as conjurers produce rabbits from a hat. As for Dick, when she had heard him say energetically that she had "spoiled him for girls," it was safe for her to invite numerous debutantes and older girls to the house. Those she chose, however, were not among the brightest beauties of the season. She gave cocktail parties and dinners and dances. She obtained an invitation for the Farrows to a garden party at Buckingham palace. She took boxes at the opera and for all the most intriguing plays or musical comedies in London. She got up a river picnic or two. The three sampled famous or notorious restaurants. They tried all the most amusing, or rather, least deadly, night clubs, and Dick had never been so happy in his life.

He liked Dolores' intimates, and was intrigued, at first, by the difference between them and his own set at Hollywood and Beverly Hills. Unconsciously, Dick imitated them. He became very English. He went to a Saville row tailor. He gave his American clothes to the footman who valeted him. He lost his American accent, while Lorne purposely exaggerated hers. For Dick there were not hours enough in the days. For Lorne, each day was like a week in Lent. And then one night Dolores began talking about Henley.

"If the weather is fine, it's the most picturesque show of the whole season," she explained to Lorne. "You like the river, so you will love it. I'll have a houseboat, of course. Miles Bently has promised to let me have his. It's the nicest on the river."

"But," Lorne broke out, "you know duchess" [she never would call her 'Dolores'] "we shall be gone. Don't you remember we have our passage taken for the Leviathan? It will be her next trip west. And Dick is very keen about that suite."

"O!" Dolores wailed. "I can't bear to give you up so soon. I hadn't forgotten, but surely you can put off going for another month at least? I'd love you to see Ascot, too. You ought not to miss it."

"I'm afraid we must," Lorne said, firmly.

"Surely, surely, it's not so important to hurry back," pleaded Dolores. "It doesn't seem a week since you came. I don't see how I'm going to live without you."

This was her answer to Lorne; but her eyes had turned to Dick.

Lorne's eyes turned to him, too; rather tired eyes.

Dick didn't speak, but he looked tragic. His paling face, with clenched jaws, showed a curious writhing of the muscles beneath the firm brown skin.

"I wonder if that wouldn't make a good close up of Boy Having Heartbreak!" Lorne thought. She looked away, quickly. It seemed indecent of her to stare behind the curtain where he tried to hide his secret of anguish.

The conversation, if it could be called that, was taking place at the dinner table in the charming, octagon shaped dining room in Queen Anne's square, at an octagon shaped table made by Chippendale for a queen. No one was present save Dolores and her two guests, for it was a hurried, early meal before the first performance of a new play.

Luckily, or unluckily, there was no time for further discussion of the subject then. Perhaps that was why Dolores had brought it up. She might, Lorne thought, have wanted it to "simmer."

The three dashed off to the theater; later dashed to a dance at the Spanish embassy, where Dolores was persona grata; and, still later, dashed to the Embassy club, where something very special was going on. It was seldom indeed that Dolores' guests found any time for private talk even in their own rooms, unless they were going to bed or getting out of bed; and tonight was no exception to the hectic rule. And even in the most intimate surroundings they had, of late, merely chatted of things on the surface. Dick had his breakfast downstairs, presumably with his hostess, who had developed matutinal habits, while Lorne had a tray sent to her room.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Appropriated Guest's Rolls.

I have a friend who calls to see me about twice a month and she always brings some fresh rolls with her. She called the other day and when she came in she had a large bag of rolls in her hand. I took the rolls and put them on the table to serve with some tea. I told her she was foolish to spend her money when she was out of work. At tea she refused a roll and then I would not eat one. She looked at me with a smile on her face and said, "I didn't bring the rolls to you; they are for some poor children." I was glad to hear that, but I felt so embarrassed after what I had said to her. M. F.

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Unemployed for Two Years.

"I have been out of work for two years and I cannot buy my family the winter clothing needed. The girl, 10, wears shoes size 13½, and the boy, 2, wears shoes size 7. They both need shoes badly and we'd be grateful if you could supply them. I have a chance to return to work soon, but my clothing is so shabby I won't be able to do it unless I get something decent to wear. A suit, size 37 or 38; a pair of shoes, size 7½, and a hat, 6⅞, would help me a lot. D. L."

If we can provide this worried father with presentable clothing his employment problem may be settled, and with it a number of his troubles removed. Can you help him?

A. A. Sprague to Run for Harvard University Board of Overseers

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Albert A. Sprague, class of 1897, commissioner of public works of Chicago, has been nominated as an overseer of Harvard university. This was announced today. Ballots will be sent out in April and the results of the election announced in June at commencement.

Fifteen candidates were named yesterday to fill the places left vacant by the expiration of the terms of five members. The names were submitted by the committee on nominations of the Harvard Alumni association.

Those whose terms expire in June are Le Baron Russell Briggs of Cambridge; Franklin Swift Billings of Woodstock, Vt.; Philip Stockton of Boston, and Thomas Jefferson Coolidge of Boston. The fifth vacancy was caused by the death of Charles MacVeagh of New York. His term would have expired in June.

The candidates for overseers in addition to Mr. Sprague, whose names will appear on the postal ballots to be mailed in April to all holders of Harvard degrees eligible to vote, follow:

Minot Simons, '91, of New York City, minister of All Souls Unitarian church, president of the Associated Harvard Clubs in 1912.

Daniel F. Jones, '92, of Boston, surgeon in chief of the Palmer Memorial hospital.

Nathan Hayward, '95, of Philadelphia, engineer, president of the American Dredging company, president of the Associated Harvard Clubs in 1930.

Robert E. Goodwin, '01, of Concord, lawyer, member of the firm of Goodwin, Proctor & Hoar.

Albert F. Bigelow, '03, of Brookline, manufacturer, chairman of the ways and means committee of the Massachusetts house of representatives.

Trowbridge Callaway, '05, of New York City, partner in Callaway, Fish & Co., packers; president of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, 1929-30.

Robert Amory, '06, of Milton, manufacturer, president of the National Manufacturing company.

George Whitney, '07, of New York City, financier, member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.

De Coursey Fales, '11, of New York City, lawyer, member of the firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft.

Christian A. Herter, '15, of Boston, publisher, member of the Massachusetts house of representatives.

Richard C. Curtis, '16, of Boston, lawyer, member of the firm of Curtis & Curtis; treasurer, the Harvard Infantile Paralysis commission.

Francis Parkman, '19, of Southboro, educator, headmaster of St. Mark's school.

Barklie McK. Henry, '24, of New York City, financier, formerly in the Guaranty Trust company.

W. J. Y. Osterhout, honorary S. D. in 1925, of New York City, physiologist, head of the division of general physiology, Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

Chicago and Evanston Affected by Change of Presbyterian Pastors

Duquoin, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Illinois Presbyterian synod today announced the following current changes of Presbyterian ministers: The Rev. William Anderson of Argenta as new pastor at Bement; the Rev. Roy H. Brown of Irving Park church, Chicago, has resigned to do missionary work in the Philippine islands; Dr. Louis W. Sherwin is the new pastor of the Highland Park church.

The Rev. Paul A. Wolfe, Watertown, Conn., has been offered the pastorate of the Evanston First church. The Rev. Herbert M. Lohr has resigned as field secretary of the Illinois Presbyterian synod to become pastor of the Austin Manor church. Dr. A. T. Turner is the new pastor at Mattoon.

The third annual convention of Presbyterian ministers will be held at Springfield Feb. 1-3. The speakers will include Gov. Emmerson, Bishop Paul Jones, Drs. Silas Evans, Luther Wesley Smith, Frank W. Bible, Ernest F. Tittle, Burris Jenkins, and Arthur E. Holt.

BICENTENNIAL BUST OF WASHINGTON NO TREAT TO BINGHAM

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Senator Bingham has told the associate director of the George Washington bicentennial commission he would hate to have any schoolchild think the father of his country looked like the bust sent out by that organization.

In a hearing on the first deficiency bill, the Connecticut Republican asked the official, Representative Sol Bloom of New York, where he could sell his copy for half price. Bloom said he would buy it.

The commission's appropriation was cut $50,000 by the committee.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

"And that's the exception that proves the rule." How many times we hear that remark; how many times you say it and I say it. What do we really mean by it? How can anything which goes against the rule prove the rule?

Be that as it may, I know of no rule in bridge that has not many exceptions. One of the most used rules in bidding where the bidder holds a choice between two suits is to prefer a five or longer card suit to a four card suit for the first declaration.

Occasionally, however, we hold a hand in which our four card suit is headed by strong trick taking top honors, whereas our long suit is worthless unless it be trumps or unless we are playing the hand and are able to set it up after trumps are cleared. In other words, our long suit has no defensive strength. Since it should be remembered that we may not get the declaration and that in consequence we may have to play the hand on the defensive rather than on the offensive, it is more than sound to bid the four card suit first in the circumstances just described.

By bidding the four card suit first you will generally cause your partner to lead that suit in preference to the suit shown on the second round in case the opponents gain the contract. Yesterday's play-a-problem ably demonstrates the soundness of this initial opening bid. This was the hand:

NORTH (Dealer)
♠—2
♥—Q,J,10,9,8,7,6
♦—A,K,J,3

WEST
♠—9,8,7
♥—A,5
♦—Q,10,8,7

EAST
♠—A,K,Q,10,4,3
♥—None
♦—6,5,4
♣—K,Q,J,10

SOUTH
♠—J,6,5
♥—K,4,3,2
♣—8,7,6,5

North dealt and bid a diamond. East overcalled with two spades—an attacking overcall since it is one more than necessary to top North's bid. South passed and West went to four spades. This raise of West's is open to criticism. West held only three spades, which is not adequate support unless he knows his partner has at least five cards in the suit. While, with his holding, West should wish to keep the bidding open, he probably would have shown his hand better to East if in place of the raise he had bid two no-trumps. Should East then rebid spades, West is assured of five cards in the suit in East's and can continue with the suit.

North now bid five hearts, East overcalled with five spades, and all passed.

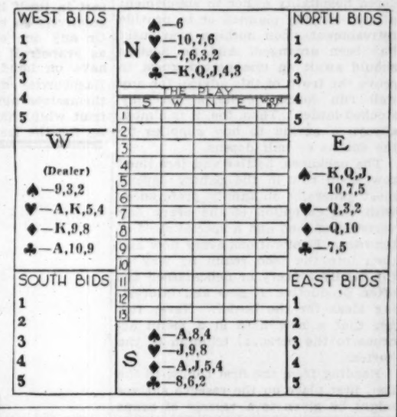
South opened the ♦ 9 and North took the trick with the J. North then led his ♦ A and then his ♦ K. To trick four he led the ♦ 3, which East took with the ♠ Q. East then led out the ♠ A, followed by the ♠ K, and to the seventh trick led the ♠ 3, which South captured with the J. South returned the ♥ 2, which dummy took with the A. Dummy led back the ♣ 3, which East took with the J. East then cashed in his ♣ K-Q and his ♠ 10-4 for the last four tricks, making nine tricks, which meant, of course, that East and West were set two tricks.

Now suppose North had opened with a bid of hearts. East would overcall any opening heart bid made by North—even if North opened with a preëmptive bid of four hearts. South would pass and, regardless of North's bid, East would have gone to four or five spades, if necessary, in order to gain the contract. In these circumstances, then, South would have opened with a heart. Dummy would play the A and East would discard a diamond. After that there would be no trouble at all for West to make five spades.

PLAY-A-PROBLEM: SOLITAIRE OR PARTNERS

Play this hand tonight at your bridge game. Keep a record of the bid and play in the spaces provided. Numbers in the bidding squares are for successive rounds. Check your results with tomorrow's answer.

To play "Solitaire": Record the bids you think each hand would make in the bidding squares. After the final declaration has been made start the play, leading from the hand at declarer's left. As you play each card cross it off of the diagram and record it in the proper square, as S. 3, H. K, etc. In the last column indicate the hand which won the round and lead from that hand on the next round.



Send your bridge problems to Charles True Adams, The Chicago Tribune; inclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Parents Are Delighted Over Son's Wedding Elsie Janis, Actress

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Wilson, 7908 Langley avenue, yesterday expressed themselves as delighted with the marriage of their only son, Gilbert, who is 26 years old, to Elsie Janis, 42 year old star of stage and movies.

"Gilbert met Elsie two years ago at a party in Hollywood," said the bridegroom's mother. "His letters since have been full of his admiration for her, and we are sure they will be very happy."

Young Wilson attended the Hyde Park High school and later the Y. M. C. A. school. Before he went to California three years ago he was in the real estate business in Chicago. He has had stage experience, playing in "The Trial of Mary Dugan" and the "9 o'Clock Review." He is a personal friend, according to his parents, of Julian Eltinge, and was persuaded by the latter to go to Hollywood, where he has played bits in the movies.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Sr. said they had not been informed of the couple's plans. Miss Janis announced on Wednesday that the marriage had taken place New Year's eve.

Col. Weeks Will Be Given Farewell Luncheon Today

Col. W. C. Weeks, retiring resident army engineer, who has been ordered to New York, will be given a farewell luncheon at noon today by members of the Chicago section of the Society of American Engineers at the Chicago Engineers' club, at 314 Federal street. An election of officers for the society will also be held.

DANDRUFF

A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

THE BEST WAY TO GET RID OF SKIN BLEMISHES

Cleanse the skin. Rid the pores of all clogging impurities with Resinol Soap. Then apply Resinol Ointment to heal any sore, inflamed pimples. This simple treatment used daily, has changed many a coarse, blotchy, seemingly hopeless skin into one that is clear, smooth and naturally lovely. Don't risk delay. Druggists sell Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment.

These Novels Seem to Tell of Americans

Reviewer Wonders if They Really Do.

"Knickerbocker Blood," by Elizabeth Thomas [Farrar & Rinehart].

"That American Woman," by Alec Waugh [Farrar & Rinehart]. Published today.

BOTH of these books are set in New York City for at least part of the time, and deal to some extent with the moneyed classes. Each book is an example of a different type of satirical novel; and the varying degree of their success depends upon the extent to which the authors adhere to their chosen method.

ELIZABETH THOMAS.

"Knickerbocker Blood" is extremely successful light satire. Augusta Van Bleeker of New York, the titular as well as the moral head of Van Bleeker, Inc., belongs to one of the oldest, finest, and at present most moth eaten families. She is eighty and despite "a face whose disintegration was so unmistakably prophetic of the Ultimate Defeat," she is still an awe-inspiring figure with her satins and velvets and brocades, her diamond collars, her bejeweled bulk. Though she rules her clan, consisting of children, grandchildren, great grand children, their sisters, and their cousins, and their aunts, with an iron hand, she still has a soft spot in her heart for the prodigal son who long since disappeared from the Van Bleeker New York.

ALEC WAUGH.

Into this atmosphere of wealth, creaking dignity and never-to-be-forgotten blue bloodedness, comes Allegra, the daughter of the long lost prodigal and a questionable Spanish countess. Things begin to happen fast and furiously, things that upset the Van Bleekers' long established security. Allegra is beautiful and young but she has a weakness for handsome dynamic men who think little of morals. When one happens to be the husband of her cousin, sparks fly indeed. Though this novel is not strictly realistic, the truth behind the exaggerated portraits and behind the descriptions of a certain phase of New York society that has seen its day, increases the significance of the book. A superficial reading reveals a satiric, and sometimes almost vicious picture of characters and events. Nevertheless through the literary methods of caricature and underlining the author succeeds effectively in drawing the contrast between two eras.

In "That American Woman," Gordon Carruthers, a young English novelist, decides to travel around the world on his royalty returns. He arrives in New York eventually and meets Faith, the wife of a very wealthy business man. Her dazzling beauty and her attitude toward life confuse him completely. He goes back to England. There he meets a woman he loved in his youth. Finally he becomes acquainted with an American actress in London who is not unlike Faith. His tortuous pursuit of Faith to the Riviera and back to New York and his reactionary disgust of her form the substance of the novel.

There are complications and misunderstandings throughout his affair with her that to him result primarily from the fact that she is an American. The conclusion of what seems to be an inconclusive romance is withheld until the end.

The novel starts out to be light and cynical, but with each chapter the touch gets heavier and heavier. The character of Faith never seems real but rather merely a bundle of the author's personal impressions. She appears less a typical American woman, as the title of the book labels her, than an incomprehensible symbol.

There are many long and tedious passages about American life. One deals at length with prohibition; one with the American tourist, etc. Alec Waugh tells us everything he thinks about our country, his interpretations of the various aspects and approaches to life, known abroad, as American phenomena, yet the author's comments reveal at best only a twisted and fragmentary view of this country. There are other passages about the trade of an author; how he should write, when and about what. All these irrelevant interspersions are sometimes interesting in themselves and would no doubt be valuable as examples of the expository essay. In a novel, however, that is neither profound nor light while attempting to be both, they merely impede the progress of the narrative.

"Dance Team" Is Jolly Talkie, Well Cast, Too

James Dunn, Sally Eilers Get a Hand.

"DANCE TEAM."
Produced by Fox.
Directed by Sidney Lanfield.
Presented at the Oriental theater.

THE CAST.

Jimmy Mulligan	James Dunn
Poppy Kirk	Sally Eilers
Cora Stuart	Minna Gombell
Fred Penworthy	Edward Crandall
Jane Boyden	Nora Lane
Alec Prentice	Ralph Morgan
Herbert Wilson	Harry Beresford
Benny Weber	Charles Williams

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

When it comes to picking teams, the Fox company is certainly acquainted with its w. k. vegetables. Sally Eilers and James Dunn, who co-starred so memorably in "Bad Girl," were associated with Mae Marsh in "Over the Hills" and now play opposite each other in "Dance Team," are a couple of nifty performers who have this and that, which includes the cardiac appeal that has made Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell such box office winners.

This picture is a screen version of a novel by Sarah Addington, and depicts the struggles, heartaches, adventures, problems and romance of two youngsters who aspire to do the sort of dancing that made the Vernon Castles famous.

Their meeting occurs in front of a radio store where both are unself-consciously practicing steps to the music being broadcast. The boy, a stranger in the city, persuades the girl to go to a nearby hall and dance with him. Here they discover their common ambition, and, later, in Poppy's lodgings in a theatrical boarding house, they form a pact to become a famous dance team—Mulligan and Kirk.

"Only you mustn't fall in love with me," says Jimmy Mulligan to Poppy Kirk. "On account of lots of good acts have split up because the partners get squashy on one another."

Kirk is agreeable—and that's the start of an association that packs more surprises of one sort and another than the kids had ever dreamed could exist.

Young Mr. Dunn gives a forthright, temperamental and lovable portrayal of Mulligan whose shining virtue is NOT modesty. Mulligan believes that Mulligan can do no wrong, until Life up and hands the cocky Irish boy the sort of solar plexus blows that Life is in the habit of dealing out to those whose conceit exceeds the speed limit.

Sally Eilers is utterly adorable as Poppy. Here's a girl who's pretty, who's smart, who can sing, dance and act, and who possesses intuition and real comedy sense.

Harry Beresford gives a rather touching performance as a broken down vaudeville monologist who can't get a job. In his scenes the writing gets pretty thick but it's the sort of sob stuff that goes over big with the r. and f. Other players perform creditably. Direction is adept and the lines pack a lot of laughs and a few sobs.

See you tomorrow!

BRITONS WILL TRY TO CLIMB 26,629 FT. PEAK IN HIMALAYAS

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A new British Himalaya climbing expedition is being formed under the leadership of Frank Smythe to attempt Nanga Parbat, in Kashmir, 26,629 feet, the highest peak in the western Himilayas. The work is expected to take three months.

The peak was visited in 1895 by a party consisting of A. F. Mummery, Gen. [then Maj.] C. G. Bruce, Prof. Norman Collie and Geoffrey Hastings. Mummery made an attempt to climb it, accompanied by a single porter, and reached 20,000 feet. Subsequently Mummery and two porters left the base camp. They disappeared and no trace of them ever was discovered.

[The highest peak in the Himalayas is Mount Everest, 29,000 feet.]

Nonsectarian Prayer Starts Day's Work for the Handicapped

One place in Chicago where an institution's staff starts its day's work with a half hour of nonsectarian worship is the Goodwill Industries, formed to assist handicapped men and women by providing them with work and wages instead of alms.

Hymns and prayers resound each morning in the Old Aiken institute at 106 South Morgan street, where the employés gather for the service. This former Methodist church was founded in 1866 and is known historically as the old church where Gen. Grant stood reviewing his troops.

Intent on getting jobs for the crippled and thus affording them independence and self-respect, the Goodwill Industries collects discarded clothing, furniture, household articles, and paper from homes, offices, and factories. Through a process of sorting, cleaning, repairing, and renovation, these articles are made salable and are disposed of through three stores at nominal prices. Funds are thus made available to pay the wages of the workers, at $3 expended for wages to every $1 received in contributions, according to Walter C. Logue, superintendent.

George W. Dixon, Samuel Insull Jr., Arthur Tuttle, the Rev. John Thompson, Dr. Harry E. Mock, and Raymond G. Kimbell constitute the board in charge of the Goodwill Industries, whose headquarters are at 1020 West Monroe street. Among the enterprises conducted by the organization are two wood yards, where the deaf heads of families are employed, and the Goodwill Women's workshop at 126 North Wells street, which is maintained for the benefit of the unemployed women, where they receive $3 per day for their work.

Franklin to Be Recalled by Old Time Printers

Members of the Old Time Printers' association will observe the birthday of "Benjamin Franklin, Printer," tomorrow afternoon and night. Although Franklin's birthday falls on Sunday, the celebration will take place on Saturday.

With appropriate ceremonies a wreath will be placed on the Franklin monument erected in Lincoln park by Joseph Medill at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The printers will meet at 6:30 o'clock in the Palmer house for a reception. After an hour of "trade talk" the guests will sit down to a banquet, which will be followed by dancing until early Sunday morning.

Club to Learn About Curative Value of Work

Northwestern Shop Run by Doctors' Orders.

Just how and why science has devised methods and machines to bring flexibility back to stiff joints and to strengthen paralyzed muscles, will be explained on Wednesday to the Chicago Woman's club in a program on occupational therapy.

Specifically the afternoon will be devoted to description and explanations of the work now in progress in the curative shop at Northwestern university medical school, sponsored by that organization.

Recovery from disease or injury is appreciably hastened by the utilization of the numerous facilities of this workshop, which improves the patient's mental attitude at the same time and rate as his physical conditions grow better. In some cases mere rhythmic exercises are prescribed, usually for the development of some affected muscles, sometimes heat and light are applied to a joint that has stiffened, and later the exercise is given, regularly and increasingly long, to bring back gradually the normal functions.

Whenever possible the patient is put to work fashioning some tool or small article, or learning some craft in which the motions automatically develop the strength or the flexibility of arms and legs. Watching his own accomplishments as the work grows is a stimulant to the mentality of the sick person, just as the exercise is a stimulant to his physical being.

Miss Henrietta McNary is instructor in occupational therapy. Work with infants and preschool age children who are suffering from all sorts of congenital injuries of the nervous system, and motor disabilities, is progressing at a gratifying pace. Instruction is to be given in the shop to physicians, medical students and physical therapy technicians, with university credit extended for the latter.

Movie Gossip from Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The Fox studio, which has sprung a lot of recent sensations with its reorganization and employment shifts, sprung another new one at a mass-meeting of employés last night.

The three thousand employés were told they had been assembled for the purpose of stabilizing studio morale and starting a new form of charitable work to care for needy families.

D. E. McIntyre, who, during the sick leave of General Manager Winfield Sheehan, and the the sudden New York trip of Acting Manager Sol Wurtzel, is handling affairs at the studio, urged the employés to participate in what he called "the five friends' plan." He said participation was to be voluntary. Explanation of the "five friends" plan was:

"In essence, the five friends' plan is the grouping of employés in squads of five. Each squad takes one worthy family. A worthy family is one suffering from economic forces over which it has no control. Each squad of five dedicates itself to overcome the hardships of one worthy family." Two hundred such "squad leaders" of groups of five were nominated.

Employés received the proposals with mixed feelings.

McIntyre declared the Fox plant will stage the biggest benefit show ever put on in Los Angeles when Will Rogers returns from the orient, with Rogers and Willie Collier handling the entertainment, and all this studio's other stars billed for specialties. All income will go to the charitable work.

Benjamin (Barney) Glazer, motion picture executive, and Sharon Lynn, red haired actress, today chartered a plane for a wedding flight to Yuma, Ariz., tomorrow. A wedding supper is scheduled for the party at home of Dolores Del Rio tomorrow night. Miss Del Rio is to be matron of honor and Ben Lyon, Bebe Daniels, Carmelita Geraghty, John Gilbert, Rene Davies, Mr. and Mrs. William Demille, Carey Wilson, and Willys Goldbeck were asked to join the wedding party.

Lupe Velez is not getting well as fast as anticipated after fainting at Columbia studio last Monday. She was still in bed and under doctor's care today. Her illness is described as a bad cold.

Before Gary Cooper returns to Hollywood from Africa to resume his interrupted film contract he will engage in a big game hunt, his father was advised in a cable today.

The high spot in the life of Darryl Zanuck, production executive for the Warner - First National - Vitagraph merger, came yesterday with receipt of word that the United States Polo association, governing body in the mallet sport, has given him an official handicap rating of one goal. Zanuck organized a polo team of movie executives called the Los Indios, here during the last year and has become the most rabid player in California.

Court Enjoins "Tatler," Rater of Debutantes

Halts Stock Sales of the Journal of Gossip.

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The magazine Tatler and American Sketch, whose practice of grading debutantes like prize blue, red and white ribboned Pekingese has punctured and punctuated the activities of many a social bud, was permanently enjoined from further stock sales today by Supreme Court Justice Charles J. Druhan of Brooklyn.

The injunction was granted on a motion by Assistant Attorney General Paul J. McCauley, head of the state bureau of securities, whose recent investigations of the Tatler and the magazine Town Topics, a rival publication, led to an announcement by the latter that it was suspending publication because of the unfavorable publicity.

Justice Druhan also signed an order enjoining John C. Schemm, president of the Carlton Publishing company, which published the Tatler; Albert W. Gradiner, vice president; John H. Hade, a stock salesman; the Carlton Publishing corporation as a corporation; the Windsor Publishing corporation, an affiliated organization, and the Society Service Bureau, Inc., which occupies the same offices and handles publicity for persons in society.

Schemm, besides his duties as editor of the Tatler, the investigation disclosed, also was "Audacious," the anonymous columnist who had classified the debutantes of a dozen cities in recent years according to his notions of their social standing, family background and ability to wreck havoc with the stag lines. In between times Schemm also contributed barbed comments about various persons socially or financially prominent.

Following complaint against the tactics employed by some of the salesmen for the Tatler, Attorney General John J. Bennett Jr. ordered that an investigation be made into the publication's affairs.

During the course of the investigation it developed that about $250,000 worth of stock had been sold in the last five years, although the corporation had never made any money.

Some of the stockholders questioned told of being offered "expert publicity" for their daughters and of how the lure of an "A" classification instead of a "B," "C" or even "E-Z" grade in the debutante lists was dangled before their eyes as an instrument to purchase stock.

Noted Economists to Talk Jan. 27 at U. of Chicago

Noted economists from all parts of the United States will gather at the University of Chicago on Jan. 27 for a four day conference on "gold and monetary stabilization."

Four set lectures are on the program. Prof. Jacob Viner, formerly special expert for the United States tariff commission and for the shipping board, will discuss "The Balance of International Payments and the Gold Standard." H. Parker Willis, former secretary and director of research for the federal reserve board, will speak on "Federal Reserve Policy in the Depression."

"Gold and the Business Cycle" will be the subject of Dr. Gottfried Haberler of the University of Vienna, and "The Future of the Gold Standard" will be outlined by Prof. Lionel D. Edie of the Investment Research corporation.

Harold L. Reed of Columbia university will be chairman of the meeting. Among those who will attend are Irving Fisher, Carl Snyder of the federal reserve bank of New York, and Harold G. Moulton of Brookings institute.

THE STAGE

"IF Booth Had Missed," a drama by Arthur Goodman based on the assumption that President Lincoln was not assassinated in the spring of 1865, was placed in rehearsal yesterday by William A. Brady and associates. One of its scenes will represent Lincoln defending himself in the senate against impeachment. Mr. Brady is not ready to announce his choice of actor for the rôle of Lincoln, but says that he will make the final decision next Monday. Clyde Franklin will appear as Gen. Grant, and Royal Dana Tracy as Edwin S. Stanton.

Eddie Cantor and George Jessel will begin a week's engagement as entertainers at the Chicago theater today. They will give four performances a day; and the approximate times of their appearances are 12:30, 2:55, 6:53, and 9:29 p. m.

Subscribers to the Chicago season of the Theater Guild will find a bargain in Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra." It counts as three plays in manuscript; it covers two playlengths in acting time; and the subscribers will get it for the price of one regular ticket. In New York, on the other hand, the Guild's subscribers are paying two prices for the privilege of sitting through this plus-four drama.

The schedule of the touring company of "Mourning Becomes Electra" calls for a Chicago première on Feb. 15 at the Blackstone. There is a chance, however, that a week's booking in Cleveland may be inserted, in which case "Electra" will not begin to mourn at the Blackstone until Feb. 22.

The cast that Elmer Rice, as author-manager, has been organizing for a Chicago run in his "Counselor at Law" was completed yesterday. It contains Otto Kruger in the rôle that Paul Muni is acting in New York, Mary Servoss, Clara Langsner, Dorothy Day, Vincent Sherman, Doris Underwood, Thomas Shearer, Joseph Holicky, Birrell Rawls, Sue Moore, and Mae Berland. The play will appear at the Selwyn theater Feb. 7.

Jacob Ben-Ami, who will bring the drama, "Samson and Delilah," to the Adelphi theater next Sunday night, is eager to appear in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," a play whose dual leading rôle is red-lettered in the biographies of Richard Mansfield. There are hints that he might give a special matinée performance of the old melodrama during his Chicago engagement.

Roman Bohnen, who won a following as a character actor during his five years of faithful and effective service with the Goodman theater's repertory company, is prominent in the cast of "As Husbands Go," which comes to the Blackstone theater next Monday night. He appears as a gray haired fortune hunter from Paris, by name Hippolyte Lomi.

Owen Davis, most prolific of American dramatists—he has written about 150 plays, including a Pulitzer Prize winner—is undertaking the biggest job of his literary career. He is making a dramatization of Pearl Buck's novel of Chinese peasant life, "The Good Earth," which figured on the best seller lists not so long ago.

The Loop End theater, formerly the Rialto, which has been offering vaudeville shows of late, will return to its former policy of burlesque shows and films today. The burlesque entertainment of the week is called "Beauty, Youth and Folly." C. C.

Hutchins Tells Trustees the New U. of Chicago System Proves Success

The new educational plan at the University of Chicago was described as unqualifiedly successful from the standpoint of administration by President Robert M. Hutchins in a speech last night at the annual trustees' dinner to the faculty in the Shoreland hotel.

"The deans have become what it was hoped they might become, vice presidents in charge of their divisions and schools," said Dr. Hutchins. "We have obtained already, I think, a divisional consciousness which supplements, but does not supplant departmental consciousness."

President Hutchins said that the hope in the financial situation was the spirit of the faculty, the attitude of the board, and the history of the university.

"The university was organized and financed in a period like this," he added. "It has survived on expansion that went on at a rate that was almost preposterous; it has survived under all kinds of conditions, financial, climatic, educational and presidential."

Other speakers were Harold H. Swift, president of the board of trustees; Ernest E. Quantrell of New York and Thornton Wilder.

Yankee Speech Running Down, Professor Says

Avers Tired Bootlegger Sets Standards.

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The spoken language is degenerating in the United States and Broadway is receding into the "jargon of the jungle," Dr. Allan Sinclair Will, professor of journalism at Columbia university, asserted today. He presented a study on the growing use of slang in this country. Dr. Will declared that the common use of such phrases as "O, yeah," "okay," "didja," shows significantly that language degeneracy is taking place.

"The recurrence of the sound of 'O' in many expressions now heard is significant," Dr. Will reports. "It means going back to one of the first words heard in the primitive forest. At the birth of speech when prehistoric man was struck by a stealthy arrow or confronted by a hungry tiger ready to leap at him, he exclaimed 'O,' probably the first word ever heard from the mouth of man, and now Broadway is doing it and thinking it smart."

Another symptom of decadence in speech is the running of words together, Dr. Will pointed out, adding that conversation is now regarded largely as a waste of time because of the movies, the radio, the automobile and other diversions that absorb the attention of the majority.

Furthermore, he said, letter writing is falling into the discard, because of the ready resource of the telephone for ordinary communication. He declared that much of the speech disseminated by the radio and the dialogue of the talking pictures is graded down to suit hearers of "moronic comprehension," notably the "racketeer and the bootlegger, who after a hard day's work must be beguiled by mammy songs and sentimental slop about little cabins down on the farm, written in the basest doggerel."

Nearly 364,000 Meals Served to the City's Needy School Pupils

Almost 364,000 meals were served to needy students in Chicago's public schools by THE TRIBUNE'S Hungry School Children's fund during November and December. This was revealed yesterday in a report from Miss Frances L. Swain, head of the household arts department of the board of education which administers the fund.

"In November and December money from the fund provided 63,266 meals at a cost of fifteen cents each to high school and junior high school students," the report stated. "A total of 300,652 meals at five cents each were served to elementary school children."

In addition to the aid given by the fund, teachers and principals and others gave directly to the schools, making possible free lunches for thousands of other school children.

The gifts of TRIBUNE readers are welcomed to provide free lunches for children who otherwise would go without. Yesterday's contributions are as follows:

$10—Mrs. William J. Watson, Anna Post.
$5—851 N. Sheridan-rd., Highland Park.
$4—A Friend.
$2—Anonymous. Anonymous.
$1—A Friend, Mrs. Elizabeth Weaver, McL.

Total	$ 36.00
Previously acknowledged	31,688.69
Grand total	$31,724.69

Gifts should be sent to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower.

Freshman Frolic at Urbana Set for Tomorrow Night

Urbana, Ill., Jan. 14.—The freshman frolic, outstanding social event of first year students, will be held on the University of Illinois campus Saturday night. The dance will be in the men's gymnasium. The decorations will portray a scene of an early colonial garden and home.

CHARLOTTE TUTTLE.

W. M. ENGER.

Approximately 500 couples will dance to music furnished by "Tweet" Hogan and his Drake hotel orchestra, which broadcasts nightly over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station. The grand march will be led by Walter M. Enger, Urbana, president of the class and chairman of the frolic, and his guest, Miss Charlotte Hope Tuttle, also of Urbana.

High School Glee Clubs Hold Competition Tonight

Selected choral groups from senior high schools throughout the city will hold their seventh annual glee club and chorus competition at Orchestra hall tonight. The program includes numbers by six girls' glee clubs, five boys' glee clubs, three choruses of a hundred voices each, and three large choruses. The arrangements were made under the direction of H. Ray Staater, supervisor of vocal music.

Rachmaninoff Again Delights Audience Here

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Under the proper circumstances it might happen that Sergei Rachmaninoff's Third Concerto for piano would become a best seller with orchestral audiences. Those who have been attending the Chicago Symphony orchestra's concerts will remember how only a few seasons ago Vladimir Horowitz knocked a pair of audiences completely, if temporarily, out of their sanity by the way he played it. And then the composer, Rachmaninoff himself, did the same thing last night.

A certain qualification is desirable here. The proper circumstances must include first of all pianists who can play it. So far not many have tried. It is a test for the mightiest. It even sounded last night as though when Mr. Rachmaninoff composed it, he pushed it just about to the limit of his own spacious and highly efficient technic, and that if he had added much more to it, something would have to explode.

But it is safely inside his limit. If he had a great show out of its immediate predecessor last Tuesday afternoon, he made a greater one out of this. It was all excitement and enthusiasm, the thunder of drums and the dashing charge of cavalry. Incidentally, it had a great deal of surpassing beauty, too, splendid melody and stimulating rhythm.

Rachmaninoff week with the orchestra would seem to have been a great popular success. Last night's program had only the change of concertos to differentiate it from Tuesday's. There was mild applause for the Aria [Vocalise], growing interest in "The Island of the Dead," great applause for the five Picture Studies. There was also the rise of the audience when Mr. Rachmaninoff came on the stage and an orchestral fanfare when he left. But also when he left there was not only handclapping from the audience but loud and spontaneous shouting. This rather differentiates the event from the vast majority of orchestral concerts.

Mario Chamlee concluded this season's series of Kinsolving Musical Mornings yesterday with a song recital at the Blackstone hotel. It registers as one of the important musical observances of the season. For if Mr. Chamlee is an opera singer of high potency, among all tenors, he is even better in recital. He has a voice that glorifies what he sings, a marked preference for singing good things, and a fine taste in their presentation.

He went from lieder to aria and back again through songs in French and English. Incidentally, he introduced a new song which is one of the best of the season, Robinson's "The Chudderweaver." Finally, his success with the audience is not to be measured in mild terms.

Too Humble Male Often Grates on a Woman's Nerves

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"He is everything I ever hoped for in a man—ambitious, does not drink or smoke, and is well educated. Some time in the past he made a mistake. I know about it, and it makes no more difference to me than some ancient Greek war. Yet, he centers his whole world around that error and cannot understand how it can be so unreal to me.

"He says I have been wonderful but he does not deserve so much goodness. I'm willing to take him as is, but with grim determination he insists he cannot let someone he cares for share his burden. Is the man sincere or just stalling?

"He evades the subject of marriage because he thinks he is unworthy. Yet, he is not willing to give me up. We are both near 30 and good years are going to waste.

"Tell me what to do with a person like that. If I am indifferent, he accepts it as something he deserves. If I am angry he listens calmly to my biting words and takes them as part of his punishment. I never have and never will mention the error.

"PEARL."

The leading question to me is whether you would honestly want to marry a man with a complex like that! How long you could stand being married to so grovelling a creature, is the question. He may be fine in other respects, but no strong minded woman could tolerate for long that abject behavior.

Mistake or no mistake, he cannot turn himself into a doormat specimen and expect any woman to have respect for him. A woman might for a time endow him with her surplus mother-love devotion, but a life period of catering to abject humility is a test not many women are equal to.

A good psycho-analyst might put the man in the way of acting the male part more agreeably. I'd try and turn him over to one and see what that result might be. Or, else, you will have to make him take a pledge never to bring up the subject again and under no circumstances to base his actions with you on the mistake plane.

He may be one of those weak men who play on women for sympathy all out of proportion to their just deserts and needs. The trouble is, they keep on playing until the woman begins to wonder just what manner of infant she has on her hands.

Onlooker Sometimes Knows More About Child than Parents

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

There are some difficulties brought to the writer of this column for which there seems to be no solution. People who are keenly interested in children, not their own, are the ones who present them. Here is part of a letter from an aunt who has several sets of nieces and nephews:

"I know I have done a great deal for the children with just a little cooperation from their parents.

"Now, you wrote a series of articles, one time, on children being for parents only, and in-laws keeping hands off. I don't think you ever took into consideration the fact that at least occasionally you find a grandparent, or aunt, or uncle who might give a child kinder, more intelligent, care than a parent.

"Do you honestly think I am treading on sacred ground and should adopt some babies of my own and shower them with the blessings I feel I could give to any normal child, if I could have it early enough in life and at the same time shut my eyes to the mental and spiritual cruelty I see in one of the homes?"

Questions of this kind—that is from the relatives' side of the fence—come in often. The solution is difficult—or impossible.

Speaking generally, when relatives live in a family where there are children and try to help the parents in training them, the result is usually confusion for the children and hard feeling between the grownups. Sometimes the aunt or grandmother is much wiser with children than the father and mother put together.

But even so, they cannot force their way into the rearing of the children. After a reasonable amount of friendly effort, there is nothing for them to do but stand aside and let events take their course, simply giving to the children as much love and understanding as they can.

And where a woman has the means, and cares so much for children, and understands them I think she would do well to adopt some babies of her own, for her happiness and for the happiness and gain of the children.

Will Discuss U. S. Policies.

Dr. Harry D. Gideonse, professor of economics at the University of Chicago, will speak on "The Economic Foreign Policy of the United States" at the Friday morning forum in the Abraham Lincoln center at 700 Oakwood boulevard today. Dr. Gideonse served two years as director of the International Student work at Geneva, Switzerland.

Graceful Carriage Enhances Every Gown Milady Wears

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Maybe I harp overmuch on carriage. I suppose all of us women have a pet beauty enthusiasm, and this happens to be my greatest one. Of course, I love the sight of a lustrous, beautifully coiffed head, of flashing white teeth, or artistic, beautifully groomed hands. But there is nothing that gives me quite the same joy to behold as an exquisite girl in sure, graceful, undulating motion.

And I think every one responds instinctively to poised and lovely movements. I've seen it demonstrated time and again in the applause paid a dancer. And, more to our point, in the instantaneous applause that greets one particular model at a dress showing.

There's always one girl who brings down the house. She may be no prettier than the others. The clothes she is modeling may be no more distinctive. But there's that something in the way the girl moves, the way she turns, the way she carries herself that electrifies the audience into a quick outburst of applause. On three occasions recently I've noticed this. The moment the outstanding one emerged through the drawn curtains the hand clapping began.

Of course, women have pretty largely conquered the other beauty worlds, haven't they? In a group of attractive women their complexions, figures, hair, and so on, measure up equally well. So distinction must come from some other source. Clothes won't do it—without that very thing we're speaking of inside of them.

Take these models we just spoke of. These girls must have more than the ordinary physical attributes or they don't get model jobs. Yet there are constant eliminations because the girls haven't the carriage to set a dress off well. And that shows just how important is this thing of which we speak.

It isn't merely elasticity of movement that is wanted. It's sureness. It's rhythm. It's that hackneyed word "grace" plus style. Style of motion, if you know what I mean. The vocabulary for describing bodily movement is a bit inadequate. But I guess "style" is the thing we're after. Note this thing the next time you are in a feminine gathering. See who has and who hasn't it.

Garbo, of course, has it. Dietrich, too. Lynn Fontanne is blessed with it.

Audience Gets Its Day as Critic of Musical Programs

Just why various world renowned singers, pianists, conductors and violinists are liked and disliked by America's "Main Street" was revealed yesterday. Leading women and a scattering of men music lovers from 230 towns and cities and 42 states met in the Palmer house. They opened yesterday a three day convention of the National Civic Music associations to discuss artists who performed under the plan of the Civic Concert service during the year.

A young woman from Ohio arose and said what she thought of Misha Levitzki, internationally known pianist.

"We didn't like his attitude toward his audience at all, and I want to say right here and now that he should change it," she said. "He was indifferent and cold to his audience when we were trying to make him feel at home, and we resented it, I can tell you."

"Well, Memphis has had Levitzki twice," another woman said, "and we were delighted with him."

A music lover from Quincy said that Quincy liked Elly Ney well, except for the heavy part of her program at the end, "which naturally they didn't like," she said.

A Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., woman said that Florizel Reuter "held a Wisconsin Rapids audience, which is saying a lot."

Imports Snow for Ski Meet Set for Sunday

ONE is met by the same response in every one of the suburbs and towns near Chicago when the question, "What is doing?" is asked of a resident—"Practically nothing; we're praying for cold weather and snow and ice, and in the meantime we are doing nothing."

"Doing nothing," however, doesn't mean literally that, for contract, backgammon, and all sorts of indoor games are being played at all the small gatherings which enliven these dull days in the north, west, and south communities.

Out in Lake Forest a new game—peggotty—is quite the rage, we are told, and often when bridge and backgammon are being played by some of the guests at a luncheon or dinner party, others will be kneeling on the floor playing peggotty. "Murder" continues to be a popular game, and good old charades are coming back into favor; and so it goes when there isn't any skating or tobogganing or skiing, or any of the things that one expects to be enjoying at this time of the year in this climate.

The Norge Ski club isn't depending on the uncertainties of nature to provide snow for its ski meeet Sunday in Cary, however, for snow from northern Michigan has been imported, and there will be a ski meet unless a warm rain spoils everything, which we hope it won't. There will be numerous gay parties driving to the meet from towns fairly near the slide, and many of the young hostesses in Cary, Barrington, Lake Forest, and Libertyville are planning to have guests for "brunch" and then motor to the slide. It is rather interesting to discover how many of the young couples who are spending this winter in the country, having found it not economically wise to shut up their country places and come to town for the winter months as they have done previously, are enjoying life so much in the country that they say they think they will forego city life entirely in the future, except for brief excursions into town for parties and a bit of night life occasionally.

Grace Quinlan Married to Joseph E. Otis Jr. Yesterday.

The marriage of Miss Grace Quinlan, daughter of John F. Quinlan of Grand Rapids, Mich., to Joseph E. Otis Jr. of 1415 Astor street was solemnized yesterday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Coe in New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Otis will sail tomorrow on the Mariposa for a six weeks' cruise through the Panama canal to California.

The Wig and Powder club, that group of interesting women who are interested enough in dramatic art to be banded together for the purpose of reading, producing, and reviewing plays, is meeting this morning at 11 o'clock at Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell's apartment in the Lake Shore Drive hotel. They will be Mrs. Haskell's guests at luncheon after the meeting. The club is not producing any plays this winter, just reading them at their fortnightly meetings, but probably the results of this year's work will be seen in some brilliant production next year.

Princess Der Ling Arriving Today; Has Full Program.

Princess Der Ling will arrive at the Palmer house at 11 o'clock this morning and at a few minutes after 11 she'll be whisked away for 10 or 12 hours of entertainment. Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed will take her to hear Claire Dux sing at the Friday club meeting at the Fortnightly and afterwards they will have luncheon and attend the Symphony with Mrs. Waller Borden.

Mrs. Howard Linn will give a tea for the princess after the concert, and in the evening she will attend a dinner at the Quadrangle club before Dr. Pope's lecture at the Renaissance clubrooms. Mrs. John Paul Welling, former president of the Friends of China, will introduce the princess to the Town Hall audience at her lecture tomorrow morning at the Palmer house.

The Woman's Athletic club has cards out for a musical on Thursday morning, Jan. 21, at 11 o'clock, the program to be given by three members—Marie Morrisey Keith, Harriet Lowden Madlener, and Elsie Dixon Faithorn.

The president and officers of the Renaissance society announce an illustrated lecture by Arthur Upham Pope, Ph. D., director of the American Institute of Persian Art and Archæology on "General Principles of Persian Art," in the auditorium of the Oriental institute of the University of Chicago tonight at 8:30 o'clock. The museum of the institute will be open to visitors one hour before and after the lecture.

The snapshots of Arthur T. Aldis taking the sun in the patio of the house he and Mrs. Aldis have in Winter Park, Fla., this winter, which some of the Aldises' friends received in Christmas cards, seem to indicate that Mr. Aldis is much better in health than when he left here. Letters from the Aldises and Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, who also has a house in Winter Park, bring the news that Mrs. Lathrop is better, too.

Mrs. Aldis' nieces, Mrs. A. L. H. Dickson and Mrs. Ernest Kilroe, both of Lake Forest, also have houses in Winter Park this year, Mrs. Dickson and her children, Harry and Nancy, having motored down about a fortnight ago, and Mr. Kilroe, Mrs. Kilroe and her youngest daughter, Frances Acher, having gone quite recently. Mrs. Kilroe's oldest daughters, Mary and Alma Louise, have returned east to school so they are not a part of the family colony at Winter Park.

HER DRAWINGS DISPLAYED

[Florence Hendershot Photo.]

Drawings made by Miss Alice Bradley on her trip to Africa last year with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Bradley, are being exhibited at the Cliff Dwellers' club. Miss Bradley attends Miss Weavers' school in Tarrytown, N. Y.

Mrs. T. A. Potter Goes East; Mrs. Joseph Leiter Here.

Mrs. Thomas Albert Potter of Lake Forest has gone to Saranac Lake for a brief stay. Mr. and Mrs. Potter and their children, Tom, Gordon, and Joan, spent the holidays in Canada and had a glorious time taking part in the winters sports, and probably Mrs. Potter is having some of the same life at Saranac. Tom has returned to school in the east.

Mrs. Joseph Leiter and her niece, Miss Audrey Campbell, came up from the Leiters' winter place at New Orleans Monday to be with Miss Campbell's brother, Colin, when he had an emergency appendectomy in the Passavant hospital on Tuesday. The patient is getting along splendidly and just as soon as he is able to be moved to the Leiter residence on Banks street, probably in about a week, his aunt and sister will dash down to Washington for a brief visit with Mrs. Leiter's mother, after which they will return to New Orleans for the rest of the winter. Mr. Campbell will join them there as soon as he can travel.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Knight of New York are visiting Mrs. William C. Niblack of 1242 Lake Shore drive. Mr. Knight is the artist who painted the murals depicting prehistoric life which were given to the Field museum by Ernest R. Graham.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dick are leaving next Tuesday to join their yacht, the Chieftain, in Florida waters. They hope to have their sons, Albert B. Jr. of Chicago and Lake Forest, C. Mathews of Washington, Edison of Chicago and Lake Forest, and Sheldon of Provincetown, Mass., and their wives as guests some time during the season, and perhaps some of their Chicago friends who find it possible to take brief vacations in the southland this winter.

Miss Leila Withers, daughter of the Allen L. Witherses of Winnetka, left yesterday to spend two weeks in Kansas City with relatives and shortly after her return, about Feb. 1, she will go to Hartford for a month's visit. Mr. Withers will return shortly from a California trip.

Saturday, April 30, Set for Madonna Center Benefit Dance.

Saturday, April 30, has been set as the date for the annual Madonna Center benefit dance this year. The committee hasn't decided yet where the affair shall be held.

Mrs. Malcolm Shroyer of Cary is planning to go to Nassau for a month's stay early in February.

Mrs. Carleton Holdrege and Miss Betty, who have been visiting various friends in Chicago for some weeks, are leaving today for Washington. After a visit there they will go to Annapolis, Philadelphia, West Point and New York.

Mrs. Howard L. Willett will read outstanding scenes from the three plays which comprise O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" at a meeting of the Junior Friends of Art next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the French room of the Drake. Mrs. Arthur Friedlund will sing.

Public Asked to Hike.

The public has been invited to hike with the Prairie club tomorrow afternoon from Des Plaines to Park Ridge. The party will leave the Chicago and Northwestern station at 1:34 o'clock.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover were hosts this evening to the heads of foreign missions in Washington at the annual diplomatic dinner at the White House. In addition to ambassadors, ministers, and chargés d'affaires, the guests included Secretary of State Stimson and the chairman of the senate and the foreign affairs committee of the house.

Additional guests were asked for the musical after the dinner. The program was given by Leonora Corona, soprano, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, accompanied by Harry Rowe Shelley and Emanuel Bay.

Rejuvenating Details for the Winter Frock

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—If you have a winter dress of the simple, button up in front persuasion, which you have worn until it is stale to your eyes, Paris has ideas for its rejuvenation. The addition of details in contrasting color and material will bring any dress right up to the minute in style, and refresh it as a lump of ice revives tepid water.

One of the easiest ways to brighten up a winter frock of wool is to add new sleeves in gay, contrasting silk and to put a scarf of the same silk at the neck. A belt of the same silk may be added, also, if necessary. This done, the transformation is complete.

The new sleeves, however, should be of the baggy, peasant variety—the kind seen in Rumanian blouses. These sleeves are now in their heyday of chic, and they do not give to a dress the air of having been made over, as do simpler sleeves.

The Cheruit frock shown in our sketch today is a model of the best Paris fashion, and yet it lends itself readily to the idea of transformation. The bolero blouse with its short sleeves is made of beige woolen and may be buttoned up the front over the red crêpe scarf as shown in the small sketch, or the scarf may be worn outside as shown in the large sketch. This scarf is separate from the dress and buttons in front, as shown.

The lower sleeves are of the same red crêpe as the scarf, with cuffs of beige wool tightened to fit the wrists by a flap of red that passes through a slit in the cuff. Sleeves and scarf like this could be added to any simple woolen dress by a home dressmaker. The belt is red and the skirt is buttoned in front over a yoke that is in one piece with the side gores.

Women Rehearse Charity Show Set for Jan. 28

Dress rehearsal for the benefit fashion promenade and tea to be given at the Congress hotel on Jan. 28 was held yesterday by members of the Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women. Clothes their grandmothers and mothers wore in the gay '90s and the early years of the 20th century were among the 50 year period of women's styles exhibited. In addition to the older fashions were some of the latest styles for the coming spring.

Dentists of Vienna Return to "Gold Tooth Standard"

VIENNA, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Vienna's dentists went back on the gold tooth standard today. The ministry of finance with the approval of the national bank, extended them permission to purchase the necessary metal to provide their patients with gold teeth, fillings, and bridges.

The New Colors

Alone Would Keep the Depression Out of Any Wardrobe

WEDNESDAY presents these frocks as the newest way to wear the Paris-favored colors. Then, too, they are the thrilling "first" fashions of 1932. Each one has the outstanding fashion points to develop these colors. So the frock simply shouts the new season.

Striped Silk and Woolen

Sleeves and top are of striped silk. The jacket is so short as to show the smart line of the high waist. Navy and white, black and green, brown and beige. Sizes 12 to 20 years.

$29.50

Sports Frocks, Fourth Floor.

Nail Heads—One of the Season's New Tell Tales

Cowl neckline draped in a flattering way. The belt and narrow cuffs are of nail heads. Silk crepe in black, red, bright navy. Sizes 11 to 17 years.

$17.50

Fifth Floor.

Woman's Suit Frock With a Short Jacket

The frock that looks like a dressmaker suit. It is one piece with blouse in contrasting color to skirt and jacket. Canton crepe in black and green, black and blue, navy and blue, brown and beige. Women's sizes.

$39.50

Women's Frocks, Fourth Floor.

Flowers of the Silk

Are worn in the shoulders where the sleeves begin. The wide waistcoat girdle and narrow belt worn at the natural line. Silk in green, fawn, black, chavador blue. Misses' sizes.

$39.50

Misses' Frocks, Fourth Floor.

When January Stood for "White Sales"

Your mother and grandmother came to Carson Pirie's for quality. Those were the days when lingerie was muslin and white, and yards and yards around, when table linens were white and heavy and stiff. Today's lingerie is slim and pink and silken. Linens fall in soft, rich, satiny folds—oftentimes in gay colors.

And "To Carson Pirie's for the January Sales"

is still the slogan for those of this generation with whom "quality" is the thing that makes low prices count. For the quality with which the earlier Chicagoans associated "Carson Pirie's" remains the same.

SHAMROCKS LOSE, 1-0; BLACKHAWKS FALL, 2-0

UZCUDUN GIVES LEVINSKY TEST NO. 101 TONIGHT

Battle in Feature of Stadium Show.

The Program

THE boxing program at the Chicago Stadium tonight follows:

King Levinsky vs. Paulino Uzcudun, 10 rounds, heavyweights.

Dave Maier vs. Abie Bain, 10 rounds, light heavyweights.

Baxter Calmes vs. Bob Olin, 10 rounds, light heavyweights.

George Nichols vs. Charley Belanger, 10 rounds, light heavyweights.

Yale Okun vs. Tony Cancela, 8 rounds, light heavyweights.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The pugilistic affairs of our Kingfish, Mr. Levinsky of Maxwell street, are just one acid test after another. The Kingfish never gets into a battle unless they are testing him out for something.

KING LEVINSKY.

His newest test comes tonight at the Chicago Stadium. He meets Paulino Uzcudun, the Battering Basque woodchopper from Spain. Uzcudun has never been knocked down, so there's one test for the Kingfish without any preliminary arrangements. Has he the power in his shoulders and arms, which ripple with muscles, to knock the woodchopper kicking?

Even His Neighbors Doubt.

Then there are other skeptics, even some of the Kingfish's neighbors, who are not satisfied that the ex-fish vendor has been tested thoroughly enough to prove his real gameness. How they get that way if they watched him fight the man mountain Primo Carnera or read about his fight with Tommy Loughran is hard to guess. But anyway, there are folks in Chicago who still countenance the thought that there might be some "yellow" in the Kingfish and they further believe the iron man Uzudun will bring it out.

The betting indicates the Kingfish is gaining in popularity and that the folks who talk about him being no match for the Woodchopper have no money with which to back up their statements. For Uzcudun ruled as the favorite at something like 8 to 5 until the lights began to blink out through the rain along the fistic rialto early last night.

Comes Levinsky Money.

Then Levinsky money showed up from every source. It flooded the market. The odds were battered down to even money, take your choice, and the rush of support to the Chicagoan hinted that you are likely to have to bet five dollars to win four today if you want your ticket on the Kingfish.

There was no news ebbing out of the training camps that would cause this change in sentiment. Neither battler did much work yesterday. Their hard drills had ended 24 hours earlier.

No bout in recent months in Chicago has created more advance speculation and street corner arguments than the one of tonight. This has stimulated business in the Stadium counting room and an enormous crowd is expected. However, no professional show has ever packed the big red and white arena on the west side and it is doubtful if the "sold out" sign will have to be hung out this evening.

King Is Confident.

Levinsky never was more confident of winning a battle. If he wins this one there is no question but that he is in the big money—that is, he is in it as far as big money goes in these days—for a couple of matches at Madison Square Garden depend upon his success tonight and also plenty of activity at Chicago's Stadium in future months.

The supporting card is one of the best ever offered at the Stadium and was made possible because three of the earlier bouts are a part of the world's championship light heavyweight tournament. They are all scheduled to go 10 rounds and the three winners are likely to become semi-finalists in the race for the light heavyweight title.

The Dave Maier-Abie Bain scrap has attracted most attention because Maier has been followed here by many of his Milwaukee admirers who can't see anything but a victory for him over Bain. They also believe he will be crowned champion.

CROWLEY AMONG 3 CONSIDERED AS COACH AT IOWA

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The list of candidates for the position of football coach at the University of Iowa today appeared reduced to three. The identity of the successor of Burton Ingwersen, resigned, is expected to be known after a meeting here Saturday.

Jimmy Crowley, now at Michigan State, is most prominently mentioned as the Hawkeye coach. Others are Chick Meehan of Manhattan college and I. J. Armstrong, coach at the University of Idaho.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Tulsa Oilers, for the second time in a week, last night tendered the Shamrocks a licking at hockey. The score this time was 1 to 0.

Though they took it on the chin, the Shamrocks showed great improvement, and all in all a worth while entertainment was staged. The officials weren't too fussy, and as a result one of the most furious encounters of the season was put on.

The quarrelsome phase of the contest reached a climax after the second period, when Leo La France took a poke at Tony Prelesnik. This assault made Tony's Shamrock blood boil and he paused to give M. La France a sound thumping, in view of all the folks in the hall.

Crowd Applauds Goalie.

Goalie Mike Karakas, who had been put on the spot in recent games by shoddy work on the part of three of the four Shamrock defense men, played well and got much applause from the customers.

The only goal of the game was scored at the start of the final period by Bob Trapp, former Blackhawk. Eddie Wiseman was the standout of the Chicago outfit. Prelesnik and Riley, his line mates, also played well.

The first period indicated the Shamrocks had undergone a lot of drilling since their last contest. The forwards worked with their usual vigor and the defense men revealed that they had been instructed to play defense.

With this new assistance, Goalie Karakas stood off some vigorous attacks. The youngster, faced with demotion, extended himself especially to make saves on close up shots by Trapp and Moffatt.

No Score, But There's Action.

Though the first period was scoreless there was enough near accomplishment to thrill the spectators. The Burns, MacKenzie and O'Neill line staged the first big melée and later the Wiseman-Riley-Prelesnik line laid down a rough and tumble barrage that produced much action and many cheers.

The fact that the second period also ended without a score seemed to leave the boys in a rather irritable mood, so much so that the fist fight between Prelesnik and La France began just as soon as the players got out of the rink enclosure.

The hockey part of the program saw both teams greatly perked up in comparison with their last performance at the Stadium.

Furnish Lively Show.

Wiseman, Prelesnik and Riley got busy after Langlois drew the first penalty of the game when the second period was eight minutes old. Throughout their shift they gave one of the liveliest shows Shamrock fans have seen in several weeks. Marker, Sheppard and Moffatt furnished the major threats developed by the visitors.

The double goose-egg disappeared before the third period was two minutes old. Trapp got the rubber past Karakas in 1:55.

A lengthy debate ensued and the referees stopped the game to listen to the fervent pleas of Manager Dye and Capt. Brydson, who contended that Trapp had kicked in the puck with his skate.

When the game was resumed the Shamrocks proceeded with great fury. This anguished effort was productive of some thrilling drives and once, midway through the period, Riley, Prelesnik and Wiseman had Goalie McCusker crawling all over one end of the rink to stave off what had seemed certain Shamrock accomplishment.

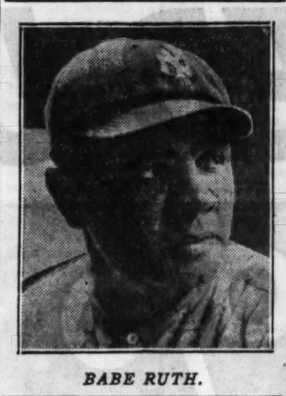
BUTLER NAMES PAUL HINKLE SPORTS CHIEF

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Paul D. [Tony] Hinkle will succeed Harry F. Bell as director of physical education at Butler university Feb. 1, university officials announced tonight. Hinkle, a member of the physical education staff in various capacities since 1924, has been head basketball coach the last few years.

Bell, who came to Butler from Lombard college two years ago, was given a leave of absence from Feb. 1 until July 1, when his contract expires, to do graduate work at the University of Southern California.

Ruth Rejects $70,000 for Season; Asks 2 Year Contract

SAYS NO



BABE RUTH.

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Babe Ruth received and rejected today an offer of $70,000 from the Yankees for his 1932 production of home runs. The contract sent to Ruth by Col. Jacob Ruppert called for one year, and that's where the hitch arose. The Babe said the salary of $70,000 was fair enough, except that he wanted a two year agreement.

The slice taken out of Ruth's salary was not as large as generally had been expected in view of Col. Ruppert's recent statement to the effect that never again would there be a ball player who was worth $80,000 a year. Ruth countered with the opinion that, since he had had a good season in 1931, he saw no reason why he should get less than $80,000 this year.

Ruppert Predicts Agreement.

Col. Ruppert, when told that the Babe wanted a two year contract, said that, having given very careful thought to the matter, he did not see how the club could do better than indicated by the one year contract.

"However, I haven't talked to Ruth yet," he said. "We probably will get together within the next couple of days to discuss the matter and I am sure we will fix everything up all right. We always have, you know."

Ruth, expressing a belief that the club owners were carrying "this cutting business" so far that they were making a joke of it, pretended that, especially on a day so fine as this, golf interested him more than his salary. He said that he did not plan to communicate with Ruppert but that, having sent his contract back, he figured the next move was up to his employer.

It's Just a Mild Touch.

The slash in Ruth's pay is slight compared with that which the Giants took at Bill Terry's check, which they reduced by 40 per cent, and with the Cardinals' avowed intention to cut Hack Wilson from $33,500 to $7,500.

In the matter of salary, Ruth is back where he was in 1927, when he signed for $70,000 a year. However, at that time the Yankees put him under contract for three years. It was a compromise, as the Babe had demanded $100,000 for one year. Two years ago, when it was time to renew his contract, the club offered him $75,000. He demanded $85,000 and an agreement finally was reached at $80,000.

DODGERS MAIL CONTRACTS

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Contracts for 1932 to the 38 players on the roster of the team today were mailed by the Brooklyn baseball club.

Although officials of the club did not announce the details of the contracts, it is believed that they carried slashes on the salaries received by several members of the team who made a poor showing last season.

BASEBALL TICKET PRICES NEVER UP, SO WON'T FALL

Harridge Defends Scale of Admissions.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The suggestion that the big league magnates contribute to the new era by reducing admission prices is not going to cause those gentlemen any loss of sleep.

Eastern ball writers have been hinting rather broadly that while the owners are on the job of reducing players' salaries to a sane basis they might also shave a little from the amount extracted from each fan for admission.

But William Harridge, American league president, who returned to his office here yesterday after a week of schedule making in New York, declared no price slashing was probable, for the sound reason that the owners believe they are giving the fan his money's worth.

Prices Never Inflated.

"Any suggestion that admission prices be lowered because of prevailing conditions overlooks the fact that in the boom period baseball did not attempt to take advantage of easy money," explained Harridge.

"Not many years ago the bleacher price was raised from 25 cents to 50 cents and bleacher accommodations reduced. The latter class of patron suddenly developed a desire to pay for a better seat. A flat $1 grand stand admission had been set up, whereas before that some of the stands had pavilion sections for which a lower admission was charged.

"The present scale of prices with their slight advance over prices of say, 20 years ago, were the result of huge investments made in steel and concrete grand stands. This rebuilding program began in 1908 and since then every big league club has been housed in a modern, costly plant."

Harridge also pointed out that during the period in which baseball admission prices have been stationary, theaters have doubled, trebled, and even quadrupled their tariffs.

Lu Blue Due for Raise.

Contracts for White Sox players have been in the mail for more than a week and comebacks may be looked for at any minute now. It is understood that reductions were made in several cases where holders of fat contracts folded up on the job last season. This included some of the pitchers who were counted upon to star.

Lu Blue is reported to have been tendered an increase. The veteran first baseman was the only member of the south side outfit who played real ball from start to finish. That was the reason for the boost. Blue felt the depression a year sooner than those now doing such lusty yelping over salary slashing. Last spring the St. Louis club trimmed about half off Blue's $14,000 contract and he refused to sign.

The Sox took him and because of the uncertainty about his throwing arm agreed to pay him on a bonus basis. He earned and was paid the bonus, but the total was short of what he had received the season previous at St. Louis.

O, Well, the Roulette Wheels Can't Always Whirl Merrily

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—At this time a certain class of Americans might find some consolation in the recollection that they once had large wads of money and took great pride in the spending thereof. In this respect, the American psychology is contrary to the European, especially the French.

The American who has funds seems to enjoy to spend the same and to feel humiliated if he is unable to pick up the check for a dinner or other party in his turn or even out of his turn. But the prosperous European, especially the Frenchman, is humiliated only if he is outfumbled and unavoidably confronted with the bad news.

The causes and probable duration of the present state of affairs are things that I know nothing about, but, if the worst comes, a large element of American citizens, when they get down to a diet of beans, will have to admit they were not cheated. They had a run for their money.

Spend If They Have It.

In fact, among those who still have money in spending quantities, I still notice a proud determination to keep on sending it in, as the phrase goes at the horse tracks, in justice to their principles, as though to put it away would be a dishonorable way of doing. Money spent, even on riotous living, goes into circulation and the reproach of hoarding cannot be leveled against the frivolous set, least of all, the set who patronize sports and, most least of all, against the horse track set.

One season in Palm Beach, a rich gentleman, wishing to give an unusual party for his friends, hired a circus to camp in his garden and play a one night stand, but on the arrival of the circus was distressed to learn that the troupe did not include a muscle or kootch dancer.

Must Have Harem Lady.

The gentleman's boyhood recollections of the circus, however, included a pleasant memory of a lady said to have been imported direct from the sultan's harem at great expense, who danced in a costume of veils and jiggling strands of beads like those of an old fashioned midwestern settin' room portiere, so he telegraphed to an agency in New York and the agency routed out of her place of respectable hibernation in Yorkville a sedate matron whose summers were annually devoted to the defense of a prof ssional reputation as the champion kootch of the world.

This foible of the rich gentleman found its way into the newspapers, and, of course, he was irritated at that, not so much because he lushed for his taste in entertainment as because the publication of such extravagance, added to the original extravagance of the private circus, might create resentment in the poor and bring down a plague of begging letters. But there were comparatively few poor in those days, and I have noticed that when real trouble descended on the country he established a free kitchen to feed thousands of men entirely at his own expense, which was pretty decent of him after all.

Could Unfold a Tale.

If old Col. Ed Bradley, the proprietor of the big horse farm at Lexington and the horse track at New Orleans, could ever be induced to flip over the pages of the books of his Casino at Palm Beach he could unfold a tale of such free spending as I doubt the world has ever seen elsewhere.

There was one evening in the colonel's place when a young woman doing society for a New York newspaper held a watch on a New York couple and in 15 minutes scored a loss of $17,000 for the husband and $6,000 for the wife, who then bowed out and went on their way to some party not at all perturbed. It was reported in the Palm Beach chit-chat or tittle-tattle, as the society writers call it, that the husband's net score for the season was a loss of $150,000, which sum, of course, had nothing to do with their bill for entertainment and existence.

Adjusts Flow of Money.

Possibly they shouldn't have had that much throwing away money, for it was common knowledge that the help in the industry from which they derived their income were paid no more than they deserved. But Col. Bradley, who always has suggested Robin Hood to me, seeming to adjust the distribution of money in a small way, probably put a lot of it into general circulation and undoubtedly used some of it directly for his personal charities.

Undoubtedly there are many people who were members of the second varsity aristocracy and the third and fourth string upper classes in those

FALCONS SCORE BEFORE HAWKS LEARN GAME'S ON

First Goal Comes Within Three Minutes.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Chicago Blackhawks, worn by a hard game last night on home ice, were unable to withstand the improved Detroit Falcons here tonight and fell, 2 to 0, in a fast but ragged National Hockey league match.

Hec Kilrea, Falcon wingman, broke away to score the first Detroit goal less than three minutes after play started, taking a pass from Larry Aurie. Detroit's two newcomers, Frank Carson and Hap Emms, wing men, teamed for the second goal late in the second period, Emms scoring as he sprawled across Goalie Chuck Gardiner. Emms was injured on the play and left the game.

Paul Thompson played a good game for the Hawks, but showed a lack of finish around the net. Once he broke through all alone and fired a wild shot that bounded high over the net. Less than 3,000 saw the match.

The Falcons took the offensive as the game opened, Goodfellow, Aurie and Kilrea bearing down on the Hawk defense, and within three minutes Debroke away in the lead and Kilrea crossed to the center to take his pass as he split the Hawk defense. Kilrea then rode in on Gardiner alone and beat him easily.

Boucher Draw First Penalty.

Boucher drew the first penalty, midway in the period, for tripping Cooper, and Abel followed him into the box for crashing Aurie. With Chicago shy two men, the Falcons sent out four forwards and opened a five man attack. But the Hawks staved off a goal by clever stick handling.

The Falcons carried the brunt of the offense during the remainder of the period, while the Hawks had only one good chance when March broke away, but Connell beat him.

Shortly after the second period opened Noble drew a penalty for board checking, and it was the Hawks' turn to pile in with four forwards. The Falcons were in fine defensive form, however, and Lowery's drive into Connell was the only real threat during Noble's absence.

The Falcons were on the defense again a few minutes later when Smith was chased for playing without his stick, but the Hawks couldn't organize a passing attack. Wentworth's penalty was the signal for a flying five man Falcon drive, but Gardiner stopped everything.

Hawks Get Organized.

The Hawks put on their best attack of the evening when Carson drew a penalty for handling the puck. Big Taffy Abel carried the rubber into Detroit ice and four Hawk forwards kept it there, but Connell saved. Goodfellow's penalty late in the period turned the game into a wild Hawk attack again, but Connell saved.

As the period neared the end Carson got away down the right boards and passed to Emms, who sped in on the Hawk net. Gardiner dived out to save, but Emms drove the puck into the net.

Boucher's penalty shortly after the start of the third period signaled another Detroit five man drive. Lewis broke through twice only to be balked by Gardiner's remarkable goaling.

Thompson Shoots Wild.

The Hawks had a good chance to score midway in the period when Thompson took Lowery's rebound in front of the Falcon net, but he shot wild. Carson got through alone a minute later and drove the puck into Gardiner's pads.

With three minutes to go, the Hawks turned loose five forwards, and although they kept the puck in Detroit ice, they were unable to score.

Diegel Breaks Agua Caliente Record with 68

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Led by Leo Diegel, entrants in the $15,000 Agua Caliente golf tournament today burned up the 6,838 yard course, bringing the scores for the final two rounds of play down below anything done in the two previous meetings here.

Diegel was laying them close to the pin and sinking putts easily. He went out in 35, one under par, and came back with a 33, three strokes below perfect figures, for a 68, a new course record. The figure, coupled with the 70 he made yesterday, set Diegel two strokes in front of Charley Guest of Deal, N. J., his nearest competitor, for the $5,000 first place money. Guest scored 69 today for a total of 140 strokes for the 36 holes.

Diegel's record was tied by Paul Runyon, White Plains, N. Y., professional, but his brilliant card gave him only a tie for sixth place in the standings with a total of 144. Fred Morrison of Culver City, Cal., took a 74, and his 142 total gave him a tie for fourth place. Gene Sarazen made even par today, 72, to fall into third place with a 142 total.

Bracketed with Morrison in the fourth spot was Harry Cooper of Chicago. Steady golf was the keynote of Cooper's play. He had a 71-72. Walter Hagen hit his stride with 70. His 74 yesterday placed him in the 144 tie with Runyon. MacDonald Smith, who won the Los Angeles open early this week, withdrew because of a cold.

J. G. Huner of Pasadena, Cal., who was tied yesterday at 73 with Johnny Dawson of Chicago for first round amateur honors, was one up on Dawson tonight, having made another 73, while Dawson took a 74 for the second round.

Donie Bush to Consider Managing Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Manager Mike Kelly of the Minneapolis Baseball club of the American association today announced that Donie Bush, former manager of the Chicago White Sox will arrive in Minneapolis on Monday to discuss possibilities of his becoming the manager and part owner of the club.

Lack of Ice Forces Postponement of U. S. Skating Meet

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The United States outdoor speed skating championships, scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, have been postponed until next week, officials announced today, because of lack of ice.

The Oconomowoc Chamber of Commerce, under the auspices of which the meet is to be conducted, also asked officials of the Illinois Western Skating association to inform the Chicago stars who were to have competed of the postponement.

Many Chicago skaters arrived here early this week and practiced daily until the unusual mild weather melted the ice. Among the Chicago speed merchants participating in drills on the ice here were Eddie Stundl, Ted Keohane, Ray Wondra, and Harry Kaskey.

The Chicagoans, unless weather conditions change within the next few days, plan to leave here to go farther north in search of ice to practice. Plenty of ice was reported at Superior, Wis., and among the first to leave was Wilbur Marks, intermediate star of the Walton Athletic club of Chicago.

The meet, which originally was to have decided only the women's championships because of the many men stars taking part in the Olympic tryouts at Bear Mountain, N. Y., was changed two weeks ago.

Among the Chicago skaters who have been practicing at the Chicago Stadium indoor ice rink and will arrive here to compete in the meet next Saturday and Sunday, are Elizabeth Du Bois, Crystal Bruce, Eleanor Thiel, Elsie Mueller, and Helen Bina.

Evanston High Swimmers Beat Proviso; Record Set

Evanston High school seniors defeated Proviso in a Suburban league dual swimming meet at Maywood yesterday, 46 to 13. The Evanston Juniors also triumphed, defeating Proviso 37 to 16. George Gerzins, Evanston senior, set a new record in the 40 yard free style event, swimming the distance in 2:01 The former mark was 2:05.

Penalty and Rangers Beat Bruins, 3 to 1

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The New York Rangers continued their campaign for revenge for the defeats of other National Hockey league seasons tonight when they trounced the Boston Bruins, 3 to 1.

Two goals in the second period while George Owen, Bruin defense man, was in the penalty box, decided the game. Some great work by Goalie Johnny Roach enabled the Rangers to hold their advantage.

Murray Murdoch started the scoring for the Rangers with his first goal of the season and Bill Cook made the other two. Marty Barry scored Boston's only goal a second before the final bell.

TORONTO, 6; MAROONS, 4.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs, pace setters in the Canadian division of the National Hockey league, defeated the Montreal Maroons, 6 to 4, here tonight.

After the Maroons had scored two goals in the first three minutes of play the Leafs came back with three before the first period closed. Albert Siebert put the Maroons on even terms with the Leafs in the second period, but Toronto scored three times in the third session to clinch the game.

Charley Conacher scored two goals for the Leafs and assisted in another.

Indiana State Wins Referee's Decision, 22-21

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Indiana State Teachers' basketball team defeated Ball State Teachers of Muncie here tonight, 22 to 21. There was a dispute over the outcome, two official scorers differing on the final result. The Muncie scorekeeper had the count 22-22, but Referee Dale Miller ruled that the home score would be official.

FLYING HEELS WINS FEATURE OF HIALEAH OPENING

10,000 Attend First Card at Rebuilt Track.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The race meeting of 39 days at the rebuilt Hialeah Park track got under way this afternoon with a crowd of about 10,000, notable for the large proportion of society leaders from the east, in attendance.

John J. Curtis' 5 year old Flying Heels, carrying top weight, won the Inaugural handicap six furlongs. Don Leon was second, and the filly, Mabla, third. Vander Pool was out of the money.

Winner Makes Fast Time.

Jockey A. Snider rushed Flying Heels to the front soon after the start and the son of Flying Ebony drew away in the stretch to win by a length and a half. The time was fast, 1:11 1-5. The value of the stake to the winner was $2,490. Flying Heels paid $8.40. Vander Pool, early favorite, was beaten off.

G. W. Ogle's Prince Takalon, with Hank Mills showing the same excellent horsemanship at this track that he did at Tropical Park, won the fourth race by three lengths. He paid $4.60. Meridian Queen, which set the pace to the stretch, was second, and third. The time for the mile was Impish, from the Wheatley stable, 1:37 1-5, showing the new track to be very fast.

Playfole Wins Third Race.

Playfole, perfectly ridden by Jockey Hanford, made every pole a winning one in the seven furlongs of the third race, which engaged six three-year-olds under allowance conditions. Dr. Syntax, the even money favorite, forced the pace, but could not menace the winner. Unencumbered had to be ridden out to score a head decision over El Puma for the show. The winner paid $5.60 and was in in 1:23 4-5.

Chiltenny, a promising Chilhowee juvenile, carried the silks of W. F. Smith to victory in the two furlongs of the second event, which attracted a field of 18 youngsters.

They could live on beans for three or four years and still their consumption of beans, by volume, would hardly equal their consumption of caviar at $3 per portion in the days and nights when the going was good.

Deal Once in a While.

I notice in the trade journals of the gambling industry that the dealers still are hopefully sitting for customers at the tables in Cuba, in Florida, and in Caliente, and dealing a few licks every now and again when people happen in with money to frivol away in spite of everything. Of course, the volume of such business is way down, but I don't think any of the old customers have a right to pine because they happen to be fresh out of faro and roulette money this year. The dealers, of course, are philosophical, schooled to the idea that sometimes it's hot and then again sometimes it's cold. Otherwise they would not be dealers.

The dealers' philosophy should be a comforting one for the people who happen to be all spent out or all wiped out this year after several years of play and luxury above and beyond the expectations of common mortals.

It was hotter than all get-out for five or six years and now it just happens to blow up a little bit chilly.

C. D. G. A. NAMES 1932 PERSONNEL OF COMMITTEES

The personnel of the five major committees of the Chicago District Golf association for the 1932 season was announced yesterday in the association's annual letter to presidents of member clubs.

The 1931 work of the association, which now numbers 67 clubs in this area, also was reviewed in the letter, pointing out such developments as the new handicap system, the work of the greens committee in combating last summer's unusual conditions, and the maintenance of caddy welfare during the winter months. Eighteen events were conducted last year for member golfers, with suitable prizes for each, excluding the Joseph G. Davis trophy, presented to the association by member clubs to honor its secretary.

The new committees for 1932 are as follows:

Grounds committee—George B. Harrington, Knollwood, chairman; Gus Fosner, Bryn Mawr; Charles F. Thompson, Flossmoor, and E. C. Wurtele, Olympia Fields, in charge of forestry.

Tournament committee—Harold Burnham, Calumet, chairman; Walter Leininger, Westward Ho, and Philip Lenz, Beverly.

Caddy committee—Dr. C. H. Searle, Skokie, chairman; Richard Wagner, Park Ridge, and D. H. Skeen, Flossmoor.

Club relations committee—Harry E. Radix, Ridgemoor, chairman; A. C. Barnett, Kildeer, and J. V. Lanigan, Olympia Fields.

Handicap committee—Jack Westland, Sunset Ridge, chairman; Tom Heneage, Oak Park; Ira Couch, Glen View; Douglas Casey, Riverside; W. W. Hodgson, Oak Park; Charles Evans, Jr., Edgewater; John Lehman, Olympia Fields; Don Hamilton, Beverly; George Hartman, Midlothian, and Arthur B. Sweet, Ridgemoor.

STUNDL SEEKS THIRD PAIR OF SILVER SKATES

He's Olympic Club Hope in Senior Division.

Eddie Stundl, twice winner of Silver Skates, is the hope of the Olympic Skating club for a third championship when THE TRIBUNE'S annual races are held Jan. 23 and 24 at Garfield park. Stundl won the juvenile boys Derby in 1927. Two years later he won the Silver Skates in the junior boys' division. He has won other prizes, but these are his two championships.

If Stundl cannot win the senior men's title the Olympic club still may have the honor, since Wallace Mitchell and Richard McCarter also will compete in the race. Dick McCarter won the juvenile boys' Derby in 1925. Mitchell long has been considered one of the best skaters in Chicago and only indifferent racing luck has kept him from the list of Silver Skates champions.

Fischer, Dalton Aid Officials.

John Flickenger Jr. is another Olympic club entry who is outstanding in the boys' intermediate division. Albert Fischer, president of the Olympic Skating club, and A. T. Dalton, secretary, will, as in other years, assist the corps of officials in handling the 16th renewal of the Derbies.

The Olympic club has won other Silver Skates. Elizabeth Dubois, girls' junior champion in 1927 and senior winner in 1929, and Helen Bina, senior title holder in 1930, were members of the Olympic club. Of course, they are not eligible for THE TRIBUNE'S Derbies this year.

David Lawrence, manager and coach of the Vandal Athletic club, has entered 11 in the men's senior Derby. Buck McIntyre is captain of the team.

Tuley High Enters Team.

Tuley High school will have several representatives in the Silver Skates. Henry Adler, president of the club, yesterday filed entry for the team.

The entries for the races close at midnight Sunday night.

CENTRAL A. A. U. GYMNASTS MAKE PLANS FOR MEET

The Central A. A. U. gymnastic committee will meet at the Vorwaerts Turner hall, 2431 West Roosevelt road, Sunday to make arrangements for the annual C. A. A. U. gymnastic championship to be held some time in March, 1932.

There will be competition in five groups—junior championship, ladies' secondary, ladies' championship, men's senior secondary, men's senior championship. There will be one obligatory and one optional exercise on parallel bars, horizontal bars, side horse, long horse, and rings.

It is expected that Olympic material will be uncovered in this meet, which will enable the central division to send several gymnasts to the Olympic tryouts to be held in May or June.

Theodore A. Gross is chairman of the C. A. A. U. gymnastic committee. He is a former gymnastic champion and a member of the United States team that competed in the national turnfest in Germany in 1903.

Old Ma Nature Seems to Have Made a Mistake

BY BOB BECKER.

That old wheeze about nature never making a mistake is bothering some of the outdoor experts because of the curious things that have been happening recently in the outdoor world. Wednesday, when the warm January sun was climbing in the sky and the thermometer was in the fifties, we went for a hike along Lake Michigan, primarily, to get a look at the cardinals and other winter birds which have elected to stay north this winter.

During this walk we found that nature had played a dirty trick on a number of insects. Responding to warm weather influence we saw any number of small flying insects flitting around last year's hepatica plants on the bluff overlooking Lake Michigan.

We couldn't identify the species, but irrespective of what they were, the "thermostats" in their tiny bodies had pushed them into flying activity as if it were April instead of January. The unseasonable weather had tricked them into temporary life, the end of which, of course, is going to be a freezeup.

But the worst mistake that nature made this fall and early winter was in giving the big snow shoe hares or rabbits a pure white coat and then failing to provide any snow for a background.

This serious error occurred in several localities in our middle western states. The poor hares, all rigged out in a beautiful white fur, their usual winter overcoat so that they will have protective coloration during the winter months, flitted around through snowless swamps like white ghosts against a brown and green background. It was great for the hunters, but tough on the rabbits when they tried to hide from their pursuers.

Bird fans in Chicagoland rarely have had a better winter to get acquainted with a large number of winter birds than this one and the outdoor enthusiast who doesn't take a hike across country to observe the different species is missing a lot of fun. Reports from points in Chicagoland and nearby states tell of the unusually large number of winter residents and success in attracting them around homes.

Up our way the deep ravines which cut their way to Lake Michigan are gay with the flash of red because cardinals again are staying with us this winter along with the juncos [which roost in evergreen thickets], nuthaches, chicadees and jays. But these song birds now have to dispute possession of the ravines with flocks of gaudy ringneck pheasants, which boldly strut through the brush and on the bluffs right in the village.

MOON, I WANT YOU TO MEET MRS. MOOTS.
OH, MR. MULLINS, I WANT TO THANK YOU FOR THE WONDERFUL WAY YOU SAVED SUNNY. WHEN MR. MOOTS CABLED ME ABOUT IT IN PARIS I TOOK THE FIRST BOAT HOME.
PARIS? SAY YOU DIDN'T HAPPEN TO RUN INTO A DAME NAMED MADELON DELAY OVER THERE DIDJA, MRS. MOOTS
LET ME THINK. IS SHE THE SENATOR DELAY'S DAUGHTER?
NO MAM. SHE WAS THE JANITOR DELAY'S DAUGHTER— HUH?
AHEM! I WAS SUGGESTING THAT MR. MULLINS GO SOUTH WHEN WE DO AND MAKE US A VISIT AT OUR WINTER HOME, VICTORIA.
OH YES--- YES DO! COME SPEND A WEEK WITH US, MR. MULLINS.
A WEEK! SAY I'LL STAY A MONTH, MRS. MOOTS, I AIN'T GOT NOTHING ELSE TO DO.

POT POURRI.

THE TRIBUNE'S eighth annual Silver Football, awarded to the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team during the season of 1931, will be presented tomorrow night at Minneapolis.

Clarence Munn, captain of the Gophers last fall, whose play was held largely responsible for their success, will receive the trophy between halves of the Minnesota-Indiana basketball game. There the undergraduates, many faculty members, and alumni will be in attendance.

Reports coming from Minneapolis state the students, with whom Munn is extremely popular, intend to make it a noteworthy celebration and testimonial in his honor. Munn is the first Gopher to have received the award.

Maj. John L. Griffith, conference athletic commissioner, will accompany The Wake to Minneapolis for the ceremony.

An Evanston young woman wished to attend the picture "The Age of Love," but wanted her view all in one show instead of seeing part and then having to wait through until it began again.

So she dialed the phone number and when response was made asked, "What time does 'The Age of Love' begin?" A very surprised but unmistakably masculine voice replied, "I beg your pardon?" Now nettled, she demanded, "Isn't this the Howard theater?" "No, madam," he replied, "I suggest you try information."

Baseball players, in their salary demands, will get less sympathy than usual this year from the public, to which any kind of a job looks good right now. The principle is not different, however. Ball players' wares are perishable, years reduce their usefulness, and the best market price they can command is both natural and justified.

The Skier.

A bold figure outlined against the sky,
A silhouette of strength, arrogance, and speed,
As he jumps from the lofty snow ridges
To the white crested earth below—
A patch of scarlet on the dull gray sky.

Eyes portray the sharpness of steel;
His nerve steady and keen in his great sport,
He holds the crowd with the superb excellence
Of his daring jumps and other feats;
The skier—made great by winter's handicraft.

Concerning Solons.

Dear Harve: I've been interested in the remarks of Joe Citizen and other Wake political reformers. At Springfield I saw a large hatted, pasty, bulbous edition of state senator waddling along, so I stopped and gazed earnestly, remarking to my companion, "Why do they send such men to Springfield to vote taxes on us?" To which he answered profanely and optimistically, "It keeps them away from their home towns." Schuyler.

Norwegian Ski Stars Entered in Cary Meet

Two of the greatest ski jumpers in the world yesterday entered the Norge Ski club's 26th annual championship tournament to be held at Cary hill Sunday afternoon. They are Sigmund and Birger Ruud, brothers, who are in this country with the Norwegian team which will compete in the Olympic winter games.

Sigmund holds the official world's long distance record jump of 267 feet, established in competition at St. Moritz, Switzerland, last winter. He won first prize in the last Olympic games when he was just 20 years old.

Brother Gets Perfect Rating.

Birger recently passed his 21st birthday, but is the only skier in the history of the sport ever to have been given a perfect rating by three judges. He accomplished this in the international championship at Oberhoff, Germany, last year.

Norway's ski jumping, cross country ski runners and skaters have scored a clean sweep in Olympic competition since its inception at Chamonix, France, eight years ago. They are pinning their hopes in the Ruud brothers to continue this monopoly at the Olympic games at Lake Placid, N. Y., next month.

Consul Obtains Entry.

Because of the possibility they may be forced to jump on the "transplanted" snow, now en route to Cary hill from Escanaba, Mich., in eight freight cars, Capt. Helset of the Norwegian Olympic team and Maj. Arnesen of Brooklyn, chairman of the Norwegian Olympic committee, were reluctant to permit the Ruud brothers to risk injury before the international competition is held. The Ruud brothers have never jumped under these artificial conditions.

However, at the request of Olaf Bernts, Norwegian consul in Chicago, who forwarded a plea in behalf of the thousands of followers of the sport here, they granted permission. The Ruud brothers will leave Lake Placid today, arriving here in time to familiarize themselves with the Cary slide with some practice jumps before the competition begins there Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Joe Gratz Takes First Place in Individual Pin League

Joe Gratz took first place in the All-Star Individual Bowling league yesterday by defeating Ernie Schanz in six out of nine games to win by 1,980 to 1,910 at the Randolph alleys. In another match Eddie Krems, averaging 213, won from Dominick De Vito, 2,126 to 1,968. Krems took six out of ten games. The scores follow:

Gratz—222 191 221 217 180 199 180 168 202—1,980.
Schanz — 209 171 164 156 190 188 251 202 184—1,910.
Krems—181 190 203 245 244 235 244 193 224 190 182—2,126.
De Vito — 213 192 203 143 211 205 215 239 181 173—1,968.

Kenney Aimed to Be a Ball Player; Now He's Cue Star

This is the third of a series of sketches on players who will compete in the world's three cushion billiard meet here next week.

Leonard Kenney, another Chicago entry in the world's three cushion championship billiard tourney which starts at Mussey's Wabash avenue billiard room on Monday night, is one of the most deliberate players in the game. Kenney qualified for this third world's title play by winning the northern sectional championship last fall.

LEN KENNEY.

Kenney was born in Richmond, Ind., in 1894, one of a family of eight children. His ambition was to be a professional baseball player, despite the fact that he was a rugged lad, built more on the lines of a full back. He got his inspiration to play billiards by managing a school billiard room in 1916.

Kenney has been one of the stars in Chicago billiards for the last eight years.

Kenney competed in two other world title meets, once gaining a tie for fourth place. He hopes to finish among the first four this season, but must prove this against eleven other players with equal ambitions.

NORTHWESTERN U. MAT AND SWIM TEAMS IN ACTION

Two Northwestern teams, wrestling and swimming, will engage in competition at Patten gym today. The wrestlers will clash with Iowa State Teachers college this afternoon and the swimmers will open their season against the Detroit Yacht club in the evening.

Coach Tom Robinson will open his 23d season as Northwestern swimming coach tonight. Since he has been in charge of swimming at Northwestern the teams have won ten Big Ten championships and five national collegiate titles.

Twin Eagles Golf Club, Fee Course, Organized

Stockholders of the holding company of the Gleneagles Country club property, which merged recently with Casa Del Mar, have formed a new club to be known as Twin Eagles Golf club. The club is located at 123d street and Bell road and the 36 holes will be operated as a daily fee course. Frank Micek is president of the new club and A. R. Jacobsen, secretary.

Murphy Gets 23 Points as Bruins Win

The Chicago Bruins overwhelmed the Milwaukee Badgers last night at the Fronton, 47 to 23. At no time did the Wisconsin quintet demonstrate ability to stop the Bruin offense.

Charley Murphy, Bruin center, scored 23 points, sufficient to tie the Badgers without any assistance from his mates. However, Ralph Miller, the Chicago captain, found time to net five goals from the field. Bugge, Milwaukee forward, was the best of the visitors. He scored nine points and in the second half, when Murphy threatened to keep on indefinitely dropping the ball through the loop, he switched positions with Ross. Thereafter Murphy was under partial control.

The first half ended 24 to 14 for Chicago. In the second half Murphy counted all except ten of the Bruins' points. His last run advanced the score from 40 to 47.

Both teams played amateur rules and proved that they could keep within ordinary bounds on penalties. In the preliminary game the O'Grady Boosters defeated the Continental Illinois quintet, 22 to 17.

The Bruins meet Fort Wayne next Thursday night at the Fronton. In the first game here the Hoosiers were defeated, 18 to 14. Lineup:

MICHIGAN GETS U. S. COLLEGIATE SWIMMING MEET

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The National Collegiate Athletic swimming championship meet will be held in the pool of the University of Michigan Intramural sports building here on March 25 and 26. The meet will bring together aquatic stars who have ambitions to make the Olympic team as well as swimmers competing for national honors.

Olympic entries will be chosen largely on the basis of accomplishment here, as it is expected the American team will be made up almost entirely of college stars. It is anticipated that from 25 to 30 teams and 200 or more individual stars will compete.

Izaak Walton League Founders Hold Dinner

The 43 surviving members of the group of 54 Chicagoans who founded the Izaak Walton league ten years ago attended their annual dinner at the Palmer house last night. The club, which is devoted to the protection of wild life of all kinds, grew into a national organization that now has 2,000 chapters and 300,000 members.

Two De Paul Regulars Miss Viator Game

De Paul university and St. Viator will resume their basketball rivalry tonight when the two teams meet for a second time at the De Paul gymnasium. The Blue Demons gained a last minute triumph in a charity game played at the Chicago Stadium earlier in the season.

Two De Paul stars, Haine Coan, forward, who suffered a shoulder injury against St. Thomas, and Capt. Joe O'Connor, who is fighting an attack of flu, will not be able to play.

A. T. & T. RECORD IN DEPRESSION INSPIRING ONE

Earns Dividend and a Bit in Addition.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The American Telephone and Telegraph company, largest industrial corporation in the world, earned its dividend with something to spare last year. This announcement yesterday shows what conservatively managed concerns can do even in periods of depression. It should dissipate any pessimistic ideas that the great American industries are going to pot.

WALTER S. GIFFORD.

"While final results for 1931 are not yet available," President Walter S. Gifford said, "preliminary summaries indicate that the company earned its dividend with a small margin without taking into account its proportion of the undistributed earnings of its subsidiary companies. The earnings of these subsidiary companies, including the Western Electric company, taken as a whole, also exceeded their dividend payments."

Much Good News.

There is a volume of good news packed in Mr. Gifford's concise statement. It means that American Telephone more than earned its $9 annual dividend. Doubts concerning earnings arose several months ago when the Western Electric company omitted its dividend. But despite this fact and a net loss of 207,000 telephones in service during the year, American Telephone earned only moderately less than in 1930, when its net income was $165,544,707, or $10.44 a share.

American Telephone was not forced to draw on its surplus to pay its dividends. Neither was it forced to levy on its subsidiaries for unusual dividends or to take anything from its share of their accumulated surpluses. It long has been the policy of American Telephone to take from its subsidiaries only slightly more than enough to pay its own dividends and for this reason the subsidiaries have built up large surpluses. But both the surplus of the parent company and those of its subsidiaries still remain undisturbed. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why American Telephone stock is one of the few issues still selling above $100 a share.

Lambert Earns Dividend.

The Lambert company also earned its $8 dividend in 1931 with a small margin to spare, according to current reports. Sales for the year are estimated at about 9 per cent below 1930, in which year the company earned $9.52 a share.

MAINTAINS RATE

The New York Federal Reserve bank yesterday made no change in its 3½ per cent rediscount rate. There had been some predictions that the rate would be lowered this week, in view of the recent cuts in interest rates on bankers' acceptances and reports that the government is launching a new program of credit expansion. However, it was suggested that lower rediscount rates may be put into effect later on both the New York and other reserve institutions.

At all events, last week brought further deflation in credit. The weekly report on brokers' loans by the federal reserve board showed a further decline of $5,000,000, bringing the current total down to $563,000,000, another new low record. This also marks a decrease of $1,257,000,000 from a year ago, when the total was $1,820,000,000. The return flow of money to New York continues, with interior banks expanding their loans to brokers by $13,000,000. On the other hand, the New York banks reduced their own loans by $17,000,000 and nonbanking lenders withdrew $1,000,000.

Federal Reserve Statement.

The weekly statement of the federal reserve system, issued last night, showed practically no change in borrowings of the member banks from the reserve banks. This item now stands at $818,341,000. On the other hand, the reserve banks absorbed credit from the open money market by disposing of $61,505,000 of bankers-acceptances and $14,370,000 of government securities.

Money expansion that follows the holiday season was reversed and the return flow of funds to the banks resulted in a contraction of $15,260,000 in federal reserve note circulation, which now totals $2,635,766,000. Deposits receded $39,309,000. Gold reserves increased $16,284,000 to a total of $3,001,836,000, which is well above note circulation. Total reserves expanded $29,694,000 and the ratio of reserves to liabilities rose to 66.9 per cent, compared with 65.5 per cent a week ago.

Wm. Wrigley Co. Places Record Clock Order

William Wrigley Jr. company has placed an order with the Hammond Electric Clock company for fifty carloads, or more than 1,000,000 electric clocks, which list for $3.50. The price paid by Wrigley was not revealed. This is the largest clock order ever placed, it is claimed. With a daily output in that particular model of 10,000 to 15,000, the Hammond plant will be busy on the order for from five to six months.

GOLD STANDARD RAISES PROBLEM IN SOUTH AFRICA

Farmers Hit as They Lose Markets.

BY RODNEY BARTHOLOMEW.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DURBAN, Union of South Africa, Jan. 14.—The "ironic paradox of a bankrupt farming community in a country choked with gold" is the description applied to the present situation in South Africa as a result of the government's continued adherence to the gold standard.

The gold standard controversy has been raging in the press for weeks and public meetings throughout the country have demanded a linking up of the currency with sterling. The government, however, so far is adamant.

Farmers are the principal sufferers because of their loss of important markets and the depreciating value of farm properties. It is said that the real reason the government is so determined to remain on the gold standard is a desire to cut the lines of communication with England, regardless of the consequences.

Even the influence of the reserve bank is being thrown by the government into the struggle. Two significant changes were announced in a report which the reserve bank states it issued because of uncertainty arising from statements and public utterances in the union as well as in Europe and America to the effect that South Africa cannot maintain the gold standard, and the great difficulty experienced by some in obtaining exchange requirements.

Says It Has Resources.

The reserve bank declares it possesses substantial exchange resources and is confident of its ability to handle the exchange position effectively. Ideas to the contrary are due to misunderstanding, it insists.

The reserve bank, in order to remove irritation and discontent, is prepared first to sell exchange on London, New York, Paris, Rome, and Amsterdam at its daily advertised rates. Applicants who still find difficulty in getting exchange from commercial banks are promised extended facilities for amounts up to £1,000 ($5,000).

"No question of an unusual nature will be asked," adds the statement, but it is presumed the usual question will be insisted upon, which means the exchange is still restricted to rigidly legitimate business transactions.

Will Make Gold Payments.

The reserve bank, second, gives assurance that the public will henceforth be able to exchange notes for gold sovereigns at all reserve bank branches "in reasonable amounts at any time."

Hitherto, severe restrictions have been placed on the issue of gold coins and it will be interesting to watch the public reaction to this opportunity of "going off paper."

The statement concludes that the public can rest assured that the reserve bank is fully capable of fulfilling all its functions as a central bank effectively in the present emergency. Unfortunately, the statement does nothing to remove the root of the difficulties which is imperiling the country's economic life. It makes it no easier for South African producers to sell their goods in their chief market and get their money back without a heavy loss.

Meanwhile signs are definitely apparent of a rise in prices of goods and the importers are becoming perturbed.

United Corp. Reports 1931 Gain in Earnings

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—The United corporation reports for 1931 a net profit of $18,445,327 after expenses and charges, equal after preferred dividends to 75 cents a share earned on 14,531,197 shares of no par common stock, comparing with $16,079,527, or 78 cents a share earned on 12,360,531 common shares in 1930.

Total cost of declared value of securities owned on Dec. 31, 1931, amounting to $592,821,748, compared with $551,734,761 a year before, and the estimated market value of investments on Dec. 31, 1931, was $269,405,996. Cash made a total of $1,096,707, against $3,522,433. Outside of capital and surplus and a tax reserve of $50,139, the liabilities included a demand loan of $12,588,473, against $15,000,000 a year ago.

Household Finance to Show Increased Profit

Preliminary figures reflecting results of the 1931 operations of the Household Finance corporation show a slight increase in net profit over 1930, according to L. C. Harbison, president. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1930, the company reported net profit of $4,066,156 which was equal, after allowing for maximum participation of $5 a share on the preference stock, to $5.73 a share on the combined class "A" and "B" stock outstanding at the end of the year.

Rail Supply Buying May Be Revived

A more optimistic tone has developed in the railroad equipment business—which for the five years ending with 1930 stood at well over a billion dollars—as a result of prospects that the railroads will soon be in a position to return to the market to replace worn out and deteriorating equipment and supplies.

Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age and one of the leading railroad authorities of the country, writing in the current issue of his magazine estimates the average annual expenditure by the roads on equipment and supplies at $1,357,300,000 for the five year period ending in 1930 and that the amount fell off 47 per cent last year.

Had Quiet Year.

Last year many of the big railroad equipment firms did practically nothing in comparison with former years and in many respects 1930 was fairly lean although at that time many of the roads were attempting to make improvements in conformity with the Hoover request for unemployment relief. For instance, Baldwin Locomotive and affiliated companies had shipments totaling $22,974,000, compared with $58,521,000 in 1930—a decline of more than 50 per cent. Business booked during 1931 amounted to $22,612,000, compared with $35,900,000 in 1930.

Orders Begin to Arrive.

The New York Central railroad yesterday was reported as preparing final estimates to place orders for 175,000 tons of steel involving some $7,500,000 It was reported that these orders will be distributed among the Carnegie and Illinois Steel company, U. S. Steel subsidiaries, and the Bethlehem and Inland Steel companies.

One equipment house executive yesterday was quoted as saying that the pessimism in his business has vanished and that orders, small ones it is true, are now coming in from all parts of the country.

The interstate commerce commission has estimated that the roads will get about $215,000,000 additional revenue through the recently authorized rate increases and should a voluntary reduction in wages be secured there will be a saving of well over $100,000,000 accrue to them. Further, the western roads are to secure an additional $20,000,000 income on grains and grain products as a result of a Supreme court reversal of a rate reduction on these products.

Need "New Executives."

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A general speeding up in operation and the infusion of new blood among the executives will do much toward reëstablishing the railroads as the premier mode of transportation, J. R. Turney, vice president of the St. Louis-Southwestern railway lines, told members of the Traffic Club of New York at their monthly luncheon today.

Despite the contentions voiced by certain economists that the railroads are headed to oblivion in their competition with other transportation systems, Turney said the railroads can regain the old footing they enjoyed before the appearance of the motor truck and the pipe line.

The railroads, he said, to accomplish this reëstablishment must adapt their services to conform with the needs of the shipper and the passenger. Speed is now more than ever an essential and there must be a pronounced shortening of terminal delays in the shipment of freight, he said.

BANKERS EXTEND TWENTY MILLION AUSTRIAN CREDIT

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The group of American and European banks which advanced a $20,000,000 credit to leading Austrian commercial banks have agreed to extend this credit until Dec. 31, 1932, it was learned in Wall street today.

Under the new "standstill" arrangement, payments by the debtor Austrian banks will be spread over the full year in small amounts. In this way it is expected to maintain the stability of Austria's currency, the schilling, by easing the strain on foreign exchange transfers caused by heavier payments.

American banks hold only a small portion of the $20,000,000 total. Their interest in the new arrangement lies largely in the indication it affords that a similar extension may be arranged for the short term credits extended by banks of this and other countries to German institutions.

Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the Chase National bank, who is now in Berlin representing American banks in their negotiations with the German banking group, is scheduled to sail for New York next week.

United Fruit Reports 1931 Earnings of $6,779,363

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The United Fruit company, one of the first large corporations to make public earnings for 1931, today reported net income for last year of $6,779,363, equal to $2.31 a share. This compares with $12,411,507, or $4.24 a share in 1930. Current assets on Dec. 31 last were $38,911,844, against current liabilities of $8,396,124.

PRODUCE MART TO DEFAULT ON PREPAYMENTS

$17,000,000 Project in Trouble.

BY AL CHASE.

One of Chicago's greatest business projects, the $17,000,000 Chicago Produce market, the successor of the old South Water street market, will default its semi-annual principal payment today on the $8,000,000 first mortgage bond issue, it was announced by S. W. Straus & Co. last night. Sufficient funds, however, have been deposited to meet the semi-annual interest payments also due today, and these will be paid in the usual manner. The issue has been reduced to $6,052,000.

HUGH M'LENNAN.

Straus officials stated last night that a very favorable situation exists in that the mortgagor, the produce merchants and all other interests are favorable to the proposed reorganization. Coöperation of the bondholders is solicited in a letter mailed to them last night by the bondholders' committee, which is composed of active officers of S. W. Straus & Co.

"It is considered that the district provides the best produce market available in any large city in the world and no apprehension is felt as to the satisfactory working out of the reorganization of the first mortgage bond issue," said Charles C. Irwin, chairman of the bondholders' committee and also vice president of S. W. Straus & Co.

Produce Merchants Suffer.

"Explanation of the default is found in the fact that the produce merchants have experienced sharp reverses largely because of the general depression. The store units in the Chicago Produce district were sold to produce merchants on contracts payable over a period of years.

"The produce business constitutes the second largest industry in Chicago, with a normal yearly business of approximately half a billion dollars. The proposed reorganization of the bond issue will prevent the disruption of the Chicago Produce district, now the principal marketing facility of the industry.

"The produce merchants apparently are anxious to coöperate with the bondholders by endeavoring to fulfill their purchase contracts and as mentioned, the mortgagor has made all funds received available for the semi-annual interest payment due Jan. 15. There is, therefore, every reason to believe that a satisfactory readjustment, fair to all, can be worked out."

Completed in 1925.

The mortgagor is the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee under a trust for B. K. Goodman, Hugh McLennan and Albert J. Weisberg. The $17,000,000 successor to Chicago's world famous old South Water street district covers six city blocks between West 14th place, South Racine avenue, South Morgan street, and the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal R. R. right of way. It was formally opened by Mayor Dever and a crowd of notables in August, 1925.

In addition to Mr. Irwin, the other members of the bondholders' committee are: Frederick W. Straus, vice president; J. C. Wright, vice president, and N. H. Oglesbee, treasurer of S. W. Straus & Co.

National Lead Buys Into Doehler Die Casting Co.

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The National Lead company has become a substantial stockholder in the Doehler Die Casting company, it was announced today, through the purchase by the latter company from National of all equipment, inventories, and good will of the Newton Die Casting corporation of New Haven, Conn. As a result of the transaction the National company will be represented on the Doehler board of directors.

Studebaker Reports Rise in Dealer, Retail Sales

It was reported that dealers' orders for the new Studebaker cars were running 30 per cent higher than in December, which was the best final month in four or five years. Retail sales at the Broadway salesroom during the first three days of the automobile show were said to be four times as large as in the like period of the 1931 show.

Expect Radio Corp. to Boost R-K-O in Amusement Field

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—A more intensive effort to develop the position of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation in the amusement field and to strengthen its finances is expected to result from the increased stake Radio Corporation of America now has in R-K-O.

Radio's stock interest in R-K-O is being increased to about 67 per cent of the outstanding stock from its former interest of 9 per cent by its agreement to take up the unsubscribed portion of the $11,600,000 in 6 per cent debentures offered to R-K-O stockholders under the recently adopted recapitalization plan.

Only about $1,600,000 of the debentures were taken by stockholders other than the Radio corporation, leaving approximately $10,000,000 to be taken up by the latter.

Uses Own Funds.

Radio corporation has paid $5,000,000 of that amount to R-K-O out of its own funds without recourse to borrowing, David Sarnoc, president of the Radio corporation, said today.

Only half of the principal amount of the debentures was called for immediate payment. Should R-K-O call for payment of the other half, Radio corporation will be ready to pay it either out of its funds or by arrangement with its associated companies, Mr. Sarnoff declared.

Radio corporation's investment in R-K-O, formerly about $5,000,000, thus will be increased to about $15,000,000 and it will hold about 1,645,000 shares out of the 2,750,000 shares of R-K-O to be outstanding.

Under the refinancing and recapitalization plan, put through to carry R-K-O through a temporary period of financial stringency and to enable it to meet maturing obligations, shareholders who did not subscribe to the debentures lost three-quarters of their class A shares.

Small Percentage Subscribe.

Only a small percentage of the shareholders subscribed, although a majority of the stockholders approved the plan, leaving the Radio corporation to take up most of the debentures.

Eventually the greater investment Radio corporation now has in R-K-O, in which it always has been considered the dominant interest because of the widely scattered small holdings of the class A stock, is expected to lead to a widely scattered effort to build up its strength in the motion picture industry. For the time being, however, efforts more likely will be directed to a program of economy and consolidation to tide it over the present.

UNION TRUST OF BALTIMORE PAYS EXTRA DIVIDEND

Earnings Show a Gain Over 1930.

Directors of Union Trust company of Baltimore yesterday declared the usual extra dividend of 15 cents a share and the regular quarterly dividend of 60 cents a share. Earnings for 1931 were $860,000, against $825,000 in 1930.

The National Battery company declared a dividend of 50 cents on the common stock. Previously the company paid 65 cents quarterly on the common. Canadian Converters Company, Ltd., declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the capital stock, placing the stock on a $2 annual basis. In the two previous quarters quarterly dividends of $1 each were paid.

Defers Action.

The Royal Typewriter company deferred action on its common dividend until the meeting of directors in July. In July, 1930, the semi-annual dividend was reduced from $1.50 to $1. Directors declared the regular semi-annual of $3.50 on the preferred.

Directors of the Allegheny Steel company have deferred action on the monthly dividend of five cents due on the common stock, but voted the regular quarterly of $1.75 on the preferred.

The General Tire and Rubber company declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on the common, placing it on a $1 annual basis, against $3 previously.

An extra dividend of 12½ cents a share and regular quarterly of 25 cents were announced on the stock of New York and Honduras Rosario Mining company. A year ago an extra of 25 cents was declared.

Pays Regular Dividend.

Directors of Pullman Incorporated declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents on common. Three months ago 75 cents was paid and before that the issue was on a $4 annual basis.

National Battery company in a letter to stockholders, which accompanied the current common dividend payment of 50 cents a share, states that it is doubtful if any further common dividends will be paid in this fiscal year which ends June 30. Previously the company paid 65 cents quarterly on the common. The company paid its regular quarterly dividend of 55 cents on the preferred stock on Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 17.

Mexican Debt Moratorium Is Approved by Deputies

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 14.—The Mexican chamber of deputies tonight approved a law proposed by Minister of Finance Montes de Oca declaring a moratorium on the country's foreign debts until the beginning of 1934.

The moratorium sets aside agreements made in 1930 and 1931 between Mexico and an international committee of bankers for payment of the loans. Under these agreements Mexico consented to pay her creditors in dollars in return for sharp reductions in the obligations. As part of the understanding $5,000,000 was deposited at the disposal of foreign bankers.

It is expected that at the conclusion of the moratorium a new agreement will be made according to the capacity of Mexico to pay at that time.

GOVERNMENT ISSUES, RAILS LEAD AS BONDS CONTINUE ADVANCE

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Bonds today recorded their eighth consecutive advance, despite considerable profit taking. Strength in United States government issues and railroad mortgages buoyed up the entire list and even the industrials and utilities, which have been inclined to lag, registered moderate gains generally.

The treasury obligations again led the federal section, five of them advancing more than one point. The registered Liberty 3½s were the only losers, dropping just over one point. Growing interest in the government loans was strengthened during the day by advices from Washington that the treasury did not intend to go into any long term borrowing in the near future, but expected to negotiate its financing through short term securities.

Among corporate loans the railroads exhibited the strongest support. Several of the carrier bonds gained 5 to 12⅝ points while a number added from 2 to 4 points to their previous prices. Convertible issues were the favorites.

Chicago Firm Gets Large Order for Typewriters

The New York board of education has placed what is claimed to be one of the largest single orders for typewriters with the Woodstock Typewriter company of Chicago, according to R. W. Sears, president. The order calls for 1,305 new machines.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—Construction forces managed to keep the home fires burning on the stock exchange today, but that was about all. The advance did not perform nearly so handsomely as formerly. It looked tired.

Excessive profit taking weighed on the leaders and there were indications that more volatile issues were being churned about in an effort to attract a following. Trading slowed down in the afternoon after getting away to a whirlwind start and the turnover was only 2,600,000 shares, and this after a total of 600,000 in the first thirty minutes—the highest for the period since Oct. 7 last.

Although most issues moved into new high ground at one time or another during the day, the close found many of the earlier gains wiped out or substantially reduced. United States Steel common, which has been so conspicuous on the recovery, finished showing a fractional loss on the day after hitting a new high of 46¼ in the first half hour.

Ups and Downs.

Radio, Johns-Manville, Worthington Pump and one or two others of leadership rating likewise finished on the wrong side of the dividing line, while Standard Oil of New Jersey, Consolidated Gas, Western Union, Westinghouse, Bethlehem Steel, Allied Chemical and Dye and others of the first division were barely lucky enough to record fractional gains. American Can, however, continued its advance with a fresh upturn of 1¼ points and an assorted group of second string descriptions rose 2 to 3 points or more.

Railroad shares, true to their newly-adopted custom, raked the cream off the day's constructive developments. The group surged forward quite vigorously in the early dealings, but was slowed up considerably by profit taking toward the last. However, the close found such issues as New York Central, New Haven, Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, and Union Pacific showing gains of 1 to nearly 3 points in spite of the inroads.

Although all carrier issues are still below the low prices reached last

NO CHANGE IN MIDDLE WEST CAPITAL—INSULL

Denies Intention to Revise Dividend.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The latest crop of rumors concerning the plans and policies of the management of the Insull Utility properties was laid at rest yesterday. The report circulated that the Middle West Utilities company would shortly act to reduce the capital stock outstanding and revise the present dividend policy was denied by Samuel Insull, chairman of the board.

The latest report followed closely upon stories that the Insull holding company had obtained a large credit from New York bankers to take care of its immediate financing needs.

Satisfies Management.

Banking negotiations which gave rise to such a variety of rumors were not particularly concerned with the affairs of Middle West Utilities, it is understood, but of the loans of all Insull companies. The meeting which was held in New York and attended by Chicago bankers dealth with the policy of the institutions which are carrying the various loans of the Insull companies. The outcome of the conference was satisfactory to the Insull management, and the present policy of coöperation will be continued, it is learned.

Middle West has comparatively small maturities to meet this year and although conditions in the bond market are not favorable at the present time there has been no reason to believe that the company would have any difficulty in meeting these obligations.

The two Insull investment trusts, Corporation Securities and Insull Utility investments, have large bank loans but no early funded maturities. These firms are receiving sufficient income from dividends on the stocks of the underlying operating companies to meet interest charges on bank loans and funded debt. Corporation Securities has approximately $8,000,000 in notes to retire Sept. 1. No plans have yet been made to meet this maturity. Insull Utility investment has not funded maturity for several years.

Shares Are Strong Again.

The Insull securities were again strong in the trading on the Chicago exchange yesterday. The market generally was higher but realizing in the late dealings shaded the day's quotations.

Trading was active with the volume of transactions expanding to 130,000 shares. Reflecting the strength in the senior obligations, Middle West common advanced to 7 and closed only slightly lower. Insull Utility common was slightly reactionary and finished fractionally lower.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST.

The official forecast for today and tomorrow and yesterday's table of records follow:

Wisconsin—Snow, colder in extreme east portion Friday; Saturday mostly cloudy.

WHEAT MARKET FIRM AT START; FINISH IS WEAK

Report of Sale to Greece Causes Early Rally.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat made a firm start and a weak finish yesterday. Moderate commission house buying on the strength in the stock market and rumors that the farm board had sold 10,000,000 bu of its accumulated holdings to Greece lifted the price around ½c early, with May touching 57⅜c on the upturn. Outside trade, however, failed to follow the bulge, and toward the last there was scattered liquidation which disclosed a lack of aggressive support and prices dropped 1⅛@1⅜c from the high, with the finish at the bottom with net losses of ⅛@⅞c. March closed at 54¾c; May, 56¼c to 56⅝c, and July at 55⅜c to 55½c.

Official announcement was made during the day by the federal farm board that so far there had been no sales of wheat made to Greece. Inability of the board to grant the credit asked tends to restrict business, and instead of the 18,000,000 bu rumored recently, the amount has shrunk to around 1,000,000 bu. However, should the latter grain prove satisfactory there is a possibility of 7,000,000 to 10,000,000 bu being taken all told. Efforts are being made to arrange short term credits for Greece.

Market Still in Rut.

Wheat traders are apparently paying little attention to the stock market as United States Steel at the high point yesterday showed an advance of nearly 11 points from the recent low, while May wheat at the best figure on Thursday was only 3⅝c above the low point of several weeks ago, although 8⅜c above the inside figure of Oct. 5.

Keen competition with the southern hemisphere for the world's wheat trade, with rapidly increasing pressure of Argentine grain in Liverpool, has offset to a large extent the upturn in securities. Liverpool reported Argentina selling the March delivery in the latter market and it gained only ¼c for the day, an advance of 4 points in sterling to $3.45, being partly responsible for the net gain at the last. May gained ½c, closing at 56¼c, while July was up ⅜c at 53c. At the time Liverpool closed May there was ⅞c under Chicago, the widest difference so far.

A somewhat better demand was reported for Manitoba wheat, with sales of 500,000 bu in all positions, and it was understood that some American durum to Italy was included in the total. Winnipeg closed ½c lower, with May at 62½c in Canadian funds. The latter were quoted around 15⅜ per cent discount. Buenos Aires was off ¼c for the day with March 42¼c.

New Low on Corn Futures.

An advance of ½c was witnessed in the corn market early, due to scattered buying on the strength in wheat, but sufficient selling developed against offers to start the price downward and the latter dropped 1⅛@1⅜c from the high to a new low on the current movement. May touched 39⅝c on the break, the lowest figure since Dec. 14 and was only 3c above the inside price of the season. Buying against bids checked the break. Net losses were ⅝@⅞c, with March, 37¾c to 37⅞c; May, 39⅝c to 39¾c, and July, 41c.

While the aggregate purchases of cash corn to arrive from the country are small they were materially in excess of the shipping sales, and the smallness of the latter is impressing the trade. Purchases of 16,000 bu were reported by local handlers, while 5,000 bu were sold to the east.

Oats were dull, and followed corn advancing early, only to react later and close ⅛@⅜c lower, with May, 25⅝c, and July, 25⅛c at the last. Rye finished ⅝c lower with May, 45⅜c to 45½c, and July at 45¾c. Russia shipped 544,000 bu during the last week.

LONDON TRADING PROVES A SHADE LESS CHEERFUL

LONDON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Trading was a shade less cheerful on the stock exchange today. Gilt edged securities moved irregularly and home rails were lower on disappointing traffic reports. Industrials, French favorites, and most foreign bonds moved higher and Indian issues continued to benefit by the improvement in Indian finances which enables their loan to be repaid. Lively dealings in American stocks resulted in good advances, especially the radio and hydro electric issues. Further covering in foreign exchange advanced sterling on New York to $3.44¼.

Paris Market Strong.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The solution of the cabinet crises and the excellent tone in Wall street was reflected on the bourse which showed good advances throughout the list and was mostly attributed to short covering. Today's session was the most active witnessed in many months. The closing was firm.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—SUGAR—RAW was quiet today, but the tone was a little easier, owing to continued liberal offerings. Holders of nearby sugars were not inclined to offer below 3.11c. But refiners showed no interest and the only sale reported was 9,000 bags of Philippines for Jan.-Feb. shipment to an operator at 3.11c, delivered, a decline of 5 points from the last previous sale.

While somewhat irregular, futures were generally lower, reflecting the easier spot market, with final prices not unchanged to 2 points lower. Approximate sales were 18,250 tons. Prices follow:

FOREIGNERS BUY LARD

Good buying of lard futures early yesterday was attributed to foreigners and carried prices higher. Selling later by packers filled up the demand but the close was at net gains of 2½ to 7½c. Liverpool was 6d higher for spot and 1s 3d to 1s 6d higher for futures. Bellies were 5@7½c higher. Exports of lard were 345,000 lbs. Hog receipts were lower, with arrivals larger than a week ago, but less than last year. Prices follow:

HIDE FUTURES

Prices in hide futures on the New York Hide exchange advanced, closing 5 to 15 points higher. Total sales 960,000 lbs.

The New York Hide exchange preliminary shoe production estimates show that in direct contrast to the usual seasonal decline in the output of footwear, the production registered a marked and unusual increase during December, when 19,200,000 pairs were manufactured, against 18,470,000 pairs in November and an increase of about 10 per cent over December, 1930.

The upturn in production last month brought the total for the year to 315,836,000 pairs, or 3.8 per cent, over the output during 1930, regardless of the fact that production during the first two months of last year was appreciably below the corresponding months in 1930.

SHEEP—Fed western lambs	$5.75@ 6.60
One month ago	4.50@ 5.50
One year ago	6.75@ 8.40
Top yesterday, $6.60; average, $5.75.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 2,000; hogs, 25,000; sheep, 14,000.

Virtually all grades and classes of live stock started out on a lower price scale yesterday, but action in hogs and lambs was better late in the day and some of the loss was recovered. The extreme top price for hogs at $4.15 equaled the lowest since 1899, while a new bottom was established by the average when that price went down to $3.95, the first time it has been "under the hill" in more than 32 years.

The influence of the stagnant wholesale trade for fresh pork was more impressive as trading opened and smaller houses dipped in cautiously for limited numbers during the first rounds.

Stimulates Late Buying.

Yesterday's receipts were augmented by a holdover of 11,000 from the preceding session and support was lacking until near the close when reports of snowstorms and subzero weather in the west stimulated buying in anticipation of a possible letup in receipts and a reaction in the wholesale trade before the end of the week. A substantial reduction in supplies is indicated for today, with five of the leading market centers reporting only 55,500 against 96,600 the previous Thursday. Decreases of as much as 50@55 per cent were cited at some points farthest west.

"Seasonable weather is all that is necessary to relieve the congestion in the wholesale meat trade" was the remark made by one of the leaders in the market yesterday. Demand for meat, pork in particular, has been tapering off gradually since the opening of the week. Just the possibility of a drop in temperatures affected a better clearance for hogs yesterday.

March Hogs Decline.

The hog futures trade took a reactionary turn yesterday and contracts that previously this week had scored gains sagged 25c on a rather lifeless session. March hogs lost most, light for that month carrying bids of $4.50, while mediums were bid $4.75. Some March heavies were offered at $5.25, May lights at the close were bid up to $5.00.

In spite of the abbreviated cattle receipts yesterday the market dragged along slowly all day and came almost to a standstill before the close, buyers leaving a fair number without reasonable bids. Drastic reductions in the wholesale price of dressed beef curbed buying soon after the unsatisfactory opening. Eastern points suffered most in yesterday's cutting of wholesale quotations. The cattle trade has performed poorly since the opening of the week and the rank and file of steers are selling 50c to $1.00 lower than a week ago. Cheaper kinds, those selling under $5.00, are off only 25c for the week, while exceptionally well finished steers and yearlings are finishing steady. Bulls have lost 25@40c since a week ago, while calves are strong to 25c higher. No sales of much consequence have been reported in the hide market and support from that source has been negligent for several weeks. No highly finished cattle were offered yesterday, the best here selling at $9.75. They averaged 1,382 lbs. The bulk of cattle so far this week have changed hands within a range of $5.35@8.50, comparable to $5.30@9.10 a week ago.

Lambs Recover Loss.

After being unable to maintain a steady price level on weak opening rounds today, the lamb market turned active later and finished as high as Wednesday's best time and only 25@35c under the highest spot in the last three months. Spirited bidding featured the late trade, a marked contrast to the slow start, with larger houses most aggressive. Packers and shippers paid upward to $6.50@6.60 in face of declining wholesale prices, while some of the smaller interests that were holding back in hopes of making a saving at the close were left short. Reports of a big decrease in supplies for today added zest to late buying. Five points expect only 33,700 for today against 52,500 the previous Friday.

RAW SILK.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—SILK—Raw futures closed strong; sales, 1,450 bales; March, $1.87@1.88; May, $1.88@1.90; July, $1.90; open market quotations [sixty day basis], Shanghai steam extra B, $2.60; Canton double extra A, 14-16s, $1.80; Japanese crack double extra, $2.10.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat traders are inclined to the buying side on breaks so long as the stock market continues upward. There is a feeling in some quarters that the stocks have about run their course and are due for a setback. Purchases of large quantities of cash wheat by governments on time from the federal farm board are not regarded as particularly bullish, in view of uncertainty as to the disposition on the part of buyers to eventually make good. Selling of September and buying of May puzzled traders. Those who are bullish expressed the belief that July was the best investment owing to crop uncertainties.

Sentiment in corn remains bearish. Prices, while bearish, are based largely on the poor cash demand. Bulges, it is said, are due to short covering, as the market gets oversold on breaks.

It is understood that Italy is picking up durum wheat in the United States market. As supplies are getting short higher prices are being secured.

Snow over a good part of Kansas and Nebraska, particularly the western sections, is regarded as highly beneficial to the crop. Moisture in eastern Kansas is considered more than ample for current needs.

PRODUCE MARKETS

A firmer undertone prevailed in the butter market and prices were advanced ½c. Receipts, 5,677 tubs. Fresh eggs were steady to ½c lower. Receipts, 6,455 cases. Live hens were off ½c and leghorn hens, 1c. Receipts, 1 car and 27 trucks. Potatoes steady. Receipts, 86 cars with 175 cars on team track.

BUTTER FUTURES LOWER

Butter futures eased at the close on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, final sales being ½@1½c lower, an early gain being lost. Refrigerator eggs closed unchanged. January fresh graded final sales were ¼c higher but offerings being ½c lower with no buyers at the close. Statistical news in butter was somewhat bearish, the four markets reporting a net inward movement of supplies and production reports continuing to show gains. Support was moderate at the opening but died later. Egg storage news was somewhat improved but collections showed rapid increases and continued unsettled state of the spot market caused lax support of the futures. Sales: Butter, 51 cars; eggs, 11 cars. Deliveries: Butter, 4 cars; eggs, 5 cars. Prices follow:

MRS. W. H. WRIGHT.

The council is composed of eleven suburban realty boards. These are the Berwyn-Cicero board, the Chicago Heights board, Du Page county board, Evanston board, La Grange board, Libertyville-Mundelein board, Maywood board, North Shore board, Oak Park board, Park Ridge board and the Waukegan-North Chicago board. Presidents of these local boards made reports and Oscar W. Rosenthal, president of the Construction Investment trust, gave an address on "Making Real Estate More Salable."

Buys Loop Leasehold.

County records yesterday disclosed the sale of the ninety-nine year leasehold estate and six story garage building at 175-177 West Monroe street, just west of the State Bank building, by the Monroe-at-La Salle Garage, Inc., to the Monroe-La Salle Building corporation, for an undisclosed consideration. The building, which accommodates 300 cars, was then leased back to Benjamin D. Kissell, president of the lessor corporation, who will operate it for the lessees for a ten year term at a reported $2,500 per month, or $30,000 annually.

According to Delta I. Jarrett of Deming, Jarrett & Mulfinger, attorneys, the leasing corporation is composed of some of the interests identified with the l
